never made his election either for the one or the other of those modes of proceeding, and therefore it is quite clear that the amount of the purchase-money never was ascertained by either of the modes which were pointed out. It has been suggested that that was immaterial; for it was in the power of the court to ascertain it; or that some other step might be taken different from that which the parties stipulated as the mode of ascertaining what the amount of the purchase money should be. I confess that upon principle, as well as upon all the authorities, the court cannot take upon itself to do so. If there is an agreement that the price shall be that which is to be ascertained upon a fair valuation, then the court may interfere. All the authorities—the cases of Milnes v. Gery, 14 Ves. 400; Blundell v. Brettargh, 17 Ves. 232; and Gourlay v. Duke of Somerset—enunciate, the proposition in the strongest language, that where the parties have stipulated that the price shall be ascertained—in Blundell v. Brettargh it was by a particular arbitrator; in Milnes v. Gery, it was not by a particular arbitrator, but by arbitration generally—that in such cases, if the arbitration does not proceed and the price be so ascertained according to the mode in which the parties have stipulated, this court has no right to make a different contract than that which the parties have entered into, and ascertain it for them in some different mode. That being so, it appears to me to put an end to this case; because the stipulation was that the price—putting it in the most favourable way for the plaintiff—should be ascertained by arbitration. The arbitrator was to proceed in a particular mode; he never was named during the life of one of the parties, during whose lives the contract must have been enforced; they never took any steps to ascertain that, and without ascertaining it the contract could not be made available. There is this difficulty here. The price was to be ascertained "either by arbitration or by a jury;" that is, by the lands clauses jury—which was the meaning of the words, "or by a jury." What else could they mean? It shall either be ascertained by contract, which means arbitration, or by a proceeding in invitum. The parties might not object to a jury; but a jury was the machinery which was in the hands and under the sole control of the defendants. They might insist upon having the price ascertained by that means, quite independent of the contract on the part of Sir Charles Morgan and his son. It was idle to say, You shall have the land. The company was entitled to it, and in truth such parts were pointed out as it wished to have. They said, If the price to be given for them can be settled by contract or by arrangement, so let it be; if not, we must proceed to take it in the mode in which the Legislature has authorised us to take it, whether you consent, or whether you do not. This, therefore, brings us to this important consideration. The purchasers in this case are not rendering the interference of this court important in aid of the defective execution of the powers. The court interferes, because it is unjust on a purchaser not to give him the benefit of his contract; but here it is perfectly indifferent to the company, who are the vendors; whether the court interferes or not, they are certainly entitled to the land: they are entitled to take it by one of the alternative modes fixed as the method of ascertaining the value, though not entitled to insist on the other. What they say therefore, is this—having the right to take land, we mean to take it: if you choose to have the value ascertained by arbitration, it shall be done; if not, we shall proceed to a jury. That being so, it seems to me—even if there had been much more amounting to a contract than I can discover upon the face of the evidence of what took place in writing, or the parol evidence—that we should be going much further than any case has yet gone, if we were to say that parties who have the power of defeating those in remainder shall be allowed to do so, not for the benefit of the purchaser, but of themselves as put in contradiction to the interests of those whose rights the exercise of the power was to defeat. I am of opinion therefore, that the decision of the V. C. was correct.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—It is essential to the success of the plaintiff upon this appeal, that a binding and enforceable contract, a contract at least in equity binding, and in equity enforceable, was made between himself and his deceased father, on the one hand, and the railway company on the other; whether necessarily a written agreement I decline saying; for the evidence is very far from satisfying me that there was any contract, except indeed a contract formed only by the Railway Acts—an exception which substantially for every present purpose is no exception at all. As to a portion of the lands in question, neither was any price put, nor, according to my view of the evidence, was any mode of fixing it provided in any sense. And with regard to the expression "arbitration or a jury," the present case falls far short of Gregory v. Mighill. Had the railway company filed a bill during the late Sir Charles Morgan's life, against him and the present plaintiff for specific performance, and they had resisted the decree and required the bill to be dismissed, could a decree have been made against them upon the footing of a contract either written, or in part performed? I am of opinion certainly not; for, as I view the matter, it is wholly uncertain what the words "arbitration or a jury" mean. If they are to be construed as explained by the Railway Acts, then it would be necessarily in the power, I suppose, of the railway company, in case of default on the vendor's part, to appoint an arbitrator for them. Did they intend this? I conceive not. What jury? how to be obtained? or chosen? or appointed? The words are, I repeat, to my mind inexplicable. I am sorry to say that I think the decree right; probably, not alone on the ground I have mentioned, though I consider that ground sufficient.

Lord Justice TURNER.—I have already given my opinion upon this case, after having very carefully examined all the evidence in it; and it is not necessary for me to say more than that I entirely concur in the judgment which has been given.

Appeal dismissed.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Reported by OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES).

IN BANKRUPTCY.

Monday, November 8.

Ex parte COPELAND, re COPELAND, a bankrupt.

Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, sect. 201—Loss on purchase of railway shares, whether within Act.

A bankrupt having lost within a year next preceding the petition of adjudication, by the purchase of railway stock, (the original contract being carried over by means of a continuation contract,) a sum without the broker's commission less than 200l., but with it more than 200l.;

Held, to be disentitled under the 201st section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, to a certificate of conformity.

Semble, also per Lord Cranworth, that the transaction was a gaming or wagering within the first clause of the section.

Under that section, although the word "contract" only is used, it will be held to include the plural word "contracts," so as to bring a loss arising from several contracts, amounting in the whole to 200l., within the meaning of the statute.

Semble, that railway shares, as distinguished from railway stock, are within the meaning of the 201st section, disentitling a bankrupt to a certificate of conformity who has lost, within a certain period, 200l. by any contract for the purchase or sale of any Government or other stock.

The bankrupt in this case presented an appeal from the decision of the Commissioner, refusing him his certificate of conformity under the 201st section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, on the ground of his having lost 200*l.* within a year next preceding the filing of the petition for adjudication, by a contract for the purchase of railway stock, in which the contract was not to be performed within one week after the contract. The 201st section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, is as follows: "That no bankrupt shall be entitled to a certificate of conformity under this Act, and any such certificate, if allowed, shall be void, if such bankrupt shall have lost by any sort of gaming or wagering in one day twenty pounds, or within one year next preceding the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, two hundred pounds; or if he shall, within one year next preceding the issuing of the fiat, or the filing of such petition, have lost two hundred pounds by any contract for the purchase or sale of any Government or other stock, where such contract was not to be performed within one week after the contract, or where the stock bought or sold was not actually transferred or delivered in pursuance of such contract; or, if such bankrupt shall, after an act of bankruptcy, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, or with intent to defeat the object of this or any other statute relating to bankrupts, have parted with, concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, or caused to be concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, any of his books, papers, writings, or securities, or made or been privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document, with intent to defraud his creditors, or shall have concealed any part of his property; or if any person having proved a false debt under the bankruptcy, such bankrupt being privy thereto, or afterwards knowing the same, shall not have disclosed the same to his assignees within one month after such knowledge."

The facts of the case are briefly these. On the 27th Feb. 1851, the bankrupt contracted for the purchase of 60 shares in the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company, upon which 100*l.* had been paid up, which were described in the broker's notes as shares on which 100*l.* had been paid up, but in his books of account as stock of the railway company. In the year 1850, a resolution was passed at a half-yearly meeting of the shareholders, that, agreeably to the Act of incorporation of the company and the provisions of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, such of the shares of the capital of the company as were paid up should be converted into capital stock of the company, to be denominated consolidated stock. On the 26th April 1851, the contract was carried over by a continuation contract by which the time for payment of the purchase money was extended, in consideration for which the bankrupt paid a commission to the broker, called contango. On the 24th May following, the bankrupt sold the shares and lost by the transaction, as was estimated by the assignees, the sum of 390*l.* including therein the sum of 7*l.* 10*s.* being the amount of the commission. The bankrupt, however, contended that a sum of 202*l.* 10*s.* only, including the commission, had been lost by him in the transaction. On the 27th March 1852 the petition of adjudication was filed.

J. Russell and Martindale, for the bankrupt, in support of the appeal, argued, first, that deducting the commission of 7*l.* 10*s.* from the 202*l.* 10*s.*, the bankrupt would have lost under 200*l.* and would not therefore come within the 201st section. Secondly, the loss arose out of two contracts, the original and the continuation contract, the separate loss under each of which would not amount to 200*l.* Thirdly, that the contract was not within the statute, as it was entered into twelve months before the bankruptcy. Fourthly, that it was not shown by the assignees that the subject-matter of the contract which the bankrupt contended was railway shares and not "stock" was within the meaning of the Act, which particularised "Government or other stock."

Bacon and Selwyn for the assignees, the respondents, urged that the word "contract" in the 201st section included the plural word "contracts," and that the time at which the loss arose was at the time of the sale. Moreover that after this resolution passed at the meeting of the shareholders, the railway shares must be presumed to be stock, unless the bankrupt showed to the contrary, which he had not, and in fact was not able to do. They cited and commented on Ex parte Matheson, 1 De G. M. & G. 446.

Martindale, in reply.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH.—The first question is whether, assuming for the present that the contract complained of was for the purchase of stock within the Act, there has been a loss thereon within the year of 200*l.* and upwards. There is no doubt that there has been such a loss of 202*l.* 10*s.* upon the transaction if, as part of the loss, is to be included the commission paid on the contract; and we are clearly of opinion that the commission must be included as part of the necessary costs of accomplishing the contract. If, in carrying the contract into execution, the necessary expense is added to the loss otherwise occasioned, the gross amount is the measure of the loss. That amount is at least 202*l.* 10*s.*, which but slightly exceeds the amount fixed by the Act; but if it does exceed that amount by the smallest fraction, that is sufficient, not only to justify what the Commissioner has done, but to make it his positive duty so to act. The next question is, whether the transaction amounts to a contract within the meaning of the statute. One objection made by the petitioner is, that the contract was not one, but that the loss was occasioned by different contracts, namely, an original contract, with a subsequent renewal thereof. I see nothing in that objection, for I think the word "contract" used in the statute includes "contracts." It would be absurd to impute such carelessness to the Legislature as to leave the law open to be defeated by merely splitting the transaction. Upon that, however, it is unnecessary to speculate; for by the interpretation clause of the Act it is provided that words in the singular number are to include the plural; but even if there had been no such clause, it would be absurd to construe the language otherwise than to hold that it includes contracts. That being so, the next question is, whether this is "Government or other stock" within the meaning of the section. It is perfectly clear that the subject-matter of the contract was stock, and not shares—if there be a distinction. True it is that it is described in the broker's notes as shares upon which 100*l.* had been paid. That, however, is capable of easy explanation. The beneficial interest in this company, as in all others, while the affair is in progress, goes in the form of shares, on which calls are from time to time made, while there is only part of the capital paid up. When, however, the whole capital has been paid up, then it becomes unimportant that the beneficial interest should remain in the form of shares. It may be, and in most cases will be, convenient to the holder, and to the company also, that it should be converted into stock; the difference being merely that, when converted into stock, it becomes capable of easier subdivision than while in the form of shares. That being the usual course, we find that on a certain date in Feb. 1850, the shares having been all paid up—that is to say, with the exception of some which by default had not been paid up, but the full amount of calls having been made upon all—the resolution came to was, that the shares might be now converted into stock. I think the meaning of that necessarily is, that those which were then paid up should be instanter converted; and that, as to the others, the shareholder, on paying up the remainder, might have his converted into stock. That being so, what is sold here is stock or shares, on which the whole 100*l.* has been paid up. It is indifferent then whether the purchase is of a share on which 100*l.* has been paid, or of 100*l.* stock. That is so immediately after the shares have been converted into stock if not before. What this gentleman dealt in, was obviously stock of the company. That is proved by this,—that it never occurred to the parties to think of the difference between one state and the other. The broker in his account calls it stock. The only circumstance calculated to raise a doubt is, that in the bought and sold notes the subject-matter of the contract is described as shares upon which 100*l.* has been paid up. The reason of this, however is, that these notes are prepared in the shape of a printed form, adopted in all railway companies, and adapted to all shares, whether fully paid up or not; therefore it is called a share upon which 100*l.* has been paid up, instead of 100*l.* stock. But it is abundantly clear that this gentleman understood that he was purchasing stock, and in truth there was nothing else but stock that he could purchase. The broker calls it stock, and it was stock no doubt. If that is so, this case is governed by that of Ex parte Mathews, where it was held that railway stock was clearly "other stock," within the meaning of the Act of Parliament. On the grounds, therefore, that "contract" in the Act includes "contracts;" that the loss was of the amount, and practically within the period mentioned in the Act; and that the subject-matter of such contract was railway stock,—it is clear that the Commissioner was right. I go merely upon that narrow ground; but, speaking for myself, I do not suppose that if this had been shares as distinguished from stock, I should have decided otherwise than I have decided. It is difficult to see such distinction between the two sorts of misconduct, so as to take one out of the language of the Act. Moreover, though it is unnecessary to rely upon it as a ground of my decision, I am strongly inclined to think that this transaction was a sort of gaming or wagering within the prior clause of the 201st section of the Act.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—Assuming merely the legal question upon the construction of section 201 to be with the bankrupt, and not imputing to him unfairness or absence of honesty, as those words are used and understood in private life, I still doubt very much, to say the least of it, whether the dealing and conduct of this gentleman have been of such a nature as possibly to authorise a certificate. So much in passing. I will take the question as it arises on the narrow and restrictive view of the construction of section 201. As to that, if there is a distinction, a substantial distinction, which ought for the present purpose to weigh between railway stock and railway shares, my opinion upon the evidence before the Commissioner, and upon the additional matter which I have heard to-day, is, that the property in question, on which a loss has taken place within a year, was railway stock, as distinguishable from shares, and thought, intended, and known by the bankrupt to be so. Let me assume that, however, to be in the bankrupt's favour, and then I will say, that on the merely legal question, still I am not satisfied that the bankrupt is free from the operation of section 201 of the statute. The words of the section are, "Government or other stock;" but the Act of Parliament is one which is within and forms part of the same system with the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, though that Act is now repealed. The language of section 12 of that Act is, "shall, within one year before the bankruptcy, have lost the sum of 100*l.* by one or more contracts for the purchase, sale, refusal, or delivery of any part or parts, share or shares of any Government or public funds or securities." Now if there had been such a thing as railway stock, distinguishable as it now is distinguished from railway shares, I am not by any means satisfied that, had such Act of Geo. 2 continued in force, railway shares would not have been stock within the meaning of that statute; and, upon a question of construction arising upon a subsequent statute on the same branch of the law, it is perfectly legitimate to use the former Act, though repealed. It is not necessary, however, to decide that question, and therefore I reserve myself upon it, merely saying that, according to the present inclination of my opinion, if the subject-matter of the contract had been shares, the bankrupt is still within the operation of sect. 201, properly construed in the manner applicable to all statutes, namely, the manner of suppressing the mischief and advancing the remedy. I am of opinion also that, if there is a distinction between railway stock and railway shares, the matter here in question was railway stock, as distinguished from railway shares, and that it was so intended and known to be by the bankrupt. I am of opinion that the decision of the learned Commissioner was plainly right.

BLAKEMORE v. DUDAIN.

Costs, security for—Plaintiff out of jurisdiction—plaintiff going to reside abroad for a purpose which is likely to keep him there for such a length of time that there is no reasonable probability that he will be forthcoming when the defendant may have to call upon him to pay the costs of the suit, may be required to give security for costs pending the suit.

This was an appeal from the order of the M.R. directing that the plaintiff, who was out of the jurisdiction, should give security for costs, and that in the meantime all further proceedings in the suit should be stayed. In support of the application at the Rolls for the plaintiff to give security, affidavits had been filed, from which it appeared that, when the suit was instituted in March 1850, the plaintiff resided in London, at Queen's-road, Regent's-park; that he afterwards went to lodgings in Jermyn-street, and afterwards to Chiswick. The plaintiff had presented a petition to the Court of Bankruptcy unsuccessfully, under the creditor and debtor arrangement clauses of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849. In the meantime the defendant and persons employed by him, after various attempts, were unsuccessful in finding out the plaintiff. The plaintiff, however, some months after, returned to England, and took up his residence at Feltham Cottages, and then went to lodge at the same place at Jermyn-street, and then at Vauxhall. About the end of May 1852 the plaintiff left England, and arrived at Jersey on the 3rd June, where he still continued to reside. On the 16th July notice of motion for security was given for the 29th July to the plaintiff's solicitor. An affidavit was filed by the plaintiff's solicitor in opposition to the motion, which, without denying the facts appearing in the affidavits filed in support of the application, stated merely that the plaintiff had gone to Jersey to visit his sister, and that he believed it not to be his intention to reside there permanently, inasmuch as he, the deponent, had seen a letter, written by the plaintiff, in which he expressed an intention to return shortly to London.

Elderton for the appellant, contended that it had not been sufficiently shown that the plaintiff intended permanently to reside abroad; and that the mere fact of his having gone out of the jurisdiction was not sufficient, according to the authorities, to render it justifiable for the court to require the plaintiff to find security for costs: (Hoby v. Hitchcock, 5 Ves. 699.)

Smythe for the defendant, relied upon the various circumstances under which the plaintiff went abroad, his constantly keeping out of the way of the defendant, and his embarrassments, as showing that his residence abroad was likely to be of a permanent character. [Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—The plaintiff arrived in Jersey early in June, and has been there ever since. It is now November, and although the notice of motion was given for July last, it is not irregular nor unjust to look at subsequent events for the purpose of assisting ourselves in arriving at a just conclusion as to the intention of an act that took place before.] This case clearly is one which comes strictly within the rule which requires security to be given (Weeks v. Cole, 14 Ves. 518); and in all probability the defendant would never be able to get his costs unless the plaintiff was now compelled to give security for them.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH.—It is a proposition upon which there cannot be a doubt, that a person will not be allowed to institute a suit who is permanently resident abroad, without giving security for costs; and the same rule holds where a plaintiff goes abroad with the intention of permanently residing there. Whenever security is asked for, the question arises whether the party is resident abroad or not; and the answer to that question depends in each case upon the interpretation to be put upon the phrase "resident or permanently resident abroad." If it is imagined to mean that in no case is a person to give security for costs unless it is shown that he intends to end his days abroad, I entirely dissent from such an interpretation. That is not the meaning of the phrase. A party goes to reside abroad within the meaning of the rule who goes for a purpose which is likely to keep him abroad for such a length of time that there is no reasonable probability that he will be forthcoming when the defendant may have to call upon him to pay costs in the suit. A question of this sort cannot be easily dealt with by laying down a general rule, it being impossible to define the extent of circumstances necessary in every case to bring it within the rule. In the report of the case before Lord Loughborough (Hoby v. Hitchcock, 5 Ves. 699) all that appears is, that the party had gone on a voyage to the West Indies, and there was no evidence, one way or the other, as to his intention to return. Lord Loughborough, inferring, I presume, that the party had gone merely with the temporary object of seeing to his affairs, and that he intended shortly to return, refused to order security. So courts of common law constantly refuse to require security to be given where the absence abroad of the party appears to be for a purpose only temporary. It is obvious that, considering the modern facilities for travelling, such orders, if made in those cases, would be a gross oppression. The party must go abroad under circumstances rendering it highly improbable that he can return within the time when he is likely to be called upon for costs in the suit. If, for instance, it were shown that he had gone abroad for some object which would keep him there for ten years, he would probably be held to be obnoxious to the rule. The question in the case now before us is, whether the plaintiff has gone to Jersey under circumstances bringing him within the rule. I think he must be held to have done so. Being evidently in embarrassment, he went from one house to another, and was not forthcoming when sought for. He left for Jersey in May, and arrived there on the 3rd June. An application was then proposed to be made by the defendant for security for costs. On July 16, notice of motion for this purpose was given for July 29. In support of that motion a statement is made in the defendant's affidavit to the effect that he believed the plaintiff was resident in Jersey. To this no answer was given by the plaintiff during the thirteen days' interval between the notice and the motion, and during which there was ample time to communicate that statement to the plaintiff at Jersey, and to obtain from him an affidavit contradicting it if he could. That step, however, was not taken; but the solicitor in London of the plaintiff merely states in his affidavit, filed in opposition to the motion, that he believes it not to be the intention of the plaintiff permanently to reside at Jersey, because he has seen a letter written by him (which, however, is not produced), in which he says he intends to return to England. That is not a satisfactory way of surmounting a difficulty which it would have been so easy to clear up by means of a direct communication with the plaintiff at Jersey. I am far from thinking that the evidence of the defendant was answerable on July 29; but, as my learned brother has suggested, if the evidence is to be discussed some months afterwards, we may, in dealing with it, regard the circumstances of the case as they now exist. Now it is quite clear that the question, whether the plaintiff was resident in Jersey on July 29, must be answered in the affirmative.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—It is not suggested that this gentleman is in any public service, civil or military. He left London to go to Jersey in May; he arrived there early in June; we are now in November; and there is no evidence that in the interval he has ever been at any other place. I am of opinion that, within the meaning of the rule, there has been a permanent change of residence to a place out of the jurisdiction.

Appeal dismissed with costs.

Settlement—Trust for sale—Mortgage.

An estate was conveyed to trustees in trust "as and when it should seem to them meet to sell and dispose of the said hereditaments and premises," and to pay and apply the proceeds of the sale to purposes which exhausted the entire:

Held, that such a trust authorised a sale only, and not a mortgage of the premises.

The suit being for foreclosure of a mortgage created by the trustees under the trust to sell, a demurrer was put in on the ground that the trust did not authorise a mortgage, and it was allowed; but the plaintiff was nevertheless allowed to amend his bill for the purpose of establishing a lien on the interest in the property of a cestui que trust, who was a party to the deed.

By marriage articles dated 26th Sept. 1832, made in contemplation of a marriage between the defendant Frederick Cooper and Hannah Steward, it was agreed that certain property including an estate called the Spennells estate, in the county of Worcester, to which Hannah Steward was entitled under the will of her former husband, should be conveyed and assured to the use of John Cole, Thomas Cooper, and James White, and their heirs, upon trust that they and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs and assigns of such survivors, "should, as and when it should seem to them meet, sell and dispose of the said hereditaments and premises" in manner therein mentioned; and should by and out of the moneys to arise from such sale or sales in the first place pay and discharge the costs and expenses of such sale or sales; and should in the next place, by and out of the same, levy, raise, and pay to the several persons entitled to receive the same, such sum or sums of money as should be necessary to pay off the several debts then due by the said Hannah Steward, or to pay off any sum or sums of money which should have been borrowed to pay and apply in payment of the same debts, provided that the sum or sums so to be raised and applied should not exceed 150*l.*; and should also levy and raise such a sum of money, not exceeding 100*l.*, as the said Frederick Cooper should by writing direct or require, and pay the same to him, his executors, administrators, or assigns, for his and their own use; and, subject to the payment of the several sums thereinbefore mentioned, should lay out and invest all the residue of the money to arise from such sale or sales as therein mentioned, and should stand possessed thereof upon trust for Hannah Steward during her life, and, after her decease, upon trust to pay one equal moiety to the said Frederick Cooper during his life, and, subject and without prejudice to the interest for life of the said Frederick Cooper in one moiety, should stand possessed of the said trust-moneys, funds, and securities, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, upon trusts which did not take effect: and in case there should be no child of the intended marriage (an event which happened), upon such trusts, and for such intents and purposes as the said Hannah should by her will, executed as therein mentioned, notwithstanding coverture, direct or appoint; and, in default thereof, upon certain trusts therein mentioned. The marriage took effect soon after; and by indentures of lease and release of 22nd and 23th June 1838 the estates were conveyed to trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. Mrs. Cooper, by her will, dated 24th July 1854, and made in pursuance of the power reserved to her, directed that in case of failure of issue of the marriage (which happened), the trust funds directed by the settlement to be invested should be transferred into the names of her husband, the said Frederick Cooper, John Cole (since deceased), and Richard Groom, and she directed that they should, by and out of the said trust moneys, stocks, funds, funds, and securities, levy and raise the sum of 2000*l.* for her husband, Frederick Cooper, and 100*l.* for John Cole, and also certain other sums therein mentioned; and the testatrix appointed the residue among five of her relations in equal shares. Mrs. Cooper died without issue in 1857, leaving her husband her surviving. The property comprised in the settlement was never sold under the trusts for sale; but by indenture, bearing date the 4th June 1860, the Spencelin estate was demised by the trustees of the settlement and of Mrs. Cooper's will to Henry Ottewmore for a term of 500 years, by way of mortgage to secure the repayment of 3100*l.* borrowed to satisfy the legacy of 100*l.* to John Cole and the balance then due to Frederick Cooper in respect of the two sums of 1000*l.* and 2000*l.* to which he was entitled respectively under the marriage settlement and his wife's will. On the 21st June 1841 the mortgage was conveyed to Caroline Page, who died on the 28th July 1860, having appointed the plaintiff, Matilda Page, her executrix. Matilda Page now filed her bill against the trustees and the parties beneficially interested under Mrs. Cooper's will, to enforce payment of the mortgage debt or for foreclosure in the usual way. To this bill a demurrer was put in by some of the defendants, on the ground that the marriage settlement did not authorise a mortgage, but only a conversion out and out; and the demurrer now came on to be argued.

Roupell and Haynes, for the demurrer, contended that it was now the settled rule of the court that a power of sale does not authorise a mortgage, unless where the power is for raising a particular charge, and the estate is settled or devised subject to that charge, in which case a mortgage will be supported as a conditional sale: (Stroughill v. Anstey, 1 De Gex, Mac. & G. 635.) But here the power is to sell out and out, and has an object beyond raising a particular charge, and does not, therefore, authorise a mortgage. The plaintiff, therefore, is entitled to no relief on this bill. As far as concerns Frederick Cooper's interest, it is true she has a lien on the trust funds to that extent, as he joined in the mortgage, but she cannot enforce that claim by the present bill.

R. Palmer and C. S. Law, contrà.—It is clear on the face of the deed that there are grounds for contending that the settlor intended the power to include a mortgage as well as a sale. It is a trust for sale out and out, so that some time or other it must take place; but there is no intention of making it obligatory on the trustees to sell immediately for the purpose of raising, and the settlor, foreseeing that there might not be sufficient money for the purposes required, uses the words, "as and when to them it shall seem meet." And to raise the money they might mortgage, and not injure the property by selling by piecemeal. If, however, the claimant cannot have the relief prayed, she ought to be allowed to amend, and claim a lien on the trust funds when raised.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—I am of opinion that the power of sale in the marriage settlement does not authorise a mortgage. The trust was clearly one for conversion out and out, and not intended for the performance of a particular trust, with a direction to sell for that purpose, but it is a trust to sell out and out, and pay the proceeds on certain trusts. The case comes within the distinction taken by Lord St. Leonards in Stroughill v. Anstey, and is not a case for raising a particular charge, and a particular power for that purpose, but an absolute conveyance. I must therefore allow the demurrer; but the question is whether, the plaintiff having prayed for relief by foreclosure, she can now be allowed to amend her bill, so as to get relief which she cannot get in the form of a foreclosure.

Roupell.—The claim of the plaintiff is put upon her right as mortgagee; and how could any amendment be made, except by leaving out the whole bill and making another case?

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—I must give leave to amend in a reasonable time, and the plaintiff must pay the costs of the demurrer.

FORD v. LORD CAVENDISH.

Practice—Foreclosure suit—Disclaimer by a defendant, a puisne incumbrancer—Costs.

A judgment creditor, made defendant to a foreclosure suit, who had not before the institution of the suit offered to release his claim, but by his answer disclaimed, is not entitled to his costs from the plaintiff.

The plaintiff, a second mortgagee, filed his bill against the first mortgagee (who had sold under a power of sale), to obtain payment of his debt out of any surplus proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises, after satisfaction of the debt of the first mortgagee, and to foreclose the puisne incumbrancers.

A judgment creditor, made a defendant to the suit, put in an answer and disclaimer, whereby he alleged that he did not then claim, nor ever had claimed, any interest in the mortgaged premises, and that no application had been made to him to disclaim before the filing of the bill.

At the hearing of the cause,

H. R. E. Forster, for the disclaiming defendant, asked to be dismissed with costs, to be paid by the plaintiff, and added to his debt. He relied on Silcock v. Roymon, 2 Yo. & Coll. C. C. 376; Ablett v. Edwards, 10 Sim. 568 (n.); and a case of Gurney v. Jackson, decided by Stuart, V. C. on the 9th Dec. last (reported in the Weekly Reporter, p. 93), upon a review of all the cases. He contended that those cases restored the old practice, which was, as Knight, V. C. said, in Oberly v. Jenkins, 2 Yo. & Coll. C. C. 548, to give a puisne incumbrancer, who disclaimed, his costs.

Willcock and Southgate, for the plaintiff, contended that Silcock v. Roymon, and Gurney v. Jackson, were at variance with all the other recent decisions; and that, according to the rule settled by these cases, the defendant was not entitled to his costs: (Buchanan v. Greenway, 11 Ben. 58; Oberly v. Jenkins, 2 Yo. & Coll. C. C. 548.) In Locke v. Lomax, 15 Jur. 162, where costs were given to defendants who disclaimed, they stated in their answer that they had offered, before the filing of the bill, to disclaim their interest (if any) in the subject-matter of the suit, which offer had been declined by the plaintiffs. Here the defendant's claim was on record at the time of the institution of the suit, so that he could not allege that he had not claimed any interest in the mortgaged premises (or the proceeds of the sale), and he had not alleged that he had offered to release his claim. They asked for a decree of foreclosure against the disclaiming defendant: (Perkins v. Stafford, 11 Sim. 562.)

The MASTER of the ROLLS said that since the case was first before him, he had looked into the authorities, and he found that the rule laid down in all the cases was what he had always supposed it to be. In suits for foreclosure or redemption of mortgages, where a defendant disclaimed, who never had any interest, or who, having had some interest, had assigned his interest, or offered to disclaim or release it prior to the filing of the bill, he was entitled to his costs: but where a defendant disclaimed for the first time, by his answer, though he stated that no application had been made to him to disclaim, he could not claim his costs. This was the principle of all the modern cases except the case of Gurney v. Stuart, before the V. C. Stuart, which had been cited in the argument; but in the report of that case, the facts were not fully stated, and he thought it could not be held to overrule the general current of authorities. The plaintiff was entitled to a decree of foreclosure against the defendant.

Note.—In a subsequent case of Pemberton v. Read, which was a foreclosure suit commenced by claim, a judgment creditor, who disclaimed, appeared at the hearing, and asked for his costs. The M. R. postponed any argument on the point until after his decision in Ford v. Chesterfield, but said that it was a question whether, in a suit commenced by claim, a defendant who disclaimed ought, under any circumstances, to have his costs of appearing, because he might have let the case go against him by default.

V. C. KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

SWEETING v. SWEETING.

Legacy duty—Rent-charge—Dower.

A testator by his will, after giving a life-interest to his son in certain real estates, enabled the son by any deed to be executed on his marriage to settle a sum not exceeding 400l. per annum by way of jointure on any woman he might marry, and to be in bar of all dower, &c. The son, on his marriage, charged the estates with a rent-charge of 300l. per annum in favour of his wife, and subsequently died, leaving his wife surviving him.

Held, that under the Legacy Duty Act (55 Geo. 3, c. 28), legacy duty was payable on the value of the rent-charge so created.

The point raised in this cause was by way of petition by the Attorney-General, praying that a sum of 450*l.* by way of legacy duty, after the rate of ten per cent. might be paid to the Crown in respect of the value of a rent-charge created under the following circumstances.

The question turned upon the construction to be put upon the 4th section of the 45 Geo. 3, c. 28.

A testator by his will, after giving a life-interest in certain of his real estates to his son, enabled him, by any deed to be executed on his (the son's) marriage, to settle any sum not exceeding 400*l.* per annum by way of jointure on his intended wife, to be secured on such real estates, and that such rent-charge should be accepted by the wife in bar of all dower to which she might become entitled on the death of the son. On his marriage the son settled a rent of 300*l.* per annum by way of rent-charge on those estates in pursuance of the power given him by the testator's will. The wife had survived her husband, and from the time of his death to that had been in the receipt of the annual rent-charge of 300*l.* The estates had been under the protection of the court, a receiver of the rents having been appointed, and orders had been from time to time made for payment to the widow of certain sums by way of allowance for maintenance of the children of the marriage.

The application now was to have it declared that this rent-charge was liable to legacy duty at ten per cent. on its value.

The clause of the Act of Parliament under which the question arose was to the following effect:—45 Geo. 3, c. 28, s. 4: "And be it further enacted, that every gift by any will or testamentary instrument of any person dying after the passing of the Act which, by virtue of any such will or testamentary instrument, shall have effect or be satisfied out of the personal estate of such person so dying, or out of any personal estate which such person shall have power to dispose of as he or she shall think fit, or which shall have been charged upon or made payable out of any real estate, or be directed to be satisfied out of any moneys to arise by the sale of any real estate of the person so dying, or which such person may have the power to dispose of, whether the same shall be given by way of annuity or in any other form, shall be deemed and taken to be a legacy within the true intent and meaning of this Act: provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to the charging with the duties by this Act granted any specific sum or sums of money, or any share or proportion thereof, charged by any marriage-settlement or deed or deeds upon any real estate, in any case in which any such specific sum or sums, or share or proportion thereof, shall be appointed or apportioned by any will or testamentary instrument under any power given for that purpose by any such marriage settlement or deed or deeds."

W. M. James, for the Attorney-General, relied upon two cases—Attorney-General v. Pickard, 8 Mees. & W. 552; afterwards affirmed on error, 6 Mees. & W. 348; and Attorney-General v. Hewitter, 19 L. T. Rep. 144, and 21 L. J. 293, Ex., and affirmed on error 20 L. T. Rep. 130—as having decided the question; and that the wife having accepted the rent-charge in bar of dower, she had taken it as a gift under the power in the will of the original testator, and not by purchase.

Follett and Kinglake, contrà, contended that the above cases ought not to govern the present question, as in these cases the power to jointure was permissive, and not obligatory, on the wife to accept the rent-charge in bar of dower. That those cases being before the Court of Exchequer, which it was to be presumed had a bias in favour of the revenue of the Crown, the decisions were to be strictly examined; and if the present case were not within the strict letter of the section, such decisions should not be favoured. They contended that the form of the gift was different; here it was a power to enable the tenant-for-life, in consideration of marriage, to create the rent-charge by deed only; whereas in the other cases it was an absolute power by any instrument to create the same; and that here it was not a conditional legacy, but a present consideration by way of marriage, and by which the widow did not take as of the gift of the original testator, but as a purchaser under the marriage settlement. That at all events the widow ought to pay only the lesser duty as wife, and not ten per cent. as a stranger in blood, because it was manifest she could not take immediately from the original testator. They cited Blower v. Morret, 2 Ves. Sen. 420; Dorcashill v. Fletcher, Amb. 244; Heath v. Dendy, 1 Russ. 543; Burridge v. Bradyl, 1 P. Wms. 127, and referred to the Acts 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, and 55 Geo. 3, c. 184.

James in reply, said the argument that the widow should pay only the lesser duty was a plausible one, but that the decided cases had concluded that question,—she being a stranger in blood to the original testator, through whom she derived the benefit she had.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, in the course of the argument said, it appeared to him to be immaterial whether the power given by the testator's will was to be executed by deed or any other legal instrument.

JUDGMENT.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR observed that the whole question turned upon the 4th section of the 45 Geo. 3, c. 28. After reading the section he said that, in order to take a full view of the case, it might be advisable to consider what the case would have been were it a case affecting personalty alone—how in the case of a gift of personalty or legacy on condition to take a certain name and arms. In such a case he apprehended there could be no doubt that such a legacy would be liable to duty. So in a legacy to A. on condition that he should convey a certain estate of his to a third party; here also he considered the legacy would be liable to duty if the legatee accepted it. So in the case, which not unfrequently happened, of a testator having a daughter with children, and he were to give her a security on condition that she maintained the children. The daughter, being obliged to bear the burden of maintaining her children without any legacy, it was discovered the moment the duty was payable upon it. What effect should be given to a case where the annuities almost absorbed the value of the legacy, and whether duty was only to be paid on the difference between the two, might be an important question; but that was not the case here, and he therefore expressed no opinion upon it. Now if he (the V. C.) was right in what he had said in an early part of his judgment, that a case of personalty would be clearly liable to legacy duty, he thought its being real estate made no difference, as it was not the less a gift; and therefore the same decision would apply to both real estate and personalty: the gift of money charged on real estate was not the less a gift because it was coupled with a condition. In a case where a testator did not make the gift direct to A., but to such one of his children as he should afterwards name by deed or additional will, and he names A., on the plainest principles, if A. took under the exercise of that power reserved by the testator, the legacy duty must be paid. The party comes in under the person exercising the power, if not under the testator in his original character of donor. So if it were a bequest to a son that he should do a particular thing, the same principle would apply. Here the condition that the intended wife should release her dower was a condition to do a particular act; and he (the V. C.) did not see how this condition varied the case of the more simple one which he had just put. And as to whether the exercise of the power was to be so exercised by deed or will, he thought, made no difference in principle. The judgments in the two cases in the Ex. were affirmed on appeal; and therefore he (the V. C.) was almost bound by those decisions, and in fact he thought they only carried out general principles to their legitimate result. He must therefore decide the present petition in favour of the Crown. As to those cases which had been relied upon by the respondents, which were cases of deficiency of assets and where legacies had abated, the decisions in those cases were based upon a different principle.

Order for payment of the legacy duty on the value of the rent-charge, at ten per cent.

V. C. PARKER'S COURT.

Re THOMPSON'S TRUST.

Will—Construction—Period of vesting.

A testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees, upon trust after the death of his wife to pay the interest of 2000l. to his daughter M. for life, and after her decease to pay the said sum unto and amongst all and every the child and children of M. when and as they should severally attain twenty-one; and in case any of them should die before their shares should become payable, leaving issue, then the shares should be paid to such issue; but in case any child should die before his or her share should become payable, leaving no issue, the share of such child to go to the survivors or survivor of the said children; but in case M. should leave no child or children, or, leaving such, all should die under twenty-one and without issue, then over. M. had one child, E. M. who attained twenty-one, and died in her mother's lifetime unmarried.

Held, that E. M. took a vested interest in the sum of 2000l. which passed to her personal representative.

Thomas Thompson, by his will dated 18th Feb. 1818, bequeathed all his personal estate to Moses Mitchell Silvester and his son Thomas Thompson, upon trust to permit his wife to enjoy all and singular his household goods and furniture, or such part thereof as they should think proper, during her life; and upon trust to sell such parts of the said furniture and household goods as his wife should not think proper to take, and all other his effects, and to sell after the decease of his wife all that should be so taken by her, and to invest the proceeds and all other the testator's personal estate when got in, and to pay the dividends and interest thereof to his wife for life. The testator then proceeded as follows: "And from and after the decease of my said wife upon trust that they my said trustees or the survivor of them, his executors or administrators shall, and do pay to, or otherwise permit and sufficiently empower my daughter Martha Oliver to receive and take, all the dividends, interest, and annual produce which shall arise and be made from 2000*l.* part of the said trust monies, during her natural life, to and for her own sole and separate and peculiar use and benefit, without being subject or liable to the debts, engagements, intermeddling, power or control of James Oliver, or any future husband with whom she may intermarry, and the receipts or receipts of the said Martha Oliver under her hand alone shall, notwithstanding her coverture, be good and sufficient discharges to my said trustees; and from and after the decease of the said Martha Oliver, upon trust that they my said trustees or the survivor of them, his executors or administrators, shall and do pay, apply, assign, and transfer all and singular the said sum of 2000*l.* and the dividends, interest, profits, and produce thereof, unto and amongst all and every the child and children of the said Martha Oliver, if more than one, share and share alike, as tenants in common, when and as he, she, or they shall severally attain his, her, or their respective ages of twenty-one years; and in case any of the said children shall happen to depart this life before his, her, or their share or shares shall respectively become payable, leaving issue of his, her, or their body or bodies lawfully begotten, then I direct that the share or shares of him, her, or them so dying, whether original or accruing by survivorship, shall go and be paid unto and amongst such his, her, or their respective issue, equally share and share alike, as tenants in common, when and as they shall respectively attain the age of twenty-one years; but in case any of the said children shall happen to die before his, her, or their share or shares shall become payable, leaving no lawful issue, then I direct that the share or shares of him, her, or them so dying shall go and be paid to and amongst the survivors and survivor of them, at such time and times as his, her, or their original share or shares shall respectively become payable; and so as often as any such child or children shall happen to die before his, her, or their share or shares shall become payable, leaving no lawful issue, such share or shares, whether original or accruing by survivorship, shall go and be paid to the survivors and survivor of the said children, at the time aforesaid: but in case the said Martha Oliver shall leave no child or children, or, leaving such, all of them shall happen to die under age and without issue, then I direct that my said trustees, or the survivor of them, his executors or administrators, shall and do pay, apply, assign, and transfer the interest, dividends, profits, and produce of the said sum of 2000*l.* and also the said sum, in such manner as the sum of 2000*l.* hereinafter next mentioned is directed to be applied, with the interest, dividends, profits, and produce thereof respectively." The trusts of the 2000*l.* next mentioned were similar trusts for the testator's daughter, Agnes Shaw, and her issue, with a like executory bequest in favour of Martha Oliver and her issue; and in case both his said daughters should happen to die leaving no child or children, or, leaving such, all of them should happen to die under age, and without issue, the testator directed the said 4000*l.* to fall into the residue which the testator gave, upon trusts for the benefit of his son Thomas Thompson and his issue, with an ultimate trust for the testator's next of kin. The testator died in 1821, and his widow died in 1832. Martha Oliver died on the 7th Oct. 1851, without leaving any issue surviving her, but having had one child, Elizabeth Martha Oliver, who attained twenty-one, and died unmarried in her mother's lifetime. The 2,000*l.* bequeathed in favour of Martha Oliver, and her issue, was invested in Consols. James Oliver, the petitioner in the present case, took out letters of administration to the estate of Elizabeth Martha Oliver. The trustees transferred the amount of Consols, into the name of the Accountant-General, under the Trustees Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96); and the question raised upon the present petition was, as to the right of the representative of Elizabeth Martha Oliver to the fund.

Malins and Rudall, for the petitioner, cited Jones v. Jones, 18 Sim. 561; Re Williams, 12 Bea. 317; and Butterworth v. Hervey, 9 Bea. 130.

J. V. Prior, for some of the parties claiming under the gift over, referred to Woodcock v. The Duke of Dorset, 3 Bro. Ch. Ca. 569; and Swift v. Swift, 8 Sim. 168.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR called attention to the case of Maitland v. Chalie, 6 Madd. 243.

Craig for other parties in the same interest.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR (without hearing a reply) said he thought that the case came within the authorities cited. The will gave a life estate, and then clearly a vested interest to the children, and, if any child died under twenty-one leaving issue, to the issue of that child. Thus far everything vested, and then occurred the clause, "In case the said Martha Oliver shall leave no child or children, or, leaving such, all of them shall happen to die under age and without issue, then" he gave the fund over. It was said that if the word "leave" were understood in its natural sense the gift over took effect, for Martha Oliver had no child who survived her. It appeared to his Honour that the testator's intention was to give this fund over in case the previous limitations failed; but—an observation that might always be made in cases where there was this kind of question—the testator never contemplated the event which had happened, of a child attaining twenty-one, and dying in the lifetime of the tenant for life. It was assumed that the children, if any, would all survive the tenant for life, and then the testator provided for the event of their being infants at her death. His Honour considered that the construction was clear according to the authorities. Maitland v. Chalie appeared to him so closely in point. There was also a case of Cass Meyer v. Strode, 8 Jur. 14, in which the gift was to certain persons for life, and on their respective deaths to their children, to be paid to sons at twenty-one, daughters at twenty-one or marriage, and in case of the death of any of the tenants for life "without leaving any children or child," the share to go over; and there the Vice-Chancellor of England said: "Nothing can be more clear than that this gives a vested interest to the children upon their attaining twenty-one or marriage. The testator then goes on—'And I further will and direct that in case any or either of the said six children of the said Levine Fowler shall die without leaving any children or child, that the share or shares of them, him, or her so dying shall survive and go over to the survivors or survivor of them for their, his, and her lives and life, and the child or children of such of them as should be then dead leaving issue, &c. Now Mr. Parker says that that clause prevents an absolute indefeasible interest from vesting in any child until it survives the parent. But that is begging the question; and I think that that is not the meaning of the testator is clear from the subsequent words—'And the capital of the share or shares of such survivor or survivors shall, upon their, his, or her death or deaths, become divisible among their children, equally in the same manner as their own single shares,' &c. which lets in all the previous provisions which he had used with reference to the original shares.' It seems to me that this case is not distinguishable from the case of Maitland v. Chalie, and that it requires very strong words to take away the effect of a prior clear vested gift." Marshall v. Hill, 2 Mau. & S. 608, was a case to the same effect. His Honour, therefore, held, that the petitioner was entitled to have a transfer of the fund to him as the representative of the deceased child of Martha Oliver.

V. C. STUART'S COURT.

Reported by GEO. S. ALLNUTT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Friday, Jan. 28.

WEBSTER v. WEBSTER.

Husband and wife—Separation deed—Plea.

A widow, claiming to be a creditor upon her deceased husband's estate in respect of an annuity granted to her by a deed of separation, instituted a creditor's suit for the administration of the estate, and in her bill averred the payment of the annuity up to the husband's death, and afterwards. To this bill the executors pleaded that subsequent to the deed of separation there had been a reconciliation and cohabitation between the husband and the plaintiff:

The Court allowed the plea, but gave leave to amend the bill.

This was a bill filed by Ann Webster, widow, on behalf of herself, and all other the creditors of William Granville Webster, deceased, for the administration of W. G. Webster's estate. The following circumstances appeared from the statements in the bill. On the 27th Sept. 1843, the plaintiff was married to W. G. Webster, and in the year 1844 they mutually agreed to live separate, and thereupon the indenture hereinafter stated was executed. The indenture was dated the 4th Dec. 1844, and made between W. G. Webster, of the first part, the plaintiff, of the second part, and Thomas Summers, of the third part; and thereby, after reciting the agreement to live separate, and that it had been agreed that W. G. Webster would allow and pay Ann, his wife, during the term of her natural life, for her better support and maintenance, an annuity of 65*l.*, it is witnessed that W. G. Webster, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, covenanted with Thos. Summers, his executors, administrators, and assigns, that it should be lawful for the said Ann, his wife, and that he would permit and suffer her, the said Ann, from time to time and at all times from thenceforth during her natural life, to live separate and apart from him, notwithstanding her present coverture, and as if she were then sole and unmarried; and that the said W. G. Webster would not, at any time or times thereafter, sue her in the Ecclesiastical Court or any other court, for living separate and apart from him, or compel her to cohabit with him, nor would, without the consent of the said Thos. Summers, visit her or knowingly come into any house or place where she should or might dwell, reside or be, or send or cause to be sent any letter or message to her, &c. And lastly, that the said W. G. Webster, his heirs, executors, or administrators, or some or one of them, should and would well and truly pay or cause to be paid unto the said Ann, his wife, or her assigns, during the term of her natural life, for and towards her better support and maintenance, one annuity or yearly sum of 65*l.* free and clear of all taxes, charges, and deductions whatsoever; the said annuity or yearly sum of 65*l.*, to be paid and payable to her the said Ann and her assigns, during her natural life, by two half-yearly payments in each and every year, on the days and times thereinafter mentioned, and which said sum of 65*l.* per annum she the said Ann Webster did thereby agree to take in full satisfaction for her support and maintenance, and all alimony whatsoever, during her coverture. The bill then stated "that the said separation did take place, and continued until the decease of the said W. G. Webster, and that the said indenture was acted upon in all respects by all the parties thereto, until such decease." W. G. Webster, by his will, dated the 24th Dec. 1845, gave all his real and personal estate to Frederick Taylor Webster, his heirs executors, administrators, and assigns; subject, as therein mentioned, and appointed Louisa Webster and John Fox executrix and executor of his will. On the 26th Jan. 1846 W. G. Webster died, and his will was proved by L. Webster and J. Fox on the 18th June following. The annuity of 85*l.* was duly paid by the testator up to the time of his death, and after his decease the payment was continued by P. Webster and J. Fox, and F. T. Webster, up to the 25th March 1850. The further payment of the annuity being refused, and Thos. Summers having refused to sue for the same, the present suit was instituted against F. T. Webster, P. Webster, J. Fox, and T. Summers. To this bill F. T. Webster pleaded "that, subsequently to the date of the execution of the indenture in the said bill mentioned, the said plaintiff and her late husband W. G. Webster were mutually reconciled to each other, and again cohabited and slept together as husband and wife." This plea, which was not accompanied by an answer, now came on for hearing.

Malins and Macqueen appeared in support of the plea.

C. Hall, for the plaintiff, objected to the plea in point of form, as there were several averments in the bill on which the plaintiff was entitled to discovery. If the plea were replied to, such discovery would be material for the plaintiff's case. He referred to Mitf. Pleading 239, 242; M'Gregor v. East India Company, 2 Sim. 182; Cross v. Tyrrell, 2 Mad. 397; Emerson v. Barlow, 3 Sim. 490; 2 Bligh, 85.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said he did not consider the objection to the form of the plea could be sustained. He could not hold that the averments in the bill were so framed as to anticipate the defence, and thus entitle the plaintiff to an answer.

Malins and Macqueen, in support of the plea, cited Hindley v. Earl of Westmeath, 6 B. & C. 200; St. John v. St. John, 11 Ves. 526; Westmeath v. Westmeath, 1 Dow. N. S. 519; and Roper's Husband and Wife, 272.

C. Hall, for the plaintiff, cited Gawden v. Draper, 2 Vent. 217; Wilson v. Mallett, 3 B. & Ad. 752; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 2 Cox, 99; and Jee v. Thurlow, 2 B. & Cr. 547.

Malins, in reply.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR (after stating the facts of the case) said that the right of the plaintiff to a decree depended upon the question whether she was a creditor. She asserted her right as a creditor under the deed of separation, and averred distinctly that the separation took place and continued up to the time of the husband's death; that was followed by an averment that the annuity was paid up to the time of the husband's death and afterwards. The question was one of great difficulty. That a deed of separation, by which a husband covenanted with trustees to pay an annuity for the maintenance of the wife, and the trustees covenanted to indemnify him against her debts during the separation, was valid, was unquestionable; and it was equally unquestionable that if in an ordinary case, after the execution of the deed of separation, and the separation, facts were shown amounting to a reconciliation and subsequent cohabitation, they would annul the deed. That was the settled law, and not to be disturbed but by a higher authority than his Honour's. The difficulty here was that the bill averred payment of the annuity up to the death of the husband. Now if there were simply a deed of separation, and an annuity payable under it and a subsequent reconciliation, there would be an end of the deed: but the husband might have so conducted himself subsequently to the reconciliation as to lead the court to give effect to the provision for the wife, under the deed of separation. But his Honour could only deal with facts and circumstances appearing on the pleadings. The allegation of the plea was, that there was a subsequent reconciliation and cohabitation; and if that allegation were true the deed of separation was annulled; but his Honour did not find any averments in the bill sufficient to shew that by any subsequent acts of the husband such a consequence as the annulling the deed would not ensue; and the relief was sought on the ground of the validity of the deed. Now no doubt in this case there was great hardship upon the plaintiff. His Honour thought that if it were taken as a fact that the annuity was paid up to the death of the husband, and that he made his will after the deed of separation, and so dealt with the wife on the footing that she had a right to the annuity under the deed, the case was one in which, although the plea was a sufficient answer to the bill as it stood, an opportunity should not be refused to amend the bill.

Plea allowed, with leave to amend the bill within three weeks, if the plaintiff did not undertake to reply to the plea.

HOUGH v. COLEMAN.

Will—Construction—Next of kin.

A testator gave personal estate to trustees upon trust for A. for life, and afterwards for B. for life, and after the decease of the survivor of them, upon trust for "such person or persons as should at the time of the decease of A. be entitled thereto as the testator's next of kin under the statutes made for the distribution of the effects of intestates." B. survived A., and at A.'s death two persons were next of kin to the testator. Held, that these two persons took as tenants in common.

Charles Horn, by his will dated the 19th July 1825, after giving certain pecuniary legacies, bequeathed the residue of his personal estate unto Thomas Coleman and Geo. Soulby, upon the trusts thereinafter declared as to the proceeds of his real estate, and he devised all his real estate unto the said Thomas Coleman and George Soulby, upon trust, for sale and investment of the proceeds, and he directed them to stand possessed thereof upon trust for Jane the wife of Thomas Bing for her life, and after her decease upon trust for Thomas Bing for his life, and after the decease of the survivor of them, upon trust, that they "should stand possessed of all and singular the said trust moneys, stocks, funds and securities, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, in trust for, and to pay, assign, and transfer the same unto, such person or persons as should at the time of the decease of the said Jane Bing be entitled thereto as the testator's next of kin under the statutes made for the distribution of the effects of intestates." The testator died on the 12th March 1837. Jane Bing died on the 4th July 1846, and at that time George Horn and Sarah Culmer were the only next of kin of the testator. George Horn died on the 29th October 1846, having by his will devised and bequeathed all his real estate, and the residue of his personal estate, to Ann Horn, and Jane Horn, and Ann Horn, the three plaintiffs, as tenants in common. The suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate, and the only question which arose was as to the mode in which the next of kin took this property.

Malins and Speed, for the plaintiffs, contended that the words used by the testator not only described the class, but regulated the rights of the parties: (Martin v. Glover, 1 Coll. 269.) They distinguished the case from Withy v. Mangles, 4 Bea. 358, 10 Cl. & Fin. 215; and Elmsley v. Young, 2 Myl. & K. 780.

Glasse and Bagshawe, for the representatives of Mrs. Culmer, contended that this was a joint tenancy, and that by the death of George Horn the whole property had survived to Mrs. Culmer: (Phillips v. Garth, 3 Bro. Ch. Ca. 64; Kilner v. Leech, 10 Ves. 362; Baker v. Gibson, 12 Ves. 101; Minton v. Wreaks, 13 Sim. 52; Richardson v. Richardson, 14 Sim. 526.)

Teed, for Thomas Bing.

Daniel and Eddis, for the trustees.

Malins, in reply.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that the question raised was certainly one of difficulty. It was, however, the duty of the court to construe the will according to the language used by the testator; and if his Honour found an intention expressed as to who were to take, and the mode of taking, he must abide by that intention. Looking at the words of the will the difficulty appeared considerable, for the testator said "such person or persons as should, at the time of the decease of Jane Bing, be entitled thereto as his next of kin under the statutes made for the distribution of the effects of intestates." This at least was clear that the testator intended the persons to be his next of kin at that time, not in a technical sense, but under the statute, and as entitled thereto under the statute. It was said that the reference to the statute was to define the class, and not the interest or the nature of the title of the class. But if his Honour found that the testator said he was to look to the statute, not only for the class but for the title, he must do so. When he looked at the statute he found that the next of kin to take were "the next of kindred to the dead person in equal degree or legally representing their stocks pro suo cuique jure." These latter words created the difficulty. Upon the construction contended for by the plaintiffs, his Honour must extend the right to those representing the next of kin, and he considered that he was bound to do so. In Phillips v. Garth, Buller, J. said "if it had pleased the court originally to say that next of kin should take in the same manner as under the statute, I should not have objected to it, for it seems to me they should take per stirpes." Here the testator said "next of kin under the statute," and therefore this case came within the proposition to which Buller, J. said that he would not have objected. His Honour therefore considered that the next of kin took as tenants in common, and that he was bound to come to that decision. Kilner v. Leech was not an authority against this, and he considered that upon the authorities the case was quite unprejudiced.

Re OVERHILL'S TRUSTS.

Will—Construction—Illegitimate children.

A testatrix bequeathed a sum of stock equally to be divided between the children of A. B. and the children of C. the wife of D. E. At the date of the will C. was married to D. E., but for eighteen years previously she had cohabited with him, and she had six children by him. The testatrix was well acquainted with all the children, and did not know of their parents not having been married. C. had no legitimate children. At the date of the will C. was forty-nine years of age:

V. C. [illegible] COURT.

Held that the illegitimate children were excluded from the bequest.

Mary Overhill, by her will dated 22nd Nov. 1834, bequeathed the sum of 800*l.* Consols, in trustees upon trust to pay the interest thereof to William Garratt for his life, and after his decease she gave "the said capital stock equally to be divided between all the children of the said William Garratt and the children of Mary, the wife of William Bentley," &c. The testatrix died on the 11th Feb. 1837. William Garratt died in April 1841. On the 25th May, 1848, the sum of stock was transferred by the trustees into the name of the Accountant-General, under the Trustees Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96). Mary Bentley died on the 21st July, 1852. The present petition was presented by the children of William Garratt, praying the transfer to them of the said sum of stock. By an affidavit of William Bentley, the husband of Mary Bentley, it appeared that he was married to Mary Bentley on the 15th Jan. 1821; that his wife was sixty-seven years of age at the time of her death; that for upwards of eighteen years previous to their marriage they had cohabited together and were always considered as man and wife, and no person in his own or his wife's family, or any person whatsoever to his knowledge (save themselves), was aware of the fact of no marriage having taken place between them; that during such cohabitation and before the marriage there was issue six children; that the testatrix was aunt to his wife, and was well acquainted with all his children, who were in the habit of visiting her, and particularly his eldest daughter, who lived with her on various occasions for many months at a time; that the testatrix was in the habit of calling at his residence for the purpose of seeing his children and making inquiries after their health and welfare, and always expressed a strong interest in them, and showed them much attention and kindness; and that the testatrix often during her life expressed to him her intention of providing by will for his said wife and the said children.

Shapter appeared for the petitioners.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said he should wish to hear the counsel who contended that illegitimate children could take under this bequest.

H. Stevens, for the illegitimate children of Mary Bentley, proposed to read the affidavit before mentioned to shew that the testatrix had these children in her intention. At the date of the will Mary Bentley was of such an age as to render it impossible that the testatrix contemplated future children. The affidavit besides clearly established that the testatrix desired to benefit these particular persons, in whom she took an interest, and of whose illegitimacy she was not aware. He referred to Dove v. Alexander, 2 Hare, 275; Beachcroft v. Beachcroft, 1 Mad. 430; Fraser v. Pigott, 1 Younge, 854; and Metham v. Duke of Devonshire, 1 P. Wms. 529.

Shapter, for the petitioners, referred to Jones v. Smith, 14 Sim. 214; Owen v. Knight, 22 L. T. 45; Evans v. Davies, 7 Hare, 496; Gill v. Shirley, 2 R. & M. 336; Bagley v. Mollard, 1 R. & M. 581; and Durrant v. Friend, 16 Jur. 55. He objected to the reception of extrinsic evidence, there being no ambiguity in the will.

H. Stevens, in reply.

Cairns, for the executors of the trustee.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that the question was whether he could receive evidence to shew that these children had acquired the reputation of being the children of this woman. Upon the authorities he did not think that he could. The will plainly imported legitimate children; and from the circumstance that at her time of life she was unlikely to have children, and the knowledge of the testatrix of that fact, his Honour did not think that he should be justified in admitting evidence. In Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & Bea. 463, Lord Eldon said: "In all the cases that I have seen having relation to this question, the illegitimate children, if they were to take, must have taken, not by any demonstration arising out of the will itself, but by the effect of evidence dehors read, or attempted to be read, with a view to establish, not out of the contents of the will, but by something extrinsic, who were intended to be the devisees; and if my judgment upon this case is supposed to rest upon any evidence out of the will except that which establishes the fact that there were individuals who had gained by reputation the name and character of his children, that conclusion is drawn without sufficient attention to the grounds on which the judgment is formed; my opinion being that, taking the fact as established that there were children who had gained the reputation of being his children, it does necessarily appear on the will itself that he intended these children. If that principle is just, and this case falls within its reach, all the cases cited are inapplicable to this." Now that was a case where the testator had devised to his children by Ann Lewis. In the present case there was no doubt that the persons were well described if there had been legitimate children, and his Honour was not justified in looking at evidence to show that illegitimate children were intended. He must therefore make the order asked by the petition, though he regretted very much that those persons should be excluded.

V. C. STUART'S COURT.

V. C. WOOD'S COURT.

V. C. STUART'S COURT.

Feb. 16.—This case was, by the desire of the V. C. reargued. At the conclusion of the argument,

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, that when this case was before him on the previous Saturday, he had decided it on the ground that the evidence tendered on the part of those who claimed under this description was not admissible, and he had also held that these children were not entitled, and, upon the true construction of the will, could not have the benefit of this bequest which it was suggested was for them. Upon further consideration, and referring to the cases, he thought that upon the words of the will, and consistently with the true principles on which this court proceeded with respect to questions of this kind, he was bound to receive this evidence, and bound to look at everything which would give him an opportunity of knowing all that the testator knew at the time when he made his will, so as to enable the court, in construing it, to place itself in the position which the testator occupied at that time. To that extent, therefore, his opinion varied from that which he expressed when the case was before him last week. But, even with the assistance of the evidence in the case, it unfortunately happened that the rule of law was too strong—one established on the highest authority—but not in perfect uniformity, for he thought that the case of Southcroft v. Bouchcroft, decided by Sir Thomas Plumer, was not reconcilable with the other decisions which had been cited. It was entirely contradicted by the case of Harris v. Lloyd, decided by Lord Eldon. The principle of the decision of Sir Thomas Plumer was, that by the description "children" the testator meant "present children." This was not the first occasion that that decision had been commented upon as being inconsistent with principle and authority. Indeed, it was fortified by the decision of Lord Lyndhurst in Fraser v. Piggott; but what he was bound to follow was the well-established doctrine that, if there were a gift to children as a class, unless there were words of clear description to make the class apply to illegitimate children, or would clearly exclude any but those designated by the testator, upon the true construction of the will he must hold that the description would include only legitimate children. The only doubt in the case arose from the fact that the testatrix, when she made her will, knew that Mrs. Bentley had children, and believed her to be the wife of William Bentley, whom she mentioned as her husband. This lady might have had legitimate children, and it was impossible not to see that in that case the illegitimate children would have been excluded from the benefit of the gift. However improbable it might have been that she might have had other children, according to the contention of the petitioners, they would have taken with the legitimate children. Such a course was forbidden by the rule of law, as well as by public policy; and, therefore, though with the greatest reluctance and regret, he must decide that these children could not take.

KING v. ISAACSON.

Will—Construction—Vested interests.

A testator gave real and personal property to trustees, upon trust for A. B. for life, and after her decease, upon trust to convey, pay, assign, transfer, and make over the same property, unto and among all and every the child and children of A. B., as and when they should severally and respectively attain twenty-one, for their own use as tenants in common, and if there should be but one child, then to such only child, his or her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, according to the nature and quality of such estates, and to whom the testator gave, devised, and bequeathed the same accordingly:

Held, that each child, as it came into esse, took an interest vested, and not contingent, in the whole property.

Walter Norton, the testator in this cause, by his will dated the 21st of July 1828, after making certain specific devises and bequests, and providing for the payment of two annuities, gave the residue of his real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust to convert into money and invest his personal estate, and to stand possessed of the securities, and of the real estate, upon trust for the testator's wife for her life, and after her decease, to pay two-thirds of the interest, dividends, and annual produce, rents, issues, and profits to his niece, Mary Travis, for her separate use for her life, and the remaining third of the same to his niece, Latona Norton Travis, for her separate use for her life; and after the decease of either or both of the said nieces, then upon further trust that they the said trustees, or the survivor of them, or the heirs, executors or administrators of such survivor, should, as soon as conveniently might be after the decease of his said nieces, or either of them, convey, pay, assign, transfer, and make over all the residue of his real estate, and all the residue of the said trust moneys and premises, after fully providing for and answering the trusts and purposes hereinbefore expressed in that his will, in the shares and proportions following, that is to say, upon the decease of the said niece, Mary Travis, to convey, pay, assign, transfer, or make over, two equal third parts or shares of the said residuary real estates, and also of the residue of the said trust moneys and premises, unto and among all and every the child and children of his said niece, Mary Travis, as well daughters as sons, as and when they should severally and respectively attain their several and respective age and ages of twenty-one years, to and for their own absolute use and benefit, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and to their several and respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, according to the nature and quality of such estates; and if there should be but one child of his said niece, Mary Travis, then to such only child, his or her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, according to the nature and quality of such estates, and to whom the said testator gave, devised, and bequeathed the same accordingly; and upon the decease of his said niece, Latona Norton Travis, to convey, pay, assign, transfer, or make over the other or remaining equal third part or share of his said residuary real estates, and also of the residue of the said trust monies and premises, unto and among all and every the child and children of his niece Latona Norton Travis as well daughters as sons, and when they should severally and respectively attain their several and respective age and ages of twenty-one years, to and for their own absolute use and benefit as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and to their several and respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, according to the nature and quality of such estates; and in case there should be but one child of his said niece Latona Norton Travis, then to such only child, his or her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, according to the nature and quality of such estates, and to whom the said testator gave, devised, and bequeathed the same accordingly." The testator died in November 1837, and his widow died in 1846. Latona Norton Travis was married to James King in 1832, and died in May, 1844, leaving three infant children. Of these three children, William James, who was born on the 18th of Feb. 1844, died on the 26th April, 1845, and Matilda Mary died in May, 1848, and James King their father took out letters of administration of their effects. The third of Latona Norton King's children was Henry Walter King, the infant plaintiff. The question arising in the cause, which now came on for further directions, was as to the nature of the interests taken by the children of the testator's nieces under the will.

Walker and Giffard, for the plaintiff, contended that the children of the nieces took vested interests liable to be divested on their dying under the age of twenty-one years. They cited Doe v. Lee, 8 T. R. 41; Re Bartholomew, 1 Mac. & G. 354; Saunders v. Vautier, Cr. & Ph. 240; Harrison v. Grimwood, 12 Bea. 192; Tapscott v. Newcombe, 6 Jur. 755; Genery v. Fitzgerald, Jac. 468; Gibson v. Lord Montfort, 1 Ves. 485; Phipps v. Ackers, 9 Cl. & Fin. 583; and Hunter v. Judd, 4 Sim. 455.

Selwyn appeared for the trustees.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that before hearing Russell and Allnutt, who appeared for James King the administrator and heir-at-law of the deceased children, he desired to hear the counsel for the heir-at-law and next of kin of the testator.

Follett and Rossiter, for the heir-at-law and next of kin, of the testator, contended that no estate of inheritance passed to the children until they respectively attained the age of twenty-one.

Alderson and Bovins appeared for other parties.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that although the words of the will created very great difficulty, and it was important to be quite sure of the real meaning of the testator, yet he was, on the whole, satisfied as to the true construction of the will. The question was whether Hanson v. Graham, 6 Ves. 239, and that class of cases were to apply, or whether he was to hold that none of the children could take a vested interest until they attained the age of twenty-one. Notwithstanding the difficulty upon the words used here as to attaining twenty-one, yet looking at the whole will from the direction to convey upon the death of the nieces up to the ultimate gift of an absolute interest to one child, his Honour considered that every child on being born acquired a vested interest. Immediately on the death of each niece there was a direction to "convey, pay, assign, transfer, and make over." There was no doubt that on the death of each it was the intention that something should be done, that something should accrue: there was a difficulty as to the attaining twenty-one, but that the testator directed an immediate conveyance, was certain. There was no doubt that if such a conveyance was to be made, it was to be to the whole class of children, and there was no doubt that the conveyance was to be to them as tenants in common in fee. There was also no doubt that if there was only one child, the conveyance was to be without any words importing that he was to take nothing unless he attained the age of twenty-one. There was no doubt that on attaining twenty-one, severally and respectively, they were to take absolute interests as to the personal estate, and there was also no doubt as to this being a mixed fund. With all these matters certain, the difficulty arose from the words "as and when they shall severally and respectively attain their several and respective age and ages of twenty-one years to and for their own absolute use and benefit," &c. These words imported that when and as the children should attain twenty-one, they should take absolute interests as tenants in common. When his Honour found a direction that immediately on the death of the mother, the trustees were to convey, he could only hold that the testator, when referring to twenty-one, meant an enjoyment in possession, and not a vested interest. Lord Langdale had justly observed in Harrison v. Grimwood, that where there is a gift to a class, it is a stronger reason for holding that it vests before attaining twenty-one than where the gift is to an individual. Hunter v. Judd was decided on a sound principle of construction. The present was the converse of that case, and afforded a stronger application. It was a far wiser rule to hold that children took vested interests than contingent, for the hardship was enormous where a child died under twenty-one leaving issue. The present case was relieved of great difficulty by the ultimate gift to one child. Looking then at the whole will, his Honour held that each child as it came into esse took an interest vested, and not contingent, in the whole property.

V. C. WOOD'S COURT.

Reported by J. HENRY CREASY, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

Tuesday, Jan. 18.

OPPENHEIM v. HENRY.

Will—Construction—Evidence of testamentary paper—Costs, where two suits instituted for the same matter.

A testator directed the produce of the sale of his property to be for the benefit of all his grandchildren equally among them at the end of twenty years after his death:

Held, that all the grandchildren living at the death of the testator took vested interests, subject only to let in after-born grandchildren within the given time. The court will not order the original will of personalty to be produced to contradict the probate.

Where two suits were instituted by claim for administration of an estate, on behalf of infants, and on a reference a report was made in favour of the latter suit, the costs only of filing the original claim were allowed to the plaintiff, but not of the inquiry or of the affidavit.

A testator made his will, the paper whereon it was written being erased in various parts, and was the subject of litigation in the Ecclesiastical Court; but at length probate was granted of it, and, as set forth in the probate, was as follows:—"I hereby release my three sons from all claims due to me by bonds or moneys advanced by me. I give all the household furniture, &c. (fully described) to my daughters, and to survivor of them, during their natural lives, if they shall remain unmarried; and, in the case of the death of either of them, to the survivor and survivor of them; and after all their deaths, I direct the same to be sold, and the proceeds to be and form part of the residue of my estate. I direct all my property to be sold as soon as conveniently may be after my decease, and the proceeds of such sale to be brought into the funds in the names of my daughters hereinafter named, and to be held by them in trust for all my grandchildren, to be equally divided among them at the end or expiration of twenty years after my decease." He then appointed the defendant Mr. Henry and another executors, who proved the will. For the administration of the trusts of this will two suits by claim were filed, one by a relative of the family, but which suit was, after a reference, stayed; and a second suit, instituted by the mother of some of the grandchildren, who were infants, was directed to be proceeded with. The plaintiff in the first suit had filed affidavits in support of it after the second suit was commenced, and it was on the hearing of both that the reference was made.

Chandless and J. H. Palmer.—The first question for the court to consider is whether all the grandchildren born and to be born within the 20 years of the testator's death are to take shares in the produce of the sale. The plaintiff, the mother of the infant grandchildren, submitted it to the court on their behalf.

Russell and Cole.—The grandchildren now in existance are the only parties entitled to the residuary bequest to the grandchildren of the testator. Horsley v. Challoner, 2 Ves. jun. 66. In Butler v. Lowe, 10 Sim. 317, a testator gave legacies to each of the children of his nephews and nieces, begotten and to be begotten; and it was held that the children of the nephews and nieces born after the testator's death were not entitled to participate in the legacies, the V.C. there observing that if there is a bequest to the children of A., begotten and to be begotten, it has generally been held that the words "to be begotten" show only that the testator contemplated children to be born after the date of his will, and before his death.

Shapter, for the executors.—The executors are only anxious that they should be right, first, as to the parties among whom they make the division, and on that subject merely submit to the court the case of Burrell v. Baskerfield, 11 Beav. 525, and Chamney v. Ainslabie, 18 Sim. 71. They also submit to the judgment of the court the effect of the bequest of the furniture, as also do the daughters in whose favour the bequest is made, and for whom I appear. It appears also that there is a third point which it is necessary should be decided, namely, whether the original will is to be looked at to see whether the words of release relate to "bonds on moneys," as stated in the probate, or are really, as one of the sons has insisted, "bonds or moneys," so as to effect a release to him of the sum of 240*l* due from him to the testator on promissory notes, and which, if not released, the executors will be bound to recover for the benefit of the estate. The rule laid down in the 2nd vol. of Turner's Chancery Practice, 855, is this: "If any stress be laid on the handwriting of a will, it seems it cannot be made use of, if only the probate be in evidence; but, on motion and notice, an order will be made upon the registrar of the court where the will is to deliver the original will for the purpose of being produced at the hearing, upon giving security;" and then, referring to 2 Atkyns, 30, the author says: "Where there was a variance between the original will and the probate, Lord Hardwicke directed the cause to stand over, with liberty to apply to the Spiritual Court, to make the proper alterations in the probate." * * "The proper course would be for the officer of the Spiritual Court to attend with the original will at the hearing, and the court would order the executor to correct the probate at his own expense, and the cause to stand over in the mean time." And in Crompton v. Bloxam, 2 Coll. C. C. 221, Lord Justice Knight Bruce, then V.C. said there was great difficulty in deciding on the exact words of the will, or rather whether certain words commenced a new sentence or were part of a former paragraph of the will; and his Honour said that before deciding the matter, so far as it depended on this question, he might think it necessary to look at the original will; and on a future day, when he gave his judgment, he said: "I beg to have it observed that although this is a will of personalty, I sent for and examined the original will, and have been influenced by it in my construction."

Wolry, for other parties.

E. Cambell (one of the defendants who is indebted to the estate) in person contended that where there was so much on the face of the original will of erasure, obliteration, and alteration, the court ought not to be bound by the copy which the Ecclesiastical Court might issue as the probate, but would send for the original, and examine it to see whether the word was "on," or, as he contended, "or."

Dickinson, for the plaintiff in the claim which had been discontinued by order of the court, asked for the costs, citing Whittaker v. Marlar, 1 Cox, 285, where Lord Thurlow says, speaking of a next friend, "whoever will stand forward in that character is to be encouraged to every possible extent to which he can be supposed to intend the infant's benefit." Here the next friend believed the property of the infant was not safe, and he acted on that belief accordingly. The learned counsel also cited Nalder v. Hawkins, 2 Myl. & K., 349, in which Lord Brougham said: "No discouragement ought to be thrown in the way of persons bona fide suing as next friends. * * While they appear to act bona fide they will be protected; the presumption will rather be in their favour; the proof will rather be thrown upon those who impeach the motives; the leaning will be more for than against them." He submitted that if the plaintiff, who had no personal interest in the matter, and who had acted for the benefit of the infants, were not allowed his costs, it would be a very great discouragement to persons likely so to act for the protection of infants.

Chandless, for the present plaintiff, opposed the title to costs, relying on Anderton v. Yeates, 5 De G. & Sim. 202.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—The cases in which the original will has been looked at are cases where the question in dispute is whether a particular word forms the commencement of a new sentence, or whether a stop is omitted, or matters of that description, and not where it is sought, as here, to contradict the probate. I cannot look at the will for such a purpose, unless I am prepared to say, which I am not, that this court is to become a court of probate; and the more so as the will, in the present case, has formed the subject of litigation in the Ecclesiastical Court already. But I am willing to give the party objecting an opportunity of raising the question if he pleases, and will stay the suit, so as to enable him to take such proceedings as he may be advised in the Ecclesiastical Court. If that offer is not accepted, the probate must be considered as conclusive, and the defendant must be considered as a debtor to the estate for the amount claimed. With respect to the costs of the plaintiff in the first claim, it was argued that the refusal of them would be a great discouragement to persons to bring the case of infants before the court. I should be sorry to do that; but it is equally my duty to take care that the friend of an infant's estate is not loaded with unnecessary costs. An inquiry has taken place, at the instance of the plaintiff, as to which suit should go on, and on that inquiry he has failed. I cannot, therefore, allow him the costs of that inquiry. Then, as to the costs of the affidavits which he has filed after the institution of the second suit, that must stand on the same footing; but as this is admitted to be an estate which it is quite proper should be administered by the court, and as he has made the first move, he is entitled to the costs of filing the original claim. Then, as to the furniture, that part of the will is very absurd; but it is the sort of gift that might be expected to be given to daughters during the time they remained single. The direction for sale is "after their deaths," and not after their "death or marriage." I cannot enlarge the words. Then, as to the gift to all the grandchildren, it must be taken as a gift to all the grandchildren who should be in esse at the time of the division of the fund, and the grandchildren would, therefore, take vested interests, subject to be opened to let in any grandchildren who may be born after the testator's death, and before the expiration of the twenty years, which is the period fixed for distribution of the fund.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Reported by FREDERICK BAILEY and C. J. B. HEATHLEY, Esqrs. Barristers-at-Law.

Wednesday, Jan. 19.

ARNOLD v. GAUSSEN AND ANOTHER.

Justice of the peace—Jurisdiction of a county magistrate over an offence in a liberty within the county—Committal to the liberty gaol.

An assault was committed in the liberty of St. Alban, in the county of Hertford, by the plaintiff, who resided in the county, but not in the liberty. He was summoned to appear out of the liberty, but in the county, before county justices, to answer the charge, which he neglected to do. He was then and there convicted upon the evidence given, and fined with costs, which not having been paid, he was ordered to be committed to the liberty gaol and imprisoned; whereupon he brought this action of trespass against the justices, alleging, first, that they had no jurisdiction over the matter; secondly, no jurisdiction to commit to the liberty gaol.

The justices committing were appointed justices for the county under a commission which gave them authority to act as such within the liberty as well as without. The commission under which the justices of the liberty acted did not give them exclusive jurisdiction within the liberty, but the charter 2 Edw. 4 granted to the abbot and convent of St. Alban and their successors right to constitute within the liberty justices to preserve the peace, &c., with a clause prohibiting the justices within the county and other justices within the kingdom from interfering. The 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, put an end to the powers of all grants of liberties to make justices, and enacted that all such should thereafter be made by letters patent under the great seal. The 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 17, only protects the inhabitants from being called on to appear out of the liberty, but does not prohibit county justices from inquiring whether the offence was committed within the liberty. The 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, gives all the privileges appertaining to the then, or thereafter to be, dissolved monasteries to the King, to be under a Court of Augmentation. Subsequently the dissolution of the abbey of St. Alban took place, and then the 32 Hen. 8, c. 20, gave the powers previously existing, which the abbots might have lawfully exercised within three months before, to the King and Court of Augmentation: this Act did not limit the jurisdiction of, or apply to justices appointed by, the Crown after the passing of that Act, as abbots were then prohibited by the 27 Hen. 8 from giving jurisdiction to justices:

Held, that the defendants, as county magistrates, had jurisdiction over the offence, though committed in the liberty.

Held also, that under the 27 Geo. 3, c. 11, they were justified, having jurisdiction over the offence and offender, in committing him to the house of correction for the liberty.

Trespass against the defendants, (two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of Hertford.)

Plea, Not guilty by statute.

The action was tried before Lord Denman at the Spring Assizes for Hertford in 1848, when a verdict was found for the plaintiff, damages 500*l*., subject to the opinion of the court upon a special case, which, in substance, stated that—The defendants were two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of Hertford, and also for the liberty of St. Alban in the same county. The plaintiff was a resident and inhabitant of the parish of Wheathamstead, in the county of Hertford, which parish is not in the liberty of St. Alban. On Aug. 16, 1845, the plaintiff was summoned to appear on Aug. 23 then instant, at the Town Hall, in the town of Hertford, in the county of Hertford, and out of the liberty of St. Alban, before the defendants, to answer a charge of assault upon one Thomas Wakefield, committed at the parish of Sandridge, in the liberty of St. Alban, in the county of Hertford. The plaintiff did not appear according to the exigency of that summons, and, on proof of due service thereof, the defendants, in the absence of the plaintiff, on Aug. 23, 1845, at the Shire Hall, in the town of Hertford aforesaid, and out of the liberty of St. Alban, heard the evidence in support of the said charge; and then and there of the assault so committed within the said liberty convicted the plaintiff in a penalty of 2*l*. 10*s*. and a further sum of 11*s*. 6*d*. for costs: which fine and costs not having been paid immediately after such conviction, the said defendants, then being such justices as aforesaid, afterwards, on the same day, before any notice thereof had been given to the plaintiff, committed the plaintiff to prison, under a commitment signed and sealed by them, on the said 23rd Aug. at the Shire Hall aforesaid. The proceedings were under stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 27. The commitment recited the conviction, and that the defendants had directed that the penalty should be paid to one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of Sandridge, in which the said offence was committed, and that the plaintiff had made default in payment of the penalty and costs. It then required the constables of the police of the county of Hertford to apprehend and convey the plaintiff to the house of correction at St. Albans, and to deliver him to the keeper thereof under this commitment, and in obedience to it the plaintiff was arrested and taken to the common gaol at St. Albans, in the liberty of St. Alban, in the said county, and was there imprisoned for the space of six weeks then next following. The conviction was drawn up according to the form of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 35. Due notice of action was given to the defendants. The liberty of St. Alban was originally created by a charter of King Henry I. to the sixteenth abbot. By a charter of King Edward IV. to the abbot and convent of St. Alban, there was conceded to them and their assigns, among other privileges, a power to appoint justices for the liberty. By statute 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, it is provided that no person shall have any power to make justices of the peace, and that justices shall only be made by letters patent under the King's great seal. By stat. 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, intituled "An Act for the Dissolution of all Monasteries and Abbies," monasteries, abbies, and other ecclesiastical houses, which had been or should at any time be dissolved, or by any other means come to the King, are vested in the Crown to hold in as ample a manner as the late abbots, priors, &c. And by sect. 4 of that statute, the order, survey, and governance of dissolved abbeys and monasteries are appointed in the Court of Augmentation of the Revenues of the Crown. Statute 32 Hen. 8, c. 20, after reciting that items not fully declared by the statutes vesting the order and disposition of the dissolved abbeys and monasteries in the Court of Augmentation of the Revenues of the Crown, how the liberties, privileges, and franchises, which the late owners of the same had used and exercised, should be ordered and put in execution, provides that all such liberties, privileges, franchises, and temporal jurisdiction, should be revived and be in the King's Highness, his heirs and successors, and should be in the order and governance of the King's said Court of Augmentation of the Revenues of his Crown. By charter of the ninth year of James I. his then Majesty granted to George Whitmore and Thomas Whitmore (inter alia) "all that our liberty to the late monastery of St. Alban appertaining, relating, incident, or belonging, in our counties of Hertford, Bedford, and Buckingham, or any of them, with all and singular its rights, &c. in so ample a manner and form as any abbot or prior, &c. of any late abbey or priory ever had, held, used, or enjoyed." The premises comprised in the last-mentioned charter were, shortly after the date thereof, conveyed to Robert, the then Earl of Salisbury, and from him they have descended to the present Marquis of Salisbury. There are and always have been separate commissioners of the peace for the county of Hertford and for the liberty of St. Alban. The justices appointed under the county commission during all the time last aforesaid were authorised generally to keep the peace in the said county of Hertford, and the commission contains these words "as well within liberties as without;" and those appointed under the liberty commission were authorised generally to keep the peace within the liberty. The question for the opinion of the court was whether, under the circumstances, the plaintiff was entitled to recover in this action against the defendants.

Willes (Hawkins with him) appeared for the plaintiffs.—There are two questions in this case: first, whether the defendants, justices of Hertfordshire, had any right to proceed at all, or any jurisdiction over the matter, the assault having been committed within the liberty, and they were exercising their jurisdiction as county justices out of the liberty. He referred to the several statutes herein mentioned, and cited Year Book, 20 Hen. 7, fo. 6-9; Viner's Abr. "D." tit. "Justice of the Peace," pl. 1. The liberty had been treated entirely as out of the county; at one time it was asked to contribute to a repair of roads, but did not. The county justices make their rate on the 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, not including the liberty, and the liberty make theirs on the 58 Geo. 2, c. 18. Secondly, suppose the defendants had power to hear the case, they could not commit to the house of correction for the liberty; the 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 17, must intend the common gaol in the jurisdiction in which the justices are acting. He also referred to 3rd vol. of Stephen's Commentaries, 240; and Rex v. Amos, 2 B. & Ald. 838.

Channell, Serjt. (Cobb with him) contra, cited Com. Dig. "Justice of the Peace," A. 1; Bac. Abr.; Hawkins v. Whitaker, 3 T. R. 279; Rex v. Saunsbury, 4 T. R. 451; and Bates v. Winstanley, 4 M. & Sel. 429, which decide that jurisdiction must be taken away by express words; and upon the second point, assuming the defendants had concurrent jurisdiction, whether they could not commit to the liberty gaol for an offence committed within the liberty: Jones v. Williams, 3 B. & C. 762.] Cur. adv. vult.

Feb. 12.—Parke, B. delivered judgment. This case stated the commission under which the charter, in the first place, was granted to the abbey of St. Alban in the reign of Edward IV., and the commission under which justices of the peace for the county could then hold under the Crown, and the commissions they also held for the liberty under the grantor, and a great number of other documents; also a great number of instances of the exercise of jurisdiction of the magistrates within the liberty. It is not necessary more particularly to advert to them, as I will explain by the judgment of the court, and the reasons on which that judgment is founded. . . . There are two questions in this case: first, whether the defendants, as justices of the county of Hertford, had jurisdiction over an offence committed in the liberty of St. Albans; secondly, whether, on the conviction for the offence, they had power to commit to the liberty house of correction. We are of opinion in favour of the defendants on both points. The defendants were appointed justices for the county under a commission which gave them authority to act as such within the liberty as well as without: therefore they had authority within the liberty of St. Alban's, unless that authority was taken away by the express provisions of the charter constituting the liberty, or some Act of Parliament. That is the principle laid down in Bleakley v. Winstanley, 5 T. R. 279; Rex v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451; Bates v. Winstanley, 4 M. & S. 429. The commission under which the justices of the liberty acted, and which was not set out in the case, does not give them exclusive jurisdiction within the liberty; but the charter of the 2 Edw. 4. granted to the abbot and convent of St. Alban's (inter alia) that they and their successors, by their letters patent, might constitute and assign (for ever, within the towns, hundred, and liberty aforesaid) justices to preserve the peace within their liberty, with a clause "prohibiting the justices of the peace within the county, and all other justices within the kingdom, in any way to interfere with the justices so appointed. The justices of the peace appointed by the abbot and convent under the charter would undoubtedly have had exclusive jurisdiction within the liberty. Then comes the statute 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, which put an end to the powers of all grants of liberties to make inter alia justices of the peace, and enacted that all such justices should thereafter be made by letters patent under the great seal; and the powers, therefore, of the abbot and convent ceased. After this Act the justices constituted by the crown by letters patent would have no exclusive jurisdiction unless their patent gave it to them, which the patent of the justices of the liberty does not, or unless there is some legislative provision expressly or impliedly to that effect. The 17th section of the statute 27 Hen. 8 is suggested, on the part of the plaintiff, to have this effect. The 16th section had provided that the justices appointed by the crown should have power to hold their session and to do and execute all other things within the liberty, as any other justices of the peace within any shire. This clause gave them no exclusive jurisdiction. The 17th section provides, that all justices of the peace thereafter to be made by the Crown shall sit and hold their sessions in the same places as the justices of the liberty commonly used, and that no person or persons within the said liberties, or any of them, should thereafter in anywise be compelled, by authority of this Act, to appear out of the said liberties before any other justice of assize, gaol delivery, or of the peace, than before such justices as shall be named and assigned to sit and be by the King's Highness, his heirs and successors, within the said liberties, in form aforesaid." This clause, according to its express terms, only protects the inhabitants from being called on to appear out of the liberty; but it does not prohibit county justices from inquiring, as the charter of King Edward IV. did, whether the offence was committed within the liberty, neither by express words nor by necessary implication. After the passing of this Act, then, the Crown might clearly appoint justices for the county, who might exercise jurisdiction over the liberty so long as the provisions of the 27 Hen. 8 were not violated. Then follows the statute 31 Hen. 8, c. 15, which enacts, that the king shall enjoy all the privileges and franchises that shall be appertaining to the then dissolved monasteries or those that should thereafter be dissolved, in as large and ample a manner and form as the abbots have held or ought to have held the same at the time of their coming to the King's hands; and it was enacted that they should be under the order of a court of augmentation. After the passing of this Act, namely, on the 5th Dec. 1539, the dissolution of the abbey of St. Alban's took place, and then, by an Act passed in the 32 Hen. 8, c. 20, after reciting the liberties, &c. of divers monasteries in divers counties that had been assigned to the King's Court of Augmentation, by which statutes it is not fully declared how and in what wise, and by what special officers, &c. the liberties, privileges and franchises which the late owners of the same sites, &c. had used and exercised, should be ordered, used, and exercised, it was enacted "that the same liberties, privileges, and temporal jurisdictions which the said late owners had used and exercised lawfully by themselves, or by their officers or ministers, or might have used or exercised within three months next before the same sites, &c. came to the hands of the King, should be revived in the King's hands, and be in the rule, order, and governance of the Court of Augmentation; and that the same liberties, franchises, privileges, and temporal jurisdictions, &c. should be used, exercised, and occupied to all intents and purposes by such stewards, bailiffs, and other officers and ministers as the King should appoint, in like manner as they were lawfully exercised by the ministers before they came to the hands of the Crown, and that the same steward should account for the revenues in the Court of Augmentation." No question arises in this case whether the right of appointing justices of the peace for the liberty was at the time, by the operation of the Act 31 Hen. 8, and 32 Hen. 8, in the grantee of the Crown of the liberties, namely, to Whitmore first, and afterwards the Marquis of Salisbury, as no such question could be made; for the stat. 32 Hen. 8 revived those rights only in the Crown which the abbots had lawfully exercised within three months before the site of the abbey of St. Alban's came to the Crown, and the right of the abbot to appoint justices was taken away by the 27 Hen. 8. Then it was said the effect of the later statute, the 32 Hen. 8, is to give to the justices of the liberty, when appointed by the Crown, the same exclusive jurisdiction as those appointed by the abbot had whilst they lawfully exercised the power of appointment. But we are all of opinion that this statute does not apply to justices of the peace appointed by the Crown after the passing of that Act; for the Act applies only to such privileges, franchises, and temporal jurisdictions as the abbots had used and exercised, or might have lawfully done, within the said limits of three months; and the abbots did not and could not lawfully exercise, or the justices appointed by them, any jurisdiction within the liberty, inasmuch as they were prohibited by the statute 27 Hen. 8. The only object of the Act appears to have been the collecting of revenue, and applies to officers concerned in its receipt. The defendants, sitting therefore as county magistrates, and having jurisdiction over the offence, though committed in the liberty, the only remaining question is, whether they can lawfully commit for an offence to the liberty house of correction. By the 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 27, under which Act the information is laid, the justices might commit, provided the fine and costs are not paid as ordered, to the gaol or house of correction. No reliance, however, was placed on these precise words by Serjt. Channell in his argument for the defendants; but he contended that the power was given by the Act 27 Geo. 3, c. 11, which provides "that it shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace within his or their respective jurisdictions to commit either to the common gaol or to any house of correction within his or their respective jurisdictions, as to such justice or justices shall seem most proper, such vagrants and other criminal offenders and persons charged with or convicted of small offences, as by any law now in force or hereafter to be made he or they is or are or shall be authorised to commit to the common gaol." We think the defendants were justified under this enactment. The house of correction for the liberty is locally within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, for they have concurrent jurisdiction over the liberty with the liberty magistrates; therefore the case falls within the words of the Act. And, besides, it is highly reasonable that those who have committed offences within the liberty should be punished at the expense of the liberty. We see no reason to believe that the Legislature meant to confine the power of commitment to those houses of correction over which the sitting justices have superintendence and control. The county magistrates have performed their duty by hearing and deciding the case, and as soon as a conviction took place they were functus officio. For these reasons, we think that the defendants, the county justices, had jurisdiction over the offence and the offender, and were justified in committing him to the liberty house of correction. Therefore, the verdict must be entered for them. It will be observed that we place no reliance on the several instances of the exercise of jurisdiction by the county magistrates over matters arising within the liberty. It is unnecessary to advert to them, as they are set out at some length in the special case, and do not form the ground of our judgment. Verdict to be entered for the defendants.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

ERROR FROM THE EXCHEQUER.

Monday, Nov. 29.

(Before Coleridge, Maule, Cresswell, Wightman, Erle, Williams, Talfourd, and Crompton, JJ.)

Hayling v. O'Key and another.

Pleading—Assault—Trespass.

Declaration in trespass for an assault and injury to the plaintiff's clothes.

Plea, justifying the trespass in defence of the possession and quiet enjoyment of a dwelling-house of one Walter de Winton, and by his command.

New assignment, alleging the trespass to have been committed, not at the dwelling-house, but in and upon a certain bridge, in a certain farm, called Bengrove farm, and in divers, to wit, two yards, two fields, and two folds, parcel of the same farm; and for another and different purpose.

Plea to new assignment, stating the possession of the whole of the before-mentioned premises in De Winton, and justifying the trespass newly assigned by removing the plaintiff therefrom, and that they did then remove him from and off the said bridge, yards, fields, and folds, and did then take him by the nearest and most direct way to a certain public highway near to the said dwelling-house, bridge, yard, &c. as they lawfully might; and because defendants could not conveniently take the plaintiff to such highway without passing over and across the said bridge, yards, &c. defendants did at the same time, when, &c. necessarily and unavoidably, for the purpose aforesaid, lead the plaintiff over and across the said yards, fields, and folds, and thereby then unavoidably committed the said several trespasses so newly assigned.

Replication, stating the seisin in fee of De Winton of the said farm, and a demise thereof to one Wm. James as tenant from year to year, determinable at the pleasure of either; and James being possessed and indebted to one Brewer, and desirous of a further advance, James, by indenture, granted to Brewer all the growing and other crops there, and all other articles of the same description as those enumerated, which might be subsequently acquired therein, or found in or about the same premises from time to time thereafter, until and before the indenture should be put in force, that Brewer on default, after notice, might take possession; and default being made and notice given, it showed a right as between James and Brewer for the latter to put the deed in force, and averred that the bridge, yard, field, and fold in the new assignment mentioned, and also a certain garden, was parcel of the farm demised to James; the only way of access to and from the garden, and to and from the highway, was by and over the bridge, and there was a way from the highway across the said yard, field, and fold from and to the said bridge, and from and to certain other fields, parcel of the said farm, and that this was the more direct and convenient way to and from the highway, from and to the same bridge, and from and to the said fields; that at the time in the new assignment mentioned, De Winton was also possessed of the garden and the last-mentioned fields, in which there were growing and other crops belonging at the execution of the indenture to James, and included in the indenture, and also other crops unpaid for and belonging to James after the date of the indenture; that during the continuance of the term, whilst James was in possession, and before De Winton was possessed, plaintiff, as Brewer's servant, entered and took and continued in possession of the growing crops until and after De Winton became and was possessed of the bridge, yard, &c. in the plea mentioned, and the garden and other fields last mentioned; that he was removed by defendants from the bridge as in the plea mentioned before a reasonable time had elapsed, and while the debt remained due, though he produced the indenture, and gave defendants notice of the purpose for which he was in possession.

Demurrer to the replication.

Held, that the replication was bad, as it did not state how the tenancy had terminated, nor show the kind of crops, nor allege any continuing title to them in the tenant after the expiration of the tenancy; nor did it show, supposing Brewer was entitled to them after the interests of the tenancy in the premises had determined, that they were ripe or fit for harvesting, or that in their then state they needed any care or cultivation, for which the plaintiff continuing in possession was necessary,—and unless Brewer was entitled to remain on the premises, and retain possession against the will of the owner, which he was not, after James's tenancy had ended, independently of these special circumstances, the replication showed no sufficient title.

A party who insists upon remaining on the land of another against his will, and therefore prima facie against right, ought to show all the circumstances which make such possession lawful and abridge the general rights of property.

Macnamara appeared for the plaintiff in error (the plaintiff below) in support of the replication, he contended also that the plea was bad.

H. J. Hodgson, for the defendant, in support of the demurrer.

The facts and circumstances of the case, together with the pleadings in the action as well as the effect of the arguments by the learned counsel thereon, are so fully set forth in the following judgment, that it becomes unnecessary here to repeat them.

Cur. adv. vult.

Feb. 2.—Coleridge, J. delivered judgment. In this case judgment passed for the defendant below, upon the replication to the plea to a new assignment: and upon the argument before us in error, it was contended, first, that the plea itself was bad. The declaration was in trespass for an assault and injury to the plaintiff's clothes: the plea justified the trespass,

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

in defence of the possession and quiet enjoyment of a dwelling-house of one Walter De Winton, and by his command. The new assignment stated the trespass to have been committed out of and in a different place from the dwelling-house, to wit, in and upon a certain bridge, in a certain farm called Bengrove farm, in the parish of Sandhurst, in the county of Gloucester, and in divers, to wit, two yards, two fields, and two folds, parcel of the same farm; and for another and different purpose. The plea to the new assignment on which the first question arose, states the possession by the said Walter De Winton of the dwelling-house, and also the said bridge, yards, fields, and folds in the new assignment mentioned, which belonged and appertained to the said dwelling-house, and were adjacent thereto. It then justifies the trespass newly assigned, and in defence of the possession of the dwelling-house, bridge, yards, fields, and folds, by removing the plaintiff from them. If it had stopped there, no objection, as we are aware of, except perhaps in point of form, could have been made to it; but it goes on to allege—"And also then gently laid their hands upon the plaintiff for the purpose of removing, and did then remove, from and off the said bridge, yards, fields, and folds, and did gently lead him by the nearest and most direct way to a certain public highway near to the said dwelling-house, bridge, yards, fields, and folds, as they lawfully might for the cause aforesaid; and because the defendants could not conveniently take and remove the plaintiff to such highway as aforesaid without passing over and across the said bridge, and over and across the said yards, fields, and folds, the defendants did, at the same time, when, &c. in the said new assignment mentioned, necessarily and unavoidably, and for the purpose aforesaid, lead the plaintiff over and across the said yards, fields, and folds, and thereby then unavoidably committed the said several trespasses above newly assigned." The objection relied on by the plaintiff is this: that the places in which the trespasses are alleged by the new assignment to have been committed, are immaterial (being laid under a videlicet); that the plea, by introducing a new trespass in taking the plaintiff to a highway, has made that a part of the cause of action, which it was necessary to justify, and that the plea shows no justification extending to that, because it was not shown the highway adjoined either the dwelling-house, bridge, yards, fields, or folds, or that, in order to the removal from them, it was necessary to take the plaintiff up the highway. Assuming the new assignment does not make the places mentioned in it material except so far as it excludes the place mentioned in the original plea (that is, the dwelling-house), and that the places are made material for the first time by the plea to the new assignment, which relies on the local justification, it is plain that the plea only intends to confess the trespass committed on the bridge, yards, fields, and folds, and to justify them as committed in defence of Walter De Winton's possession of them; and this removal to the highway upon the face of the plea has no necessary connection, and the confession of it may be regarded as surplusage. Suppose, instead of replying, as he has done, in the matter, the plaintiff had replied de injuriâ, all that would have been in issue would have been so much of the justification as applied to the trespass in and upon the bridge, fields, yards, and folds, which shows that that is the only material part of the plea. For this Atkinson v. Warren, 1 C. M. & R. Rep. 627, is an authority, where the declaration charged one assault, and the plea confessed and justified that and also a second; and the plaintiff replied de injuriâ: on the trial the justification to the first assault was proved, but no evidence was offered in support of that of the second; and it was held that the plea was sustained. Dicas v. Chapman, 2 M. & G. 921, is in point to the same effect; nor do we think, material to the plea, the allegation of taking over the place named in it, as done in order to remove the plaintiff to the highway, without stating any necessity for such removal, because the plea alleges a good cause for all the trespasses of which the plaintiff complains. It is necessary, therefore, to consider the goodness of the replication. This commences with stating the seisin of Walter de Winton in fee of the Bengrove farm, and the demise of it to one William James, as tenant from year to year, determinable at the pleasure of either. James then had become possessed, and being so possessed and indebted to one Brewer in a certain sum, and being desirous of a further advance, by indenture granted to him among other things all the growing and other crops there in and about Bengrove farm, and all other articles of the same description as those enumerated, which might be subsequently acquired by him, or which might be [illegible] or upon or about the same premises from time to time and at all times, until, and before the indenture should be put in force. The grant was the security for principal and interest, and the instrument contained a power for Brewer on default in payment, after notice, peaceably to take them into his own possession, and the subsequently acquired property and the growing and other crops being specially included. The replication then showed a default in him and a right, as between James and Brewer, for the latter to put the deed in force, and averred that the bridge, yard, field, and folds in the new assignment mentioned, and also a certain garden, was in and upon and parcel of the farm demised to James. The only way of access to and from the garden, and from and to the same highway, was by and over the bridge, and then there was a way from the highway across the said yard, field, and folds from and to the said bridge, and from and to certain other fields parcel to the said farm, and that this was the more direct and convenient way to and from the highway, from and to the same bridge, and from and to the said fields. It then states, that at the time of the new assignment mentioned, De Winton was also possessed of a garden, and the last-mentioned fields, in which there were growing and other crops belonging at the execution of the indenture to James, and included in the indenture; and also other subsequent growing and other crops acquired by and belonging to James after the date of the indenture. It then states that, during the continuance of the term, and while James was in possession, and before Walter de Winton was possessed, the plaintiff, as Brewer's servant, entered and took possession, and continued in possession of the said growing crops until and after Walter de Winton became and was possessed of the bridge, yard, fields, and folds in the plea mentioned, and the garden and other fields last-mentioned; and that he was removed by the defendants from and off the bridge as in the plea mentioned, before a reasonable time had elapsed, and while the debt remained unpaid, and though he produced the indenture, and gave the defendant notice of the purpose for which he was in possession. This replication, therefore, stands upon the right of a person claiming under a tenant from year to year, who had entered during the tenancy in order to possess himself by grant from him of growing crops, the property of the tenant at the time of the entry, and to remain on the premises, and to retain possession of such crops after the tenancy has expired, and after the landlord has resumed possession; but it does not state how the tenancy had come to an end, and there is no presumption of a determination by the landlord rather than the tenant. Nor does it show the kind of crops, nor allege any continuing title to them in the tenant after the expiration of the tenancy; nor does it show, supposing that Brewer was entitled to them, after the interests of the tenant in the premises had determined, and that they were right or fit for harvesting, or that in their present state they needed any care or cultivation for which the plaintiff's continuing in possession was necessary. If, therefore, his right to be on the premises depended on any circumstance of this kind, the replication is defective for not stating it, because it is clear that a party who insists on remaining on the land of another against his will, and therefore prima facie against right, ought to show all the circumstances to make such possession lawful and abridge the general rights of property. Unless Brewer was entitled to remain on the premises and retain possession against the will of the owner after James's tenancy had ended, independent of such special circumstances as we have alluded to, without expressing any opinion whether these or any of them would have availed, the replication shows no sufficient title, and we are clearly of opinion he was not. We think, therefore, the judgment of the court below was right, and ought to be affirmed.

Judgment below affirmed.

ELECTION COMMITTEES.

Election Committees.

Reported by JAMES PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

TAVISTOCK, 1853.

(Chairman—LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR.)

This was a petition against one of the sitting members (Samuel Carter, Esq.) on the ground of want of qualification.

Practice—Ordering member out of court.

The committee will not order the sitting member petitioned against out of court during the hearing of the petition against him, but will allow him to use his own discretion in remaining.

Alexander, Q. C. (Lopes with him) stated, that as Mr. Carter was liable under the recent Evidence Act to be called as a witness, he must be treated as other witnesses, and ought to leave the room. This was the rule in courts of law, as was seen in a recent case (R. v. Newman) in the Q. B. It was usual since the recent Evidence Act for the plaintiffs and defendants to be excluded. There was no ground for making the present case an exception.

Thomas, Serjt. (Jenkins and Lawrence with him), contrà.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Committee do not wish to lay down any special rule on the subject, but decide that Mr. Carter might use his own discretion, whether he ought to remain in court or withdraw.

[In subsequent cases other committees have followed this example, and the member petitioned against is always allowed to remain in court.]

The petition stated that the petitioner and Mr. Carter and another were candidates for Tavistock at the last election, and that on the nomination day petitioner required Mr. Carter to subscribe a declaration of qualification pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 48. On the day of the poll, before the polling took place, petitioner circulated amongst the electors, and posted on the Guildhall and polling place due notice, that Mr. Carter's qualification had been questioned, and would be impeached before a committee of the House of Commons. Mr. Carter, on the same morning, circulated and handed to the portreeve and returning officer the following signed declaration:

I, A. C. do solemnly and sincerely declare, that I am to the best of my knowledge and belief duly qualified to be elected as a member of the House of Commons, according to the true intent and meaning of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 48, and that my qualification to be so elected doth arise out of leasehold houses and tenements, annuities, and shares in joint-stock companies, moneys, goods, and chattels as hereunder set forth, leasehold houses, tenements, tan-yards, and premises in the parish of Tavistock, of which not less than thirteen years are unexpired, an annuity in the Plymouth Tontine, shares in the Tavistock Gas Company, an annuity for life secured by deed, moneys, goods, and chattels in Tavistock and London.

SAMUEL CARTER.

That some of the first voters for Mr. Carter, on coming to the poll, were personally cautioned that their votes would be thrown away if they voted for Mr. C., and that thereupon Mr. Carter agreed with petitioner that the same notice should be held to be given to all the subsequent voters. That previously to the portreeve announcing the result of the poll, petitioner protested against Mr. Carter being declared elected. That the declaration of qualification is vague and insufficient, and untrue, and that the election of Mr. C. was void, and petitioner ought to be declared duly elected.

Burden of proof of qualification.

A declaration of qualification by a candidate, made under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 48, stated vaguely the nature of the property out of which the qualification arose:

Held, nevertheless, that it lay on the petitioner to impugn the qualification, before any proof could be demanded from the sitting member.

Alexander objected that the onus lay on the sitting member to prove his qualification. The objection to the qualification here lies on the face of the petition, which sets forth the declaration. Since the repeal of the standing order of 1717, the whole subject of qualification is now regulated by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 48. This declaration is clearly an evasion of the statute. It gives no information whatever. Thus one item is said to be an annuity on the Plymouth Tontine, but it does not state in whose name the annuity stands, nor to whom, or how, or when it was granted. So with the other items. In the West Gloucestershire case, P. R. & Dew. 10, the most ample and minute information was given. The present proceeding is analogous to that at law under the Apothecaries Act, where it is held that the association are not bound to prove that the party has no qualification.

Thomas, Serjt. contrà.

The CHAIRMAN.—The committee are of opinion that the petitioner must go on with his case and impugn the qualification before any proof is required of the sitting member.

Petition, form of.

It is no objection to a petition that it mis-states that there were three candidates, while there were in reality four.

Thomas, Serjt. objected that the petition was invalid, inasmuch as it set forth that there were only three candidates, whereas it appeared from the poll-books that there were four. It was of vital importance that all the names of the candidates should appear.

Alexander, contrà. Overruled.

Petition, form of.

It is no objection that the petitioner omitted to allege in his petition that he himself was duly qualified.

The CHAIRMAN.—The objection cannot be sustained.

Notice to electors of meeting's non-qualification.

A notice posted on the Guildhall and polling-place before the polling takes place, coupled with notoriety, is a sufficient notice to the electors that their votes will be thrown away if given to the candidate alleged to be non-qualified.

Jenkins objected that there was no sufficient proof of notice to the electors in this case, without which their votes could not be held as thrown away. It had been alleged that some of the voters were personally served with notice, and that Mr. Carter agreed to hold this as notice to all the rest; but there was no proof of the fact, and even if there were, he could not bind the electors by his assent.

Lopes, contrà.—The notice was sufficient. Printed handbills were posted on the Guildhall and on the polling-place, and were circulated amongst the electors, besides which the subject was the common talk of the town. After such notice, the votes given for Mr. Carter were clearly thrown away: (Pyle case, 1 Lud. 455; Horsham case, P. R. & Dew. 257; R. v. Hawkins, 10 East, 211; Clough v. Evelyn, 5 Barn. & Ald. 81.) [THE CHAIRMAN.—It is a question of law whether a personal service on each elector is necessary.] It appears from the authorities that there is no necessity for a personal service: (Rogers on Elect.; Clerk on Elect.) Notices publicly given have been often held good: (2nd Canterbury case, Cliff. 353; Flintshire case, 1 Peck, 326; Wakefield case, Bar. & Aust. 270; Belfast case, Flin. & Kale. 595; Cork County, K. & C. 598; Newcastle, Bar. & Aust. 576; Horsham, P. R. & Dew. 255.)

The CHAIRMAN.—We think the notes in this case was sufficient.

Mr. Carter's election declared void. Petitioner seated.

Hearsay evidence.

The statement made by a voter in the course of the day on which he had given his vote, as to how he came by a sum of money in his possession, is admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing that he had received money for his vote.

A. was a voter alleged to be bribed, and B. was his master, who was called as a witness for the petitioners. Witness was about to be asked what account A. gave of how he had come by a sum of money which he had shortly after he had voted, when

J. Clerk, for the sitting member (Sir R. Pigot), objected. The statements of A. after the transaction as to what took place are inadmissible. The committees have greatly varied as to the admissibility of this kind of evidence. The voter is not the agent of the sitting member, and yet it is now attempted to give in evidence his account of something that had taken place, in order to affect the sitting member. Anything said by the voter before the election was, no doubt, admissible to show the corrupt contract on which he acted; but, after the election, the case was different. The object is to make the voter's story be believed. Why then ought not the voter himself to be called? To allow this evidence violates the well-known principle, that no evidence is to be admitted except upon oath. It is said it is admissible because it is part of the res gestæ; but in such cases it is essential that the statement accompanying some act of the party should not only be relevant, but be such as to explain the act, as one which would otherwise be doubtful: (Taylor on Evid.) It is well established in law that, in cases of conspiracy, the account which A., B., or C. may give the day after of the share which he had in the conspiracy is inadmissible.

E. James, Q. C. (with whom Hawkins), contrà.—Evidence of this kind has generally been admitted by committees. The present is not a case at all analogous to one of conspiracy, where there are necessarily only two parties—prosecutor and defendant; but here there are a variety of parties. The real issue here is, what number of votes were bribed? Now what a voter said on producing a sum of money with which he had been bribed, is not only material evidence, but it is the most cogent proof of the fact that can possibly be offered. We do not seek to affect the sitting member by such evidence; as against him it cannot be received; but we offer it under the issue, which is, was this voter bribed? Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are of opinion that the evidence proposed is admissible for the purpose of showing that A. had received money for his vote.

Evidence—Broken promise—Bribery.

A witness, who was a voter alleged to be bribed, had promised candidate A. his vote, but afterwards candidate B. promised him a situation, and ultimately he was out of the way and did not vote at all:

Held, he may be asked "What induced you to break your promise to candidate A.?"

This was a petition on ground of bribery.

Witness, Hogg, stated that some time before the election, he promised his vote to Admiral Stirling (the defeated candidate), but afterwards Sir Frederick Smith (the sitting member petitioned against) promised him a situation; and, at the time of the election, witness had been sent to look after a situation at a distance, and did not vote at all.

Kinglake (and Romaine) for the petitioners, then asked, "What induced you to break your promise to vote for Admiral Stirling?"

Bodkin, for the sitting member, objected to the question.

Kinglake.—The question is proper. No one can answer it but the voter. It is essential to this inquiry to know under what state of mind it was that the voter acted as he did. The Committee will then be able to form an estimate as to whether it was not the understanding between witness and Sir F. Smith, that witness should not vote for Admiral Stirling. It is clearly bribery, if the promise of a situation operated on the mind of the voter, so as to induce him to forbear voting for an opposite candidate: (Rogers on Elect. 99.)

Bodkin, contrà.—The question is illegal and dangerous. It is said the witness is the proper person to answer it, but the proper persons to answer it are the Committee themselves. We must not probe the motives of the witness. All that we have to do is to ascertain facts, and leave the Committee to draw their inferences. It is not the duty of the witness to put his construction on the facts. Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—We think the question may be put.

Witness then answered that he was induced to break his promise because Sir F. Smith, who had promised him a situation, told him it would be better for him not to vote at all.

FROME, 1853.

(Chairman—Mr. G. A. HAMILTON.)

Disqualification—New place of profit under Crown.

The Secretaryship of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick is a new office or place of profit under the Crown, created since 1700, within the meaning of 6 Anne, c. 7, and disqualifies the holder for being elected a member of Parliament.

This was a petition against the sitting member, the Hon. Robert Edward Boyle, on the ground of disqualification from holding a new office or place of profit under the Crown, within 6 Anne, c. 7, and praying that the petitioner should be declared duly elected. The petition stated that R. E. Boyle and Robert Westley Hall Dare, the petitioner, were the two and only candidates for Frome in July 1852. They were duly put in nomination, and a show of hands took place, when the majority was declared in favour of R. E. Boyle. But before the returning officer had so declared the majority, a notice, signed by the petitioner and two of the electors, was publicly and on the hustings delivered to the returning officer. This document purported to be a public notice that R. E. Boyle was incapable of being elected, or sitting, or voting as a member of the House of Commons, inasmuch as he then held the office of Secretary of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick, which was a new office or place of profit under the Crown, within 6 Anne, c. 7, and, accordingly, that all votes given in favour of R. E. Boyle would be absolutely thrown away. The petitioner at the same time also showed the returning officer a list of the officers of the Order of St. Patrick, under the hand of the Ulster King-at-Arms, in which list Mr. Boyle's name appeared as secretary. The petitioner and an elector then protested against the show of hands being declared in favour of the said R. E. Boyle, and petitioner claimed to be declared duly elected. Before Mr. Boyle was declared elected, he made a speech to the electors, in which he admitted that he held the office in question. The returning officer, thereafter, nevertheless declared R. E. Boyle to be duly elected, and no poll was demanded by the petitioner.

The petition also alleged that the disqualification, incapacity, and ineligibility of R. E. Boyle was at and before the election a matter of notoriety amongst all the electors, and at the time of the show of hands the electors had notice of the same. That therefore the show of hands in favour of R. E. Boyle ought to be treated as a nullity, and the petitioner ought to have been declared duly elected.

The first question was, whether the Secretaryship of the Order of St. Patrick was a place of profit under the Crown? It was proved that the Order of St. Patrick was created in 1783; but not that any fiat of the Crown ever existed, or at least was signed, or that letters patent ever were granted. The Sovereign of the Realm is the Sovereign of the Order, and the Lord Lieutenant is the Grand Master. Mr. Boyle was appointed secretary by sign-manual of the Sovereign in 1837. He took an oath, and was duly invested by the chapter of the order. There is no salary attached to the office; but the secretary is entitled, under the statutes of the order, to about 50*l.* in name of fees on the creation of each knight. There had been two or three such creations since 1837; and the fees had been duly paid to Mr. Boyle.

Wrangham, Serjt. and Montagu Smith, for the petitioner.—This is a new office within the meaning of 6 Anne, c. 7, because it was created in 1783. It is also a place of profit. The amount of profit is immaterial, nor is a salary necessary, provided the secretary be entitled (as he is here) to certain fees. It is not material that the fees are paid by individuals, and not by the Crown. Thus an appointment of steward to a Crown manor is not the less a place of profit under the Crown, though the fees are paid by the tenants. It is therefore immaterial from what source the profit comes, provided the Crown appoint to the office. The appointment here is directly under the Crown, and flows from the Sovereign as Sovereign of the Realm, and not merely as Sovereign of the Order. The appointment is by virtue of the prerogative of the Crown. The ordinances of the Order direct certain fees to be paid to "our secretary of our Order of," &c. showing clearly that the secretary is an officer of the Crown. Those who were disqualified to be elected in the Irish Parliament were by 41 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 1, rendered equally disqualified for election in the Imperial Parliament, and there has been no enabling statute passed since.

H. S. Wilde (with whom Kinglake, Serjt.) for the sitting member.—Of the last four secretaries of the Order, three have sat in Parliament unchallenged, and the present secretary has also sat several years, which raises the presumption, that it is not a disqualifying office. The secretary of this Order is not an officer of the Crown, but merely an officer of the Order. The individual only is designated by the Crown, but it is the chapter of the Order who invests him with the office. Besides, the Crown acts not as Sovereign of the Realm, but merely as Sovereign of the Order, and it is a mere accident that the two characters are united in one individual. The sole object and policy of the disqualifying Acts, including those prior to 6 Anne, c. 7, was to prevent those in the public service and receiving public money, from being concerned in voting the taxes out of which the money was to be paid. But this is not a public office or connected with the public service, and even if it were a public office, the profit comes from individuals, and not from the public: (Rogers on Elect. 58.) The Order of St. Patrick is a strictly private society. The society merely invests the secretary with the office, in obedience to the nomination of the Sovereign of the Order, who is acting under the statutes of the Order. It cannot be said, because the Crown has the nomination, that therefore it is a public place of profit under the Crown. If so, any professor appointed in a university, or an officer appointed by the Crown as visitor of an eleemosynary institution, would be disqualified. The mere nomination by the Crown therefore does not make the appointee an officer of the Crown. Many cases in the journals of the House of Commons confirm this. Thus a governor of Greenwich Hospital (16 H. of C. Jour. 486), one appointed a commissary by the Crown, (17 Id. 374), an envoy to Vienna, (18 Id. 285), a secretary to the Court of the Naval Officers' Widows' Association (23 Id. 473), a governor of the Isle of Wight (18 Id. 27, 30) were not disqualified. But the stat. 6 Anne, c. 7, applies only to offices held under the Crown of England, whereas this office is held under the Crown of Ireland. It is an Irish dignity and an Irish office, the effect of which distinction was seen in the Reading case, Corb. & Dan. 114. The stat. 41 Geo. 3, c. 52, was passed after the union, to show the exact class of persons disqualified to sit in the Imperial Parliament; but while the Irish Parliament had passed a similar Act to the English Act 6 Anne, c. 7, yet the secretary of the Order of St. Patrick was not disqualified to sit in the Irish Parliament; and that stat. 41 Geo. 3, c. 52, merely renders those who had been disqualified to sit in Ireland also disqualified in the Imperial Parliament. Further, this is not an office under the Crown, otherwise the office would be at an end by the demise of the Crown. Thus at common law the judges would cease to be so by the demise of the Crown, but for a special statute.

Montague Smith replied.—It is said this is not an office under the Sovereign of the Realm, but only under the Sovereign of the Order; but the Sovereign is Sovereign of the Order qua Sovereign of the Realm. The very form of the document appointing the secretary is signed "Victoria Regina," and countersigned by "J. Russell," then Home Secretary. The Crown directs the chapter to invest the secretary; but the case does not differ from directing a bishop to induct a clergyman into a benefice, or what takes place when a dean is constituted. In each of these cases the appointment is by the party making the nomination. The cases cited from the Journals of the House of Commons, when examined, do not apply; but there are others which do. Thus the Gaster King-at-Arms was found disqualified in 1717. It is said that it is the Crown of Ireland, and not of England, under which the office is held; but it may be as well said that the Attorney-General of Lancaster holds his office not under the Crown, but under the Duchess of Lancaster, which her Majesty is. There is no separate Crown of Ireland at all. The Imperial Crown existed long before the Legislatures of the two countries were united, as the Act of Union (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67, s. 2) clearly shows. The stat. 6 Anne, c. 7, applies to all offices held under the Crown, wherever those offices were held, and made no distinction between the Crown of Ireland and that of England. Thus the Attorney-General for Ireland, when appointed in 1711, became disqualified to sit for Derby (17 H. of C. Jour. 6), under the 6 Anne, c. 7, s. 26.

Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—The committee are of opinion "that the office of secretary to the most illustrious Order of St. Patrick is an office or place of profit under the Crown, created since 21st Oct. 1705, and that Colonel the Hon. Edward Boyle, by reason of holding such office, was not capable of being elected a burgess for the borough of Frome at the last election."

Monday, Feb. 28.

Disqualification—Going to the poll.

A candidate cannot petition for the seat made vacant by reason of the sitting member holding a disqualifying office, unless he allege that he went to the poll.

Semble, the nomination of a candidate holding a disqualifying office cannot be treated by the legal candidate as a mere nullity.

As regards the qualifications of candidates, the returning officer acts ministerially and not judicially.

Counsel for petitioners were then about to proceed with the second branch of the case, when

Kinglake objected.—This inquiry was divided into two branches. First, Whether Mr. Boyle was disqualified. Secondly, If so, whether the petitioner is entitled to the seat. The first point having been determined, we object to the second being gone into, for three reasons; first, no poll was demanded by the petitioner, and therefore there was no means of prosecuting the inquiry. Secondly, it appears on the face of the petition, that no notice was given of Mr. Boyle's disqualification till after the view of hands was taken, which is the same thing in effect, as if no notice had been given till after the polling was over. Thirdly, because this is substantially an inquiry affecting the votes of the electors. Each vote is a separate case, and requires a separate decision, and we have not been served with any list of the votes alleged to be thrown away.

ELECTION COMMITTEES.

Montague Smith objected, that this was going into the merits of the petition, which ought not to be allowed till he had finished his case.

The CHAIRMAN.—We think, as the objections go to the question whether this petition can be carried further, they ought to be disposed of in the first instance, and we desire the counsel for the sitting member to confine themselves as much as possible to the first point, viz. that the petitioner ought to have demanded a poll.

Kingdale and Wilde.—An election by a view, i. e. by a show of hands, was the primitive mode, and is perfectly good in the absence of a poll being demanded: (Rogers on Elect. C., and notes.) Before the Reform Act, the returning officer had it in his power to enter into a scrutiny if there was a poll, but not if no poll was ever demanded. It is now imperative on the returning officer to grant a poll whenever it is demanded; but before that Act a scrutiny was never demanded except in a case where a poll was demanded. He has, however, no judicial power whatever in the matter, but acts merely ministerially. A poll is the only way of ascertaining with precision the exact number of voters. Now, the petitioner here not having demanded a poll, he has no means of making out his title to a seat except by satisfying the Committee that the number of those who showed their hands for Mr. Boyle in a legal way, i. e. who had no notice of his disqualification, was less than the number of those who showed their hands for the petitioner. A vote cannot be destroyed or set aside, unless you can prove a notice to the voter. The returning officer, acting only ministerially, had no power to determine the qualification of a candidate any more than he had power to scrutinise the votes of the electors. It cannot, therefore, be said, that he was bound to know that Mr. Boyle was disqualified for election. What means, therefore, can exist for now reviewing the view taken at the hustings? The law allows the candidate every means of carrying out the election to a poll, which is the only certain test by which he can try his right. No doubt it was intended in the present case to go to the poll, but this step was not taken. Then it will be said that the notice here was sufficient, because the fact of Mr. Boyle being disqualified was quite notorious. But all that notoriety can do is merely to supersede the necessity of express personal notice, and is no more than an equivalent to it; and it is equally clear that the notice or the notoriety must exist before the votes are given, otherwise it cannot be held that the votes are thrown away. All the cases show that, before a vote can be set aside, notice, or its equivalent, notoriety, must be proved: (Flint case, 1 Peck. 526; Fife, 1 Lud. 455; 2nd Southwark, Cliff. 180; Cork County, K. & D. 391; Drogheda, Id. 211; Leominster, Corb. & Dan. 15; Wakefield, Bar. & Aust. 270; 2nd Newcastle-under-Lyme, Bar. & Aust. 576; Belfast, F. & F. 593; R. v. Bridge, 1 M. & S. 76; 2nd Horsham, P. R. Dew. 257.) Here the notice, according to the petition itself, was not given till after the view of hands, which, in the absence of a poll, means that it was not given till after the election, and therefore the votes could not be thrown away: (Rowe on Elections.)

Montagu Smith, contrà.—This is a demurrer to the petition and a pure point of law. The effect of the argument for the petitioner resolves itself into this, Can a candidate be seated in any case where no poll has been demanded? We admit an election may well be by a show of hands; and if no poll be demanded, the show of hands before the return is the election; but this is only the case where there are a number of qualified candidates. But we maintain here, that there was only one candidate in the eye of the law who was duly qualified, and the case must be treated exactly the same as if there had been no opponent. The electors, therefore, being present—for those who choose to absent themselves are bound by those who are present—it was the duty of the returning officer to return the only candidate who appeared. The returning officer is only bound to grant a poll where there are two or more candidates before him: but when there is one candidate only, he is bound to declare the result of the view to be in favour of that one. Now, when notice was given to the electors that Mr. Boyle was disqualified, it was the same thing as if he had not been present. This is not a case of scrutiny at all. We do not ask who had the majority, for even if Mr. Boyle had the majority, we say it was no majority at all, by reason of his disqualification; but the question is simply this, whether the petitioner, being the only qualified candidate, ought not to have been declared duly elected. It is said the returning officer has no discretion at all, but must treat the candidate as a good legal candidate, however notorious may be the fact of his disqualification. But to test this argument, can it be said, that if a woman, or a minor, pretended to be a candidate, the returning officer was bound to allow a poll? Why should the farce and expense of a poll in such a case be unnecessary? [The COMMITTEE.—It appears, however, that the show of hands here was before the notice was given.] Yes, but we are only on the abstract point now, and we must, for the sake of argument, here assume that the disqualification was notorious. In the Leominster case, Corb. & Dan. 1, it was decided that a poll was unnecessary: (Rogers on Elect. C. 274; Cullen v. Morris, 2 Stark. N. P. 577; 1 Bl. Com. 348.) These authorities show that the returning officer is not a mere automaton, and it cannot be held that a poll is necessary where a woman or child is a candidate; indeed a returning officer who wilfully makes such a return may be punished: (Wordsworth, Elect. 165.) The Committee are now sitting, as if they were returning the member whom the returning officer ought to have returned. It is no doubt safer to demand a poll, and then give notice to individual electors; but it is not necessary, and in one respect it is inconsistent: for where there is only one legal candidate, why should there be a necessity of going into a needless ceremony? It is said the Committee are asked here to decide upon the voices of the electors and make a scrutiny; but that is not so. All that is asked is to say whether there ought to have been a show of hands or a poll at all, seeing there was only one legal candidate. [The COMMITTEE.—Your argument in fact goes to this extent, that the returning officer acts judicially, and not merely ministerially.] Yes, in a certain sense it does.

Wilde in reply.—If it be true that, where a candidate holds a disqualifying office under the crown, there is no necessity for going to the poll at all, then why has it always hitherto been deemed necessary to do so? If the returning officer was bound to decide on the qualifications of the candidates, some one ought to have started up and protested against Mr. Boyle being put in nomination; instead of this, they allowed him to be first elected. It is said it is not necessary to go to a poll, where a candidate is notoriously disqualified; but how is the notoriety to be measured? In short, if the other side be right, there would be no necessity for going to the poll in any case.

Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are of opinion that no poll having been demanded by the petitioner, or on his behalf, and none having taken place at the last election for Frome, this inquiry should proceed no further.

SECOND SITTINGS IN LONDON IN HILARY TERM.

CHATTERIS v. DARTER.

Bill—Notice of dishonour.

In an action by the indorsee against the indorser of a bill, proof that the plaintiff, on the day after the dishonour of the bill, endeavoured without success to obtain from the other parties to the bill, one of whom was the defendant's brother, the address of the defendant, that he sent a notice by post addressed to him at his brother's house, where the bill was payable; and that the letter was not returned—is evidence for the jury that the defendant had due notice.

This was an action on a bill of exchange for 84*l.* drawn by one George Adamson, accepted by William Darter, a brother of the defendant, and indorsed by Adamson to the defendant, by the defendant to Richard Field, and by Field to the plaintiff. The defendant pleaded, amongst other pleas, that he had not due notice of the dishonour of the bill.

The bill became due on Oct. 30, which was a Saturday: it was presented at the residence of the acceptor (the defendant's brother), where it was made payable, and was dishonoured. On Monday the plaintiff went to Field for the addresses of the parties; Field gave him the address of the drawer, but said he did not know the address of the defendant. The plaintiff then went to Adamson, who said that he did not know the address of the defendant, but that he was a respectable man, and he would procure it for him. On the same day the acceptor called to ask the plaintiff to allow it to stand over, which the plaintiff refused, and asked him for his brother's address; the acceptor refused to give it. The plaintiff then wrote a letter, containing notice of dishonour, and addressed to the defendant at the acceptor's residence, where the bill was payable. The letter was put in the post-office, and was not returned.

Pulling contended that no notice of dishonour to the defendant was proved.

Macnamara contrà, submitted that it was a question for the jury to say whether the defendant had received notice. The plaintiff had done all in his power; he had endeavoured without success to find the defendant's address, and he had sent him a notice to the place where the bill was payable. This was not returned, which afforded some evidence for the jury that it had come to the hands of the defendant. In Burmester v. Barron, 17 L. J. 135, Q. B. it was held sufficient to send a notice to the drawer addressed "London" only, that being the address given on the bill, though his address might have been ascertained by inquiry of the acceptor, and though the notice did not in fact reach him; and Wightman, J. said that he should, if he had been asked, have left it to the jury.

Pulling said that the present case was different from Burmester v. Barron, inasmuch as there the defendant was the drawer who had given an address "London," and would be taken as against himself to have given a proper one. Here the defendant was an indorser, who had given no address, nor was it customary for an indorser to give any address.

TALFOURD, J.—After the case which has been cited, I shall certainly leave the case to the jury. I shall ask them to say whether the plaintiff has given to the defendant due notice of the dishonour of the bill, and whether he used due diligence in finding his address.

The jury answered both these questions in the affirmative. Verdict for the plaintiff.

Macnamara, for the plaintiff.

Pulling, for the defendant.

SITTINGS AFTER HILARY TERM IN LONDON.

(Before TALFOURD, J.)

Tuesday, Feb. 22.

GERMAN v. LOCKHEAD.

Evidence of partnership—Liability of participator in the profits of a patent right to the expenses of working it.

A., the owner of a patented invention, gave a share to B. in consideration of B. advancing capital to bring it into use. C., an engineer, manufactured on the credit of B. certain machinery to work the invention, which A. superintended. The account of C. was made out to B. and a bill for a part of the cost was drawn by C. on B., and indorsed by A. at C.'s express request. This bill was paid; and, B. becoming insolvent, A. was subsequently sued by C. for the balance due for the work done:

Held, that A. and B. were partners, and liable as such to C. for the whole amount, and that, there being no plea in abatement, the action against A. alone could be maintained.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff, an engineer and machinist, against the defendant, the proprietor of a patent for manufacturing ventilating window glass, for work and labour and materials in the making certain machinery for working of the defendant's invention. The defendant pleaded the general issue.

Byles, Serjt. and Needham, for the plaintiff.

Shee, Serjt. and Pulling, for the defendant.

It appeared that in the year 1851 the defendant, who had obtained a patent for a new description of ventilating window-glass, agreed with a Mr. Richardson to give him one-third share of the patent in consideration of Richardson advancing money to work it. Richardson had an office in the Royal Exchange, over the door of which was written "Richardson and Co.," and the defendant published, on making the arrangement with Richardson, a description of his patent in a pamphlet, entitled "Homes to be Happy must be Healthy," and he there stated that the ventilating glass was to be obtained at Richardson and Co.'s. In August 1851 the defendant visited the plaintiff's factory at Blackwall, and, producing a copy of the pamphlet, requested that a certain cylinder and machine for rolling the glass should be made by the plaintiff, and referred the plaintiff for payment of the expenses to Mr. Richardson, who he stated was the party to supply the capital. The plaintiff then applied to Richardson by letter, and, receiving a satisfactory answer, commenced the necessary machinery under the defendant's direction. The machine was sent to certain works taken by Richardson and the defendant at Kennington, and subsequently returned by the defendant's directions for alterations. The account of the expenses was then made out by the plaintiff in the name of Richardson, and several applications were made to the latter for payment; at last a bill was drawn by the plaintiff for a part of the amount on Richardson and Co., which was accepted by Richardson in his own name, and dishonoured. The plaintiff then requested that the same bill for the same amount should be accepted by Richardson and Co. and indorsed by the defendant. This was done, and the amount was paid by the defendant out of certain advances made by Richardson on account of the patent, and paid into the Commercial Bank in the name of Lockhead & Co. Richardson some short time afterwards became insolvent, and the present action was brought against the defendant for 54*l.* 1*s.* the balance due to the plaintiff for making the machinery. The invention did not turn out successful, and no evidence was given of any profits having been received by the defendant.

TALFOURD, J. said that if the jury should be of opinion that the defendant had held himself out as a partner in the firm of Richardson and Co. or that he was to participate with Richardson in the profits, if any, of the patent worked by the plaintiff's machinery, he would be liable as a partner in the present action, notwithstanding the credit was expressly given to Richardson in the first instance.

Verdict for plaintiff for full amount.

Dec. 7 and 9.

(Present—The LORD CHANCELLOR (ST. LEONARDS), Lords TRURO and CAMPBELL, Earl of BANDON, and other Peers. Judges: LORD CHIEF BARON, PARKE, PLATT, MARTIN, and ALDERSON, BB.; and ERLE, MAULE, WILLIAMS, and TALFOURD, JJ.)

THE MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY OF IRELAND v. LEECH.

THE SAME v. JOHNSTON.

THE SAME v. EDMOND.

Railway amalgamation—Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act 1845—Contributary.

On the treaty for the amalgamation of two railway companies, at a special general meeting of the company into which the other was to be merged or amalgamated, it was resolved that 4000 shares of the last company should be taken by the amalgamated company, and that a deposit of 2l. 10s. per share should be made,—that the line of the merged company was to be surrendered to the amalgamated company on payment of certain expenses which had been then incurred, and upon other terms. A list of the parties to whom the 4000 shares of the merged company was to be allotted was forwarded to the secretary of the amalgamated company, and the name of the defendant was included for 170 shares. He subsequently applied for and obtained thirty more shares. He paid the deposit on the whole 200 shares, signed the subscription contract and deed. By a subsequent meeting of the shareholders the general terms of the treaty were confirmed, and the amalgamation recommended to be carried into effect:

Held, that as no acts had been done which constituted a complete amalgamation of the two companies, but only a recommendation that such amalgamation should be carried into effect, the defendant was not a shareholder of the company, and was not liable to the calls which had been made upon him in respect of the 200 shares upon which he had paid the deposit and signed the contract.

Held also, that the list of registered shareholders, although it might be proved not to have been a faithful register, was prima facie evidence that the contributory therein named was a shareholder, which fact, however, might be displaced by other evidence.

This was a writ of error brought from the Court of Ex. Ch. by the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland, the plaintiffs in error, against Joseph Leech, an alleged contributory and shareholder of that company. The two other writs of error against the other parties, which were also appealed, were to abide the judgment in the first.

The Solicitor-General (Kelly), Goldsmid, and Borrill, for the plaintiffs in error.

The Attorney-General (Thesiger), Anderson, and Rochfort Clarke, for the respondent in error.

The facts of the case appeared to be the following:—The action upon which the writ of error had been brought was in debt, brought by the railway company in the Court of Ex., under the Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, and the special Act entitled "The Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland Act, Mullingar to Athlone, 1846," against the defendant in error, as a shareholder in the plaintiffs' company, to recover the sum of 1500*l.*, the amount of three "calls" of 2*l.* 10*s.* each in the said company. To that action the defendant pleaded, first, that he never was indebted; and, secondly, that he was not a holder of shares in the plaintiffs' company: and issue was joined thereon. The cause was tried at the Spring Assizes for the county of Surrey, at Kingston, in the year 1849, when a verdict was found for the plaintiffs, and damages were assessed separately in respect of each of the said three calls. A bill of exceptions was tendered by the defendant to the direction of the learned judge. From the evidence set forth in the bill of exceptions, it appeared that the plaintiffs, the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland, were incorporated by the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119, for the purpose of making a railway from Dublin to Mullingar and Longford, and were also thereby authorised to purchase and hold the Royal Canal. Shortly after the passing of the Act, viz., on the 31st of July, 1845, two of the directors of the company proceeded to register themselves provisionally under the Joint Stock Companies Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 110), as promoters of a company to be called "The Galway and Mullingar Junction Railway Company," and obtained a certificate of provisional registration thereof. The capital proposed to be raised was 800,000*l.* in 32,000 shares of 25*l.* each. About May 9, 1845, another railway was projected, to be called "The Galway and Belfast Junction Railway," and a company was provisionally registered with a view to an application to Parliament for powers to make such railway. The defendant in this action was one of the firm of Johnston, Farquhar, and Leech, who were solicitors to the last-mentioned company. It was, however, subsequently considered that it would be imprudent to apply to Parliament for powers to carry that scheme into effect; and Mr. Blake, the deputy-chairman of that company, with the concurrence of the defendant and his partners, opened a negotiation with the plaintiffs' company on the subject of a proposed amalgamation; and on Aug. 18, 1845, at a meeting of the provisional committee of the said Galway and Belfast Junction Railway Company, it was resolved to unite with the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland, then proposing to extend their line from Mullingar to Galway; and on Aug. 28, 1845, a letter was sent by the defendant's firm to Mr. Blake, leaving it to him to arrange the amalgamation on the following terms, viz.: that the holders of scrip in the said "Galway and Belfast Junction Railway Company" were to have the option of taking an equal amount of shares in the "Midland Great Western," or to have their deposit returned free of expense, upon condition of the expenses incurred by the "Galway and Belfast Junction Railway Company" being defrayed by deposits on the "Midland Great Western;" and among other expenses enumerated at the foot of the said letter, as the expenses incurred by the Galway and Belfast Junction Railway Company, was a sum of 200*l.* stated to be due to the said Messrs. Johnston, Farquhar, and Leech, for professional charges and rent of offices. On Sept. 4, 1845, a resolution was come to by the directors of the "Midland Great Western Company of Ireland," of which the following is a copy:—

"Mr. Perry having reported that he had this day had a further interview with Mr. M. J. Blake, M.P., deputy-chairman of the proposed Galway and Belfast Junction Railway, on the subject of the expenses incurred in the formation of that company, amounting to the sum of 1,277*l.*, and that he (Mr. Blake) is prepared, on behalf of that company, to pay the deposit of 2*l.* 10*s.* each on 4000 shares in the extension to Galway, to merge the project of that company therein, and give the undertaking all the support in their power, provided the above sum of 1,275*l.* be allowed. That, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, it appears desirable that the Galway and Belfast Junction Company should merge in the extension from Mullingar to Galway, on the terms above stated, and that Mr. Blake's proposal be agreed to."

A copy of this resolution was inclosed by Mr. Blake in a letter to the defendant, dated the 6th Sept. 1845. An announcement of this arrangement was made by the Galway and Belfast committee to their shareholders by public advertisement, in which it was stated that an arrangement had been made with the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland, in accordance with which that portion of the Galway and Belfast line between Galway and Longford was to be surrendered to the Midland and Great Western Railway Company on payment of certain expenses which had been incurred; and that the shareholders in the Galway and Belfast Company had the option of receiving two new shares of 25*l.* each in the Midland Great Western Railway Company's proposed extension from Mullingar to Galway for each share of 50*l* in the Galway and Belfast Company on payment of a further deposit of 2*l.* 10*s.* for such two shares, in order to comply with the recent standing orders of Parliament; and after certain instructions to the said shareholders as to the exchange of their scrip, it was stated, that the said extension to Galway, as well as another to Sligo, promoted by the same company (the plaintiffs), was proposed to be amalgamated with the plaintiffs' company, the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland, and that the proprietors would participate in the profits of the undertaking, and in all the advantages of the company's Act of incorporation, and that the funds raised would form part of the capital stock of the company. In the said advertisement it was also stated, that shareholders who should not avail themselves of the option thus secured to them on or before the 1st Oct. then next would be considered as declining the same. This announcement was published by the secretary of "the Galway and Belfast Company" in the public papers about the 17th Sept. 1845. On the 12th of that month, after the arrangement had been made between Mr. Blake and the directors of the plaintiffs' company, the name of the Galway and Mullingar Junction Railway Company was changed at the registration office to that of the "Midland Great Western Railway Company (Extension from Mullingar to Galway)," and the names of the remaining thirteen directors of the plaintiffs' company, together with the names of Mr. Blake and another director of the Galway and Belfast Company, were added to the registry as promoters of the undertaking. On Oct. 16, 1845, a letter of allotment was sent to the defendant, by which he was informed that he had been allotted 170 shares in the extension, and that upon his lodging 2*l.* 10*s.* per share, amounting to 425*l.* with the bankers of the company, to the credit of the Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland (Extension to Galway), and upon his executing the usual parliamentary contract and shareholders' agreement, the necessary scrip certificates would be issued to him. Underneath the said letter of allotment was a note—that the above extension would be amalgamated with the existing incorporated company. On Oct. 30, 1845, the defendant paid the deposit to Messrs. Masterman and Co., and received from them a receipt. The defendant afterwards applied for and received a further allotment of thirty shares, upon which he paid a similar deposit and received a similar receipt. On Jan. 15, 1846, the defendant executed the parliamentary subscription contract, to satisfy the standing orders of Parliament, as a subscriber for 200 shares in the undertaking, and also the shareholders' agreement. The said contract and agreement were respectively in three parts, and the defendant executed the English part of each of the deeds. On Jan. 17, 1846, the defendant's firm inclosed the banker's receipts for the deposits on the 200 shares in a letter of that date, and requested that the scrip certificates for such shares should be sent to them. The scrip certificates for the defendant's 200 shares were accordingly sent to the defendant's firm. The scrip certificates were headed "Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, Extension from Mullingar to Galway," and they certified that the holder, having paid the first deposit of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share, and signed the parliamentary agreement, was entitled to 200 shares, and was registered as the owner thereof "in the books of this company." The parliamentary subscription contract was executed by the defendant, and set forth the amount of his subscription to be 5000*l.*, and the amount paid up 500*l.*, in conformity with the requirements of the standing orders of Parliament. This contract provided for the amalgamation of the two companies, and authorised the directors, if the Bill passed, to consolidate their stock; and powers for such purposes were given to the directors by the shareholders' agreement. On Feb. 16, 1846, an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the "Midland Great Western of Ireland, Extension from Mullingar to Galway," was held in Dublin, when a resolution was passed confirming the above arrangements. After some difficulty in raising the sum necessary to go to Parliament, which difficulty was overcome by the plaintiffs' company subscribing for 11,191 shares, the Bill was brought before Parliament, and the proposed extension was reduced in the House of Lords to a line from "Mullingar to Athlone," and the capital reduced from 800,000*l.* to 400,000*l.* The bill passed as the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 224. Pending the passing of the bill, a resolution was come to by the directors, amalgamating the number of shares for the "Athlone Extension" with the shares of the "incorporated company," which was sanctioned by a special general meeting held on Sept. 18, 1846; and on 1st Oct. following a first call of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share, which had been authorised at a previous general meeting, was made on the extension shares, and notice was sent to the defendant in due course thereof. The defendant's name was registered as the holder of 200 shares in the registry of plaintiffs' company, which registry-book was sealed at a general meeting on March 16, 1849, and in all subsequent registers. The defendant, however, ultimately refused to pay the calls, and the action at law for their recovery was the result.

The learned judge directed the jury that the parliamentary subscription contract and shareholders' agreement, if proved to the satisfaction of the jury, gave ample powers on behalf of the subscribers thereto, to the directors mentioned in the shareholders' agreement, in such number and assembled as therein mentioned, to obtain an Act of Parliament to incorporate the subscribers thereto, or to amalgamate them with the plaintiffs' company without an Act of Parliament for that special and express purpose, or any other Act of Parliament than that which was obtained; and if the said contract and agreement were so proved, that they were authorised to adopt the course which was adopted by them, and that the nine directors present at the meeting of the 18th Sept. 1846, were competent to exercise such powers in the manner in which they did, so as to bind the defendant to pay calls on 200 shares of 2*l.* 10*s.* each in the plaintiffs' company, and that the defendant was bound by the exercise of the powers, as they were exercised, to pay such calls as a holder of the said 200 shares in the plaintiffs' company, and thereby became a holder of the said 200 shares in the plaintiffs' company without any act of acceptance by him of the terms contained in the resolution of the 18th Sept. 1846.

The counsel for the defendant tendered a bill of exceptions to this ruling.

The jury found for the plaintiffs.

A writ of error was subsequently brought on this bill of exceptions, and was argued in the Court of Ex. Ch. on the 18th and 19th June, 1850. In this court judgment was pronounced setting aside the judgment of the court below, and directing that there should be a venire de novo. The company, however, thought it the better course at once to bring the case to the House of Lords.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The argument in support of the writ of error having been concluded,

The Attorney-General and Anderson, on behalf of the respondent, contended that the writ of error ought to be dismissed, or the judgment of the Ex. Ch. be affirmed, upon these grounds: "Because the Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland Act, Mullingar to Athlone, 1846, did not incorporate the subscribers to the Extension Company, nor did it amalgamate or authorise the amalgamation of the Incorporated Company with the Extension Company, or entitle the plaintiffs in error to register the subscribers to the Extension Company, without their consent, as shareholders of the Incorporated Company. Because the subscription contract and shareholders' agreement of the Extension Company did not empower the directors of such company to amalgamate or to agree to an amalgamation of the said company with the Incorporated Company, unless an Act or Acts of Parliament, incorporating the said subscribers and authorising such an amalgamation, should be first obtained; and because such powers as the directors of the Extension Company had, expired on the 31st July, 1846, in consequence of the certificate of provisional registration of that company never having been renewed. Because the nine persons who had been directors of the Extension Company who were present at the meeting of the 18th Sept. 1846, had no power to amalgamate or to agree so as to bind the defendant in error to any amalgamation of the said subscribers with the said Incorporated Company, or to bind the defendant in error to pay the calls claimed in the action."

The Solicitor-General replied.

The LORD CHANCELLOR submitted the following question for the opinion of the judges:—"Adverting to the record and the proceedings in this case, ought the exceptions therein recorded, or any and which of them, to have been allowed?"

Dec. 9.—POLLOCK, C.B. said, that in answer to the question which had been submitted to the judges by that House on Tuesday—namely, "Adverting to the record and the proceedings in this case, ought the exceptions thereto recorded, or any and which of them, to have been allowed?" he had to report to their lordships that, although the judges were not agreed as to some of the points argued before the House, yet they were unanimously of opinion with regard to one of the grounds of exception, that it should be allowed—namely, that the nine directors of the extension company who were present at the meeting of the 18th Sept. 1846 were not competent to amalgamate, or to agree so as to bind the shareholders to any amalgamation with the incorporated company; and that the defendant had not therefore become the holder of the 200 shares in the plaintiffs' company. The defendant in error was therefore not bound by what had been done by the directors in the exercise of their powers; for it appeared to the judges that what was actually done at the meeting of the 18th Sept. 1846 was only a recommendation to the general body of the company which was incorporated by the first Act of Parliament, and assembled on that occasion, and was not an amalgamation by the nine directors in pursuance of the power of amalgamation, assuming they had such a power.

The LORD CHANCELLOR then said that the answer their lordships had just received on the part of the learned judges, if their lordships adopted the law as by that answer laid down, at once disposed of this case; for although that reply did not answer in all respects the question which their lordships had submitted to the learned judges, yet it did sufficiently answer that question in order to enable their lordships to dispose of the case before them. He entirely concurred in the opinions which their lordships had just heard from the learned judges. It appeared to him perfectly clear that there had not been, even supposing that the directors did possess the power to bind the persons who had subscribed to the project, which was not originally an extension—that, supposing they had possessed that power, yet that that power had not been assumed to be exercised. The whole matter amounted, in truth, only to an offer, to a recommendation of the terms offered. Why, the very bonus which had been offered by that recommendation was an inducement—an inducement to the parties, who were not bound to accept the terms which were offered; and there was not the slightest evidence to show that the persons against whom the company had proceeded ever did accept those terms. The Grand Junction Company, for instance, who stood upon precisely the same ground, had rejected the terms; and therefore with that company a compromise had been made.

Lord CAMPBELL entirely concurred in the opinion which had been given in this case by his noble and learned friend, the Lord Chancellor. It was certainly not necessary to consider whether the directors had possessed the power, inasmuch as it was perfectly clear that they had not exercised it; and upon that question, therefore, whether the directors had had the power or not, he would upon the present occasion give no opinion. But it did appear to him that their lordships were bound to express an opinion upon the other question which had been argued at their lordships' bar—namely, whether by the Act of 1846 the subscribers were made shareholders. For, if they were, then the direction of the learned judge who had tried the case which was founded upon this would be immaterial, and if it was wholly immaterial, then their lordships would not direct a venire de novo. That being so, then he was bound to give his opinion on the question whether the Act of 1846 had bound the subscribers shareholders to the extension company. In his opinion it clearly did not make the subscribers shareholders in the extension company, because, whatever the equity of the case might be, their lordships must look distinctly to see what had been enacted, and therefore, looking at the 4th sect. of the 9th and 10th Vict. c. 224, it appeared to him that it was left especially to the directors, after the Act was passed, whether it would bind the subscribers shareholders or not. Now, what was the language of that section? It was this: "That it should be lawful to the said company to raise, by contributions among themselves, or by the admission of other parties, or in part by each of those means, 400,000*l.* by creating 16,000 shares of 25*l.* each, in addition to the capital which they are at present authorised to raise." Now, that section seemed to him to be wholly permissive; and if the company had had funds of their own, without requiring any additional sum to be subscribed, he apprehended that from those funds they might have completed the railroad from Mullingar to Athlone. If that were so, then it was quite clear to his mind that the subscribers were not ipso facto shareholders when they acted, and, if that were so, then the direction of the learned baron upon the trial was erroneous.

Lord TRURO also concurred.—This case, indeed, supplied many topics in support of that opinion; but it was quite unnecessary at that moment to go over them, as the learned judges were unanimous in their opinion, which opinion perfectly coincided with that of the two noble and learned lords near him. He must say at the same time that he thought it was perfectly clear that the Act of Parliament did not amalgamate, and that no idea had ever been entertained that it should have that effect, but that it was left, as his noble and learned friend had said, entirely open; and that all that was done after the Act had been obtained was the recommendation which had been referred to, which recommendation in its very terms utterly excluded the inference that it was considered as an amalgamation. But the effect of the resolution which had been come to, and that which had been done subsequently, also went to show that at no subsequent time had it been considered an amalgamation until it had become necessary to make a call for money, and then it appeared to have occurred to the parties, after Oct. 1846, when, he thought, the first registry-book had been sealed, that that book did not include the extension subscribers. It seemed to him, therefore, that the judgment of the Court of Ex. Ch. was perfectly correct in point of law.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said that he had not touched upon the question to which his two noble and learned friends had alluded, simply because he had considered that the opinion which had been delivered to their Lordships by the learned Chief Baron on behalf of the learned judges had implied that that question could not be maintained. That was a point upon which he had never for one moment entertained the slightest doubt. It was perfectly clear that the Act of Parliament gave power to the directors of the original company, if they pleased, and could agree with the directors of the extension subscribers,—it gave the former the power to admit the latter, and if they had been admitted they would have then formed part of the original company. But the very recital of the Act was, that they, the Midland Company, proposed to execute the extension at their own expense, and then that power was granted to them which had been referred to by his noble and learned friend in order to enable them to execute that purpose. He thought, therefore, that it was perfectly clear that the sum to be raised did not tally with the sum even to be paid by the extension company without reference to the other subscribers. He fully concurred in the opinions expressed by his noble and learned friends. He believed that it had been understood by all parties that this and the two following cases rested on the same points and depended on the same arguments, and therefore that the judgment in the present case would also be judgment in those other two cases.

The judgments of the Court of Exchequer Chamber affirmed, and the writs of error dismissed.

EDDLESTON v. COLLINS.

Copyhold—Married woman—Infancy of deputy-steward—Ministerial and judicial offices—Surrender—Pleading—Practice.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

A surrender of copyholds, the property of a married woman, by herself and her husband, was taken by a deputy-steward who was a minor:

Held, that the surrender was valid, the office of a deputy-steward being merely ministerial and not judicial.

How far relief can be refused in a foreclosure suit upon a defence of fraudulent execution of the mortgage, there being no cross-bill?—Quære.

The Court will not stop the progress of a cause to enable parties to file a cross-bill, except under particular circumstances.

This suit was constituted to obtain a decree of foreclosure in respect of a mortgage debt of 600*l.* with an arrear of interest.

The facts were briefly these:—In the year 1843 Mary Ann Smith, then unmarried, was admitted as devisee of her father to a copyhold estate of inheritance holden of the manor of Lyson, in the county of Cambridge, to her and her heirs according to the custom of the manor. She married a Mr. Collins, and on the 20th May 1844 she and her husband concurred in making a valid surrender of the copyhold estate in question to a Mr. Stephen Adcock by way of mortgage to secure to him the sum of 50*l.*, whose assignee, by the circumstance of the transaction which is afterwards adverted to, the plaintiff became. In 1846 Mr. Collins and his wife made a further surrender to Mr. Adcock. The terms of that surrender were of an unusual nature. It was as follows:—"Be it remembered that on the 3rd day of Dec. &c. Thomas Collins and Mary Ann his wife, formerly Mary Ann Ward, spinster, customary or copyhold tenants, or one of them a customary or copyhold tenant of the said manor, came before John Gillam Bell the younger, gentleman, deputy-steward of Clement Francis, gentleman, chief steward of the said manor, and in consideration of 100*l.* to the said Thomas Collins and Mary Ann his wife, paid by Stephen Adcock (the said Mary Ann Collins being first privately examined by the said deputy-steward separately and apart from her said husband, and freely and voluntarily consenting), did out of court surrender, &c. to the lord, &c. all that messuage, &c. and all the estate, &c. to such uses, upon such trust, and to and for such estates, ends, intents, and purposes in favour or for the benefit of Collins, his heirs and assigns, and with, under, and subject to such powers of sale and other powers, provisoes, declarations, and agreements, and charged and chargeable with the payment of such sum and sums of money, as Adcock, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, by any deed or deeds in writing to be by him, them, or any of them legally executed, shall, at the request and by the direction in writing of the said Thomas Collins, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, at any time direct, or in default to the use of Adcock, his heirs and assigns for ever," subject to the former conditional surrender for 50*l.*, and with a proviso that if Collins, his heirs, &c. should pay or cause to be paid to the said Stephen Adcock the said principal sum of 100*l.* with interest on the 3rd June then next, the surrender was to be void. The surrender was entered on the court rolls on the 14th April 1847. Subsequently to its execution Mr. Adcock, as by the direction of Collins, directed that it should enure from time to time to secure further sums of money, ultimately making up the sum of 600*l.*, which was all advanced and paid by the present plaintiff; part was actually paid to Collins, and part in paying off the advances, which then amounted to 542*l.* The four first advances made after the original advance of 1846 were made by deeds, to two of which Mr. Adcock was a party, and to two of which he was not a party; but they all recited the former advance; and to the last transaction, by which Miss Eddleston made the final advance of 600*l.* to pay off the whole amount, Mr. Adcock was a party; he executed the deed, and in form executed the power contained in the surrender, and so treated it as a valid surrender; and, in conformity to the language of the surrender, the estate became vested in Miss Eddleston to secure the sum of 600*l.*

Thomas Collins died intestate, leaving two infant daughters, his co-heiresses. Mrs. Collins afterwards married the defendant Smith. The bill was filed for the purpose of foreclosing the mortgage, and was resisted by the defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, on the grounds following:—First, That the deputy-steward who took the surrender of December 1846 was under age at the time, and could not therefore take the surrender of a married woman. Secondly, That the surrender of December 1846 was not one which, upon a proper construction, would be held to transfer the equity of redemption to the husband, but would be held valid only as a surety for 100*l.* Thirdly, That upon the circumstances of the case, as proved in evidence, Adcock being himself the only solicitor in these transactions, and the deputy steward appointed for the occasion was his articled clerk, the transaction of the surrender of 1846 was fraudulent, and could be supported only as a security for 100*l.*

The case, as argued before the Vice-Chancellor, is reported 19 L. T. Rep. 270.

Elmsley and Smythe appeared for the plaintiff.

Glasse and Beales, for the defendants Smith.

J. W. Stephen, for the infant defendants.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—In order to support the proposition which has been contended for, several old authorities were referred to. They receive additional weight from the fact that those who followed Lord Coke saw no reason to doubt their validity. Lord Coke, in the 46th section of his Treatise on Copyholds, says, "If an office of stewardship descend unto an infant, he may make a deputy, because the law presumeth he is himself incapable to execute it." And then there are other passages which go to this effect, "that an infant, it is said, cannot be a steward." Now what is the meaning of those words "cannot be a steward?" In Scambler v. Waters, in Cro. Eliz. 637, the decision is unintelligible, as collected from the report; but it means no more than that an infant cannot maintain an assize or real action for that office, as an office; whatever, however, be its meaning, the law, supposing it to be stated distinctly that he cannot be a steward or a deputy-steward, must be read with the qualification that Lord Coke sets out at length, and which is adopted in all subsequent writers, in these words—"The law is not very curious in examining the imperfection of the steward's person or the unlawfulness of his authority; for be he an infant or non compos mentis, an idiot or lunatic, an outlaw or an excommunicate, yet what things soever he performeth as incident to his place, can never be avoided for any such disability, because he performeth them as a judge, or at least as custom's instrument, and for his authority, though it prove but counterfeit, if it come to exact trial, yet if in appearance or outward show it seemeth correct, that is sufficient." An argument was adduced at the bar that a steward, though an infant, might be perhaps allowed to do ministerial acts, but that the separate examination of a married woman was an act requiring discretion, and to which Lord Coke could not have intended it to advert. I think Lord Coke meant absolutely to include every act of the steward; he makes no distinction whatever, and there is scarcely any act a steward does that does not require some discretion; and in the case of most surrenders there is always one important act that requires very great discretion, which is the assessment of the fines, that is to be done actually by the lord, but really by the steward. Another case of discretion which continually occurs is that, suppose one claims as heir, and another as devisee, it is common to admit them both, and let them litigate altogether. It is competent for the steward to say that is a false will—a forgery—I will not admit you. It has been thought it was for him to do that at his peril. I do not think the distinction can be sustained. Having that distinct authority of Lord Coke's—an authority so much in conformity with the convenience of mankind, that even if there were doubts cast upon it, which I do not find, I should be very reluctant to listen to any such suggestion, because the danger to titles would be enormous if it could be said that a transaction as to which parties have no means of inquiring, except by looking in the court rolls, is absolutely void by reason of infancy or idiocy, or non compos mentis, or lunacy, or outlawry, or excommunication attaching to some person as to which there is no evidence that any such disability did attach—finding that authority distinctly stated in that elaborate way by Lord Coke, I have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that that as a legal objection cannot be sustained. Then, if that be so, what is the effect of the surrender? The defendants say, that, even supposing that the difficulty as to the steward be got over, still it ought to operate only as a surrender to secure the sum of 100*l.*, which was all that was then advanced. What is its legal meaning? It is a very complicated and a very artificial mode of effecting the object which it attempted to effect. I give no opinion whether the lord was bound to accept such a surrender. Probably he might not. That question was discussed in the case of Glasse v. Richardson, in which there were some authorities quoted of a recent date in the Court of Q. B. Very likely the law might be that the lord would not be bound to accept such a surrender; but, having done so, I confess it appears to me that the surrender operated, as the language imports, "to such uses as Adcock, by the direction of Collins, should from time to time appoint." If, therefore, Adcock did afterwards appoint, with the consent of Collins, that that surrender should enure to particular uses, it would so enure. But then, supposing there could be no objection by reason of the infancy of the plaintiff, and that the power given by the surrender had been from time to time properly executed—that still it had only been properly executed in form; for in truth Mrs. Collins says, "I was imposed upon; I did not know what I was executing; this surrender was never explained to me; I never meant to do more than to authorise the raising of the additional 100*l.* beyond the first 50*l.* which was ex concessis a good advance,—if that were so, though, perhaps, the more strict course would have been to file a cross bill to set aside the transaction, yet I conceive it may be raised by way of defence, by saying for what sum the plaintiff is to be considered as a mortgagee; and in that view it is, that upon the evidence it must be inferred Mrs. Collins knew nothing of all those subsequent transactions—that, in truth, she thought only she had surrendered in 1846 to secure the 100*l.* then advanced to her husband, as she had surrendered in 1844 to secure the 50*l.* advanced, and that all the rest was a mere fraud—that, in truth, the deed was framed in fraud of her, and so as to rob her of her estate. Now, for that purpose one must look at what the evidence in the cause is. His Lordship here went through the evidence, and, having done so, said, it was strongly corroborative of the truth that all that which had been done was with the entire privity of that lady, and that everything was explained to her; because, unless that be true, her conduct, as appeared by the evidence, was irreconcilable with the conduct of a rational person. On this point, therefore, the defendants have failed. There is nothing on which I can find anything leading to fraud. The plaintiff is entitled to be treated as a mortgagee for 600*l.* and therefore the decree below was perfectly correct.

Lord Justice TURNER.—At the request of my learned brother, I have next to state my opinion upon this case. Having already, in the court below (vide 19 L. T. Rep. 370), fully entered into the question of the capacity of an infant deputy-steward, of competent understanding, to take the surrender of a copyhold estate, and determined that he was capable of doing so, it is unnecessary for me to say more upon that point, than that that opinion has not been altered by anything which I have heard in the reargument, or by the further consideration which I have given to the question. In the course of the argument upon the appeal, however, two or three points have been brought forward, which were not adverted to in the court below, and I think it right, therefore, to make a few observations upon those points. It has been argued, on the part of the appellant, that this case falls within the principle of the cases in which it has been held that, upon mortgages of the estates of married women, the old uses were not altered by the equity of redemption being reserved to parties who would not be entitled under those uses; those cases do not appear to me to apply to the present, or in any degree to assist the appellant's case. They proceed upon this principle: that the purpose of the deed being to create a mortgage, the court will not, from more trifling and partial alterations in the reservation of the equity of redemption, imply an intention not merely to create the mortgage, but also to alter the uses. The court is to collect what was the intention of the parties in the transaction. The nature of the transaction distinctly evidences one intention, and the court will not, from trifling circumstances, impute another; but, in the present case, it distinctly appears by the surrender that the intention was not merely to create a present mortgage, but to give power to create further charges; and nothing which I can find in the cases referred to would warrant the extension of them to such a case. The case of Jackson v. Innes, in the House of Lords, seems to be very strongly opposed to this argument on the part of the appellants. The question here is on the right to create the further charges, and not on the right to the ultimate equity of redemption, subject to the charges when created. The appellants then attempted to impeach the securities upon the evidence taken in the cause; but the appellants are defendants in this cause, and I feel great doubt whether it is competent to them to do so. The plaintiff's security is, I must now assume, well created by deed, and I rather apprehend such a security, if impeached at all, must be impeached by cross-bill. The security is good until impeached; and to allow the defendant to impeach it by her answer and by evidence on her part, would be to make a decree in favour of the defendant upon the application of the plaintiff. If the defendant were at liberty thus to impeach the plaintiff's title, she must equally be at liberty wholly to subvert it; and the consequence of allowing this would be that plaintiffs, coming to this court for relief, might find themselves in the position of being decreed to convey to the defendants. The objection to decreeing relief upon the answers to defendants is, perhaps, founded upon deeper reasons than may at first sight appear. It may be the medium of compelling defendants to do justice to plaintiffs by putting any legal rights they may have under the control of the court, and of thus giving effect to the rule, that he who comes into equity must do equity. The only other point to which I think it necessary to advert is the offer now made, on the part of the appellant, to file a cross-bill, the court in the meantime suspending the decree. It is, I apprehend, within the power of the court to grant this indulgence; but what is asked of the court is clearly indulgence. The ordinary course of the court is not to stop the progress of the cause unless the cross-bill is filed in due time. Upon a motion to adjourn a cause upon the ground of a cross-bill having been filed in Coates v. Pearson, 4 Mad. 262, Sir John Leach says, "If the cross-bill had been filed in due time you might have moved to stay publication in the original cause, but you cannot now stop the progress of the cause." Has then the appellant made a case entitling her to the extraordinary indulgence of suspending the decree in the original cause, not at the original hearing, but at the rehearing? I am of opinion that she has not. I think it clear upon the evidence that this lady well knew that her late husband was borrowing money on the estate, and was herself instrumental to the borrowing it. This I think is fully proved by the plaintiff's evidence, and the lady does not in her evidence assert the contrary. I think the case set up by this lady of fraud upon her in procuring the surrender is entirely an afterthought upon her part. The evidence seems to me to prove that the original dispute in this case was whether more than 450*l.* was due on the securities, not whether there had been any fraud in the surrender, and that at a later period of the dispute the question raised by this lady's solicitor on her part was not whether there had been fraud in the surrender, but whether the lady could not defeat it upon the legal ground of the infancy of the deputy-steward. These are circumstances which might not defeat the right of the appellants to relief in equity; but in my opinion they are circumstances which disentitle them to any extraordinary indulgence from the court, and I therefore concur in the opinion that this appeal ought to be dismissed.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—In the present case there are questions of law, of equity, and of fact, which, with or without sufficient reason, have appeared, and still appear to me, of difficult solution and doubt. While my mind was in this condition on the matter, I found from the Lord Chancellor and Lord Justice Turner that they had made up their minds and were agreed as to the proper mode of dealing with the case, a circumstance which rendered it necessarily unimportant what my view of the case might ultimately be, and I thought it consequently better for the parties that they should not be kept longer in suspense by reason of my undetermined state of opinion, a state which might not soon end, or which might possibly be never wholly removed. I requested their Lordships accordingly not further to postpone disposing of the appeal. This their Lordships have now done, the judgment of the court being one to which possibly a more prolonged consideration of the questions in dispute between the parties might bring me to assent, though at present I do not do so.

Re SARAH THOMAS, a Lunatic.

Lunatic mortgagee—Costs—Practice.

The costs of an order vesting the estate of a lunatic mortgagee in the mortgagor, directed to be paid by the mortgagee. An order was at the same time made directing the committee to convey at the expense of the lunatic's estate, except that the cost of the stamp of the vesting order was to be borne by the mortgagor.

This was a petition presented by the committee of a lunatic mortgagee for payment of the mortgage money into court, and an order vesting the estate in the mortgagor.

Rushout, for the petitioner, cited Ex parte Wheeler, supra, 57; Ex parte Richards, 1 Jac. & W. 264. He submitted that the stamp imposed upon the vesting order by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, ought to be paid by the mortgagor.

Scott, for the parties interested in the equity of redemption.

Jan. 31.—If this had been a res integra, I should not have given any costs out of the lunatic's estate. To give the costs of the vesting order would be going beyond the authorities. You may have an order for the committee to convey, the costs to be paid out of the lunatic's estate, or you may have a vesting order at the costs of the mortgagor.

Renshaw.—I appear for the committee, who is the petitioner, and only ask that the cost of the stamp of the vesting order should be paid for by the mortgagor.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—I don't know whether I ought to accede to this request; but in this instance you may take an order vesting the estate in the mortgagor; the estate of the lunatic paying all the costs, with the exception of the stamp.

IN LUNACY.

[illegible] was entitled to 600*l.* Consols, [illegible] dividends not having been received [illegible] and were transferred to the [illegible] Bank.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

On the petition of the curator of the lunatic, the fund was ordered to be transferred into the name of the Accountant-General in trust, and the dividends paid to him.

This was a petition presented under the 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 5, for the retransfer from the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt of the sum of 600*l.* Consols, and the dividends which had been unclaimed since the year 1839. The fund, when transferred, was standing in the name of the lunatic, who was a resident of Genoa. She had been found a lunatic in that state, and the petitioner had been appointed the "curator" of her person and property by the proper judicial authorities. The petition also asked, that the accumulated dividends might be paid to the petitioner.

Lloyd appeared in support of the petition.

Wickens, for the Attorney-General and the Commissioners, objected that there was not sufficient evidence of identity; that there was a question of jurisdiction; and that the Commissioners would not be sufficiently protected by the unconditional transfer of the fund to the "curator."

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—The 5th section of the Act declares "that it shall be lawful for the governor, &c. of the Bank of England, to direct the proper officer to retransfer any stock which shall have been transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, into the names of any person or persons who shall show to the satisfaction of such governor, &c. his or their right or title thereto, and to pay the dividends due thereon; but in case such governor shall not be satisfied of the justice or legality of the claim which shall have been made to any stock so transferred, then and in every such case the claimant or claimants shall by petition in a summary way state and verify his claim to the Court of Chancery, &c.; and the court was thereby authorised to make such order thereon, either for the transfer of the stock and for payment of the dividends which shall have accrued or become due and payable thereon, as it shall think fit." The petition has been served according to the provisions of that section, and therefore I do not question that I have jurisdiction. The Act authorises me to direct transfer and payment in such a manner as shall appear just. The identity of this party must be established, and, subject to that being sufficiently made out, I shall direct the principal of the stock to be transferred into the name of the Accountant-General in trust in this matter, and the arrears of dividends to be paid to the "curator," and that the accruing dividends shall be paid from time to time to the "curator," so long as he should continue to be the "curator."

Wickens asked that the fund might not be retransferred without notice to the Commissioners.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—That I do not apprehend to be necessary. The Act sufficiently indemnifies them. The costs of all parties must come out of the arrears of the dividends.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

Saturday, Feb. 12.

(Before Lord CRANWORTH, L. C. and the LORDS JUSTICES.)

Re TURNER, ex parte CROSTHWAITE.

Bankrupt's estate—Increased value of—Sale of. Creditors, trustees of a fund, allowed the conduct of a sale of part of the bankrupt's estate, although an order directing it to be sold by the commissioner had been drawn up.

Since the date of a bankruptcy certain shares, part of the estate, had greatly increased in value. The bankrupt's estate was ordered to be credited with one half of the increased produce, including the dividends which had been received upon them, with liberty for the creditors to prove for the residue of their demand.

This was a motion to vary the minutes of an order which had been drawn up by the registrar. The question arose as to the value of certain shares in the Carron Company, which had very much increased in value since the bankruptcy. For the purpose of ascertaining their value, the order, as drawn up, directed the shares to be sold by the commissioner in bankruptcy. To this the respondent objected, and insisted that he ought to sell them himself, and thereby to save the costs which would be incurred, and the fees of the official manager.

Daniel and Morris, in support of the motion, asked whether the bankrupt's estate ought to be credited with the whole amount which the shares might realise on the sale, or only with the value of them at the time of the bankruptcy?

Bacon and Selwyn, for the respondent.

The COURT decided that the respondent should sell the shares, and that he should give the bankrupt's estate credit for one half of the produce, including any dividends which he might have received, and that he should prove for the residue of his demand. The costs were ordered to come out of the bankrupt's estate.

COURT OF APPEAL.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Reported by OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Ex parte MANICO, re MANICO.

Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act—250th sect.—Certificate.

A young man, with little capital except what was borrowed, carried on business as a wine merchant, and in many instances bought parcels of wine, which he immediately pledged, and failing to redeem, they were sold by the brokers, at a considerable sacrifice; but as it was not proved that he bought the wines with an intention of pledging them, or with dishonest intention, and had not been guilty of uttering an untruth as to his affairs, and had been moderate in his personal expenses, it was held, overruling the decision of the Commissioner, who had refused to grant a certificate or protection, that as the conduct of the bankrupt did not come within the meaning of the term "offences" in the 256th sect. of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, and it was not a case which, in the opinion of the court, should be visited with so much severity, a suspension of the certificate for two years from June 14 last, and giving him then a third-class certificate, and depriving him of protection for six months, would be a sufficient punishment for his imprudent conduct.

This was an appeal by the bankrupt from the decision of Mr. Commissioner Evans, refusing to grant him any certificate, or any protection from arrest, upon the ground that the bankrupt had for a series of years bought goods, pledged them, and allowed them to be sold for half their value. The learned Commissioner, in delivering judgment, said: "It is very difficult to understand why the bankrupt has taken this course. He is either one of the most fraudulent men that ever lived, or he is mad. I have my suspicions which."

The evidence contained in the affidavit on both sides was of a somewhat conflicting character.

By the affidavit of Mr. George, the managing clerk to the solicitors of the assignees, it was sworn that the bankrupt, who, from Jan. 1846 to Aug. 1849, carried on the business of a retail wine merchant, disposed of such business, and the stock and implements of trade, to Mr. W. R. Carter for 290*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.*, secured by three bills of exchange. From that time he commenced business as a wholesale wine merchant. That it appeared, by the books and accounts rendered by the bankrupt to his assignees, that, in the years 1848 and 1849, he speculated largely in time bargains for the purchase and sale of Consols and railway shares to the amount of upwards of 100,000*l.*, in respect of which he lost the sum of 700*l.* or thereabouts, but as against such losses, he made a profit on some of his transactions in Consols, to the amount of 238*l.* or thereabouts. That, from extracts from his balance-sheet and accounts, it appeared that during the twelve months next preceding his bankruptcy, the bankrupt borrowed various sums to the amount of 1043*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* upon the pledging of goods. That the bankrupt previous to the 9th June 1851 had been in the habit of obtaining advances upon the deposit of wines purchased by him to a considerable amount. That from extracts from the balance sheet and accounts of the bankrupt it appeared that the bankrupt from the 30th July 1851 to the 24th May 1852 (on about 55 transactions) made losses to the amount of 5303*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.*; that, as far as could be discovered, most of the goods upon which the aforesaid losses were made were purchased by the bankrupt for credit for 14,678*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* and were still unpaid for by him, and were pledged by him on or subsequently to his obtaining advances thereon, and appear ultimately to have realised the amount of 9,141*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* only. That he could not discover that the bankrupt at any time repaid to the persons with whom he pledged the aforesaid goods the advances obtained thereon, otherwise than by allowing such person to sell and sacrifice the goods so pledged with them, at enormous losses, by public auction or otherwise. That the losses made by the bankrupt prior to the month of Dec. 1851, in consequence of his pledging goods which he had bought on credit, and the sale thereof by reason of his inability to redeem the same, amounted to a very considerable sum. (An account is then given of various losses, arising from the sale by public auction of goods and purchases pledged by the bankrupt, and sacrificed by reason of his non-payment of the advances.) That at the time of the bankruptcy, goods purchased for 1803*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* were deposited with Mr. Norris, for advances to the amount of 689*l.* 10*s.*, and were afterwards sold by public auction by Mr. Norris, and realised little more than the amount due from the bankruptcy to Mr. Norris thereon. That it was stated by the solicitor for the assignees at the sitting, at the hearing of the bankrupt's application for his certificate before Mr. Commissioner Evans, and was not denied by the bankrupt, that he frequently pledged the warrants for wine purchased by him on credit immediately after he had received the same, and that he never kept a warrant in his possession for more than a week, but either sold the wine or pledged the warrants within that time. That by the stock account of the bankrupt it appeared that such of his purchases as resulted in a profit between Dec. 14, 1851, and the time of the bankruptcy, amounted to 540*l.* or thereabouts only; the losses on sales during the same time having been 8745*l.*, besides the loss on goods in the hands of Mr. Norris and others at the time of the bankruptcy, and the loss of 1452*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* on the stock in hand on Dec. 14, 1851. That during the last three months of the year 1852, the purchases of wine and brandy made by the bankrupt of Mr. R. Carter, who was himself a retail wine merchant, amounted to the sum of 228*l.* 12*s.* 7*d.* or thereabouts. That during the year 1850, such purchases amounted to the sum of 1098*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* or thereabouts; that during the year 1851 such purchases amounted to 8529*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* or thereabouts; and that during the first six months of the year 1852 such purchases amounted to the sum of 3991*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* That the bankrupt moreover made losses by time bargains in the purchase and sale of tallow, prior to Jan. 1, 1850, of 587*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

Two wine merchants who were creditors of the bankrupt also, by their joint affidavit, charged him with having fraudulently obtained and pledged wines and spirits, and allowed them to be sold and sacrificed by the lender, and that they would not have trusted him, and would have refused him all credit, had they believed him to be guilty of such practices.

The bankrupt, by his affidavit in answer to the last-mentioned affidavit, stated that the earlier sales of wines made by public auction on his account were not made by reason of his inability to redeem goods which had been pledged; but he admitted that wine was subsequently sacrificed at public sale by the brokers in consequence of his being unable to redeem the same. The bankrupt also swore that each parcel of wines sold at sales could be clearly identified, and that merchants and others engaged in the trade knew or have the means of knowing by whom such wine was imported, and upon whose account it was being sold; that all his creditors could have become acquainted with the sales, and that he never concealed or endeavoured to conceal the same, and he believed that most of his creditors were well aware of the same; and that they were frequently mentioned in conversation between his creditors and himself. That it was prudent sometimes to sell the low-priced wines by sale, as they would deteriorate by being kept too long. That the bankrupt had not the slightest difficulty in purchasing wine to any extent, and was continually pressed by those in the trade to purchase large quantities of wine upon credit.

With reference to the affidavit of Mr. George, the bankrupt swore that he had not had time to examine or test the accuracy of all the various figures and statements in the said affidavit. He admitted the speculations in railway shares and Consols, and his losses thereby, but that before the close of the year 1849 he became fully convinced of the impropriety of such transactions, and determined wholly to discontinue the same, and did so, and he had not since entered into any such speculations. That with regard to the sales of wines by the brokers, at least fourteen of the sums mentioned in the account were not loans made to him, but payments for wine sold by brokers on his account; that no mention was made of the goods on which he had made a profit; but he admitted that the losses made by him were exceedingly great, and caused his complete ruin. That, however, many of the goods which were stated to have been pledged or sold by the bankrupt had been sold after his bankruptcy. That the statement that the bankrupt never kept a warrant for wine in his possession more than a week, was altogether incorrect, as he had frequently warrants of a very considerable value in his possession for long periods together; and that he was never without many such warrants in his possession. And, upon his bankruptcy, he gave up to his assignees property to the amount of 1584*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* besides that upon which he had obtained advances; and that the property so given up by him consisted principally of wine warrants, upon which he could easily have obtained an advance of several hundred pounds. And the bankrupt swore that his conduct in the purchase and pledging, and sale of goods did not arise from fraudulent and dishonest motives; and that he did not know, when he pledged most of the wines and spirits which he had purchased upon credit, that he should be unable to redeem the same; and that he hoped to be enabled to retrieve his position and pay for the said goods.

The bankrupt appeared to have commenced business with little except borrowed capital, but his personal expenses and that of his family appeared to have been very moderate.

Bacon and Bagguley, for the bankrupt, in support of his appeal, urged that the refusal of a certificate and all protection to the bankrupt was too severe a punishment; for, although his conduct was improper, it arose in a great measure from his inexperience and youth, and the position in which he was placed by the credit that had been given to him. [illegible] undertook this business [illegible] it had not been successful, he would have been [illegible] with the [illegible] Bankruptcy Act, and [illegible] of the Bankruptcy Court, the petition, and insisted that the bankrupt had bought the wine for the purpose of pledging it; that it was unnecessary, and indeed impossible, to prove what might have been his intention when he made each particular purchase; but his systematically buying goods, and then pledging them, and allowing them to be sold by the person advancing him money, was sufficient to enable the court to presume that his intention was fraudulent, and that his conduct and dealings amounted to offences within the meaning of the 256th section of the Act. They referred to Ex parte Holthouse, 18 L. T. 84.

Baggallay, in reply.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—The conduct of the petitioner has been with great propriety admitted by his counsel to have been in several respects of a blameable description—I mean his conduct as a trader. The case, however, (to say nothing of the difference which existed in point of age between the bankrupt in the case of Holthouse and the present) is not one which deserves, in our opinion, to be visited in the same way as was done in Ex parte Holthouse, (18 L. T. Rep. 84,) a case which I then thought, and still think, was rightly decided. A question has been raised whether this case has been brought within the 256th section of the Act, as to which we must recollect that it contains the words "offences," and that there is absent from this Act a provision that the Act shall be construed beneficially to creditors. The 256th section, therefore, must receive rather a strict than a loose construction, and I am of opinion, though there was some degree of impropriety in the conduct of the bankrupt, it has not been proved to us that there was a contracting of debts by fraud or false representation, within the terms of the 256th section; and there is no other ground for bringing him within that section. The case, therefore, falls within the discretion of the court; it is one of a young man without capital, or nearly so, and known by his creditors so to be, not brought up to business, and probably known by his creditors not to be brought up to business, who has acted rashly and imprudently in many respects, who bought goods, and very soon after pledged them; but I am not satisfied that it would be right to attribute to him having bought them with the mere view of pledging, or with a dishonest intention. His books have been kept regularly; I am not aware of any instance of untruth uttered by him; and to this I add, that, being a married man with two children, his personal expenses have been kept within the bounds of moderation and economy, in a manner highly commendable; and there is no instance of ostentation or selfish expenditure. Taking these things together, my impression is that a milder sentence than was awarded by the commissioner may be consistent with the interests of society, to which regard is to be had in these cases. The demands of justice will, I think, be satisfied by suspending the certificate for two years from the 14th June last, and, when granted, letting it be one of the third class; and by depriving him of protection for six months from this day, and for no longer time.

Lord Justice TURNER entirely coincided with the judgment of his learned brother, and observed that the case did not fall within the 256th section of the statute; that if it had, he should have entertained doubt whether the principle had not here gone too far; for if, where only one of the offences specified in that section had been committed, the Commissioner was bound to inflict the extreme penalty, it would be difficult to see what would be done if the bankrupt had been guilty of all the offences. Looking at the facts of the present case, one was bound to say that the conduct of the bankrupt had been blameable; but then there were other circumstances which deserved the consideration of the court; and the measure of justice awarded by the Lord Justice Knight Bruce seemed well adapted to meet the merits of the case.

STANSFIELD v. HOBSON.

Mortgagor and mortgagee—Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28—Redemption.

A mortgagee had been upwards of twenty years in possession of the mortgaged premises, when, in answer to a letter of the mortgagors' solicitor, requesting to know when he could see him as to his claims on the property, he replied that he did not see the use of a meeting "unless some party is ready with the money to pay me off;"

Held, affirming the decision of the court below, that it was a sufficient acknowledgment in writing of the title of the mortgagors to their solicitor, acting as their agent, to take the case out of the general provisions of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, under the 28th section of that statute.

[illegible] was filed by the plaintiff James [illegible] on behalf of themselves and [illegible] scheme, called the [illegible] against one Robertson, [illegible] Hobson, &c. the [illegible] mortgagee of John Hobson, [illegible] which [illegible] a letter given by him to [illegible] the mortgagors, or one of the mortgagors, in March 1850, after twenty years had elapsed from the time when he had entered into possession, was such an acknowledgment as to take the case out of the 28th section of the new Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, whereby it is, amongst other things, enacted, "that when a mortgagee shall have obtained the possession or receipt of the profits of any land, or the receipt of any rent comprised in his mortgage, the mortgagor, or any person claiming through him, shall not bring a suit to redeem the mortgage, but within twenty years next after the time at which the mortgagee obtained such possession or receipt; unless in the meantime an acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagor, or of his right of redemption, shall have been given to the mortgagor, or some person claiming his estate, or to the agent of such mortgagor or person, in writing signed by the mortgagee, or the person claiming through him.

It appeared that on the 2nd Feb. 1850, Mr. Radcliffe, the solicitor of the plaintiff, wrote a letter to the defendant John Hobson, requesting to know when he could see him in Bakewell or Manchester as to his claims upon the said property; and that, in answer to his letter, he received the following letter from the defendant Hobson:—

"Sir,—I received yours of the 2nd inst. I do not see the use of a meeting, either here or at Manchester, unless some party is ready with the money to pay me off.—I am your obedient servant, JOHN HOBSON.

"Bakewell, Feb. 5, 1850."

Sir J. Romilly, M.R. held that this letter was a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, and made a decree for redemption; and from this decision the defendant now appealed.

Elmsley and Osborne, for the plaintiff, in support of the decree of the M. R. relied upon Trulock v. Robey, 12 Sim. 402, where it was held that an acknowledgment in writing of the right of the mortgagor made to his agent was sufficient to take the case out of the statute. That in this case the acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagors to redeem was sufficiently clear.

Rondell Palmer and Hamilton Humphreys endeavoured to distinguish the case from Trulock v. Robey, and contended that there was not a sufficient acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagors; that, according to the proper construction to be put upon the 28th section, the acknowledgment, assuming it to be in other respects a valid one, not having been made within twenty years next after the mortgagee obtaining the possession or the receipt of the profits of the land, was of no effect: (Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 403; Haydon v. Sutton, 7 Bing. 163; Hodle v. Healey, 6 Madd. 181, were cited and commented on.)

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—Perhaps we ought to feel some difficulty about this case; but I for my part have no doubts. It appears to me that the letter of the 5th Feb. acknowledged that the writer of the letter, Mr. Hobson, holds the estate to which it relates on a title which is redeemable, that is to say, by a mortgagee's title. It is said, however, that this does not answer the requisitions of the statute, as not being an acknowledgment of the plaintiff's right to redeem. It certainly is an acknowledgment of some person having a right to redeem: and it seems to me, according to the true construction to be put upon the letter, to acknowledge a title to redeem in the person on whose behalf the letter was written to which the letter of the 5th Feb. was an answer. I am of opinion that the decision of the M. R. was correct, and that this appeal ought to be dismissed with costs.

Lord Justice TURNER.—I am of the same opinion. When Mr. Hobson, in his letter, makes use of the terms—"I do not see the use of meeting here or at Manchester unless some party is ready with the money to pay me off," that is clearly an admission of some party having a right to redeem. But then it is assumed that it is not an admission of the right of these parties to redeem. I think, however, that it is, according to the reasonable construction to be put upon the letter of the 5th Feb., and taking into consideration that it was addressed to the solicitor, or agent of the mortgagor's, making an offer to redeem. Again, it is said that the offer is conditional "on some one having the money ready to pay the mortgage off." But that is not so, as time would necessarily be allowed to the parties for procuring the money, and for the accounts to be settled and the balance ascertained. The result is, that the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL v. SMYTHIES.

Charity—Apportionment of income—Costs.

A charitable institution was established for the support and maintenance of a master and five poor persons, who were incorporated and entitled to a certain amount of the income of the charity property for their support and maintenance. The master having died in the month of March, his representatives were

ROLLS COURT.

Held entitled to an apportionment of the dividends on stock (not within the Apportionment Act) accruing due in the July following.

The costs of the petition on the subject held payable not out of the charity fund, but out of the half-year's income, the residue of which was to be apportioned.

By letters patent, dated 9th Oct. in the eighth year of the reign of King James I. reciting that a certain college or hospital was then lately discovered to have been founded in the suburbs of the town of Colchester in Essex by Eudo Dapifer, formerly seneschal of King Henry I. after the conquest, commonly called the Hospital of St Mary Magdalene, in the suburbs of the town of Colchester, for the habitation of lepers and infirm persons, that the said college or hospital was fallen into decay and its property alienated and converted from its proper uses, and that his Majesty was desirous to provide for the foundation and perpetual relief and support of that college or hospital, and of the master and poor who should be and be maintained in the same; it was thereby ordained and granted that from thenceforth and for ever there should be one college or hospital of the poor in the suburbs of the town of Colchester for the relief or maintenance of the poor, that should exist for ever, and be called the the College or Hospital of King James, in the suburbs of the town of Colchester; that it should consist for ever of one master and five poor; and in order that the goods, lands, tenements, incomes, revenues, and other hereditaments which had been granted and assigned for the perpetual support of the said college or hospital, might be better governed and expended for the support and maintenance of the master and poor of the said college or hospital, and for the preservation of the said college or hospital for ever, it was thereby further ordained that thenceforth and for ever there should be one master of the said college or hospital, and of the goods, chattels, lands, and other possessions thereof, and that he should have the cure of the souls of the parishioners of St. Mary Magdalene in the said town of Colchester, and he should there celebrate divine service; and further, that there should be five poor persons who alone, either men or women, should be supported, relieved, and maintained in the said college or hospital, and they should be called the poor of the College or Hospital of King James, in the suburbs of the town of Colchester, and for their support, relief, and maintenance they should have, enjoy, and receive through the hands of the said master for the time being, or of his assignees, annually 52*s.*, which should be paid to the same poor by the same master for the time being, or by his assignees, by equal quarterly payments of 13*s.* each at the four usual feasts; and the persons so appointed poor persons of the college or hospital were to continue so for life, unless for reasonable cause they should be removed by the master; and in case of death or removal of any one or more of such poor persons the master was authorised to elect one or more others in their place; and the master and poor of the said college or hospital were thereby created and constituted a body corporate and politic by the name of "The Master and Poor of the College or Hospital of King James, in the suburbs of the town of Colchester;" and the Chancellor or Keeper of the Great Seal of England was thereby appointed visitor of the college or hospital, and he was authorised, on the death or removal of the master, to appoint a fit person in his place; and the master was thereby authorised and empowered, with the consent of the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General for the time being, or either of them, to make, ordain and establish good, useful, and wholesome statutes, laws, and ordinances in writing touching the government, election and expulsion, punishment, order, and direction of the master and poor of the college, and to appoint any other things whatsoever concerning the college, and the ordering and disposal of the goods, rents, revenues, and possession thereof; and it was thereby further ordained that the income and revenues of all the manors, lands, hereditaments, and possessions, which had been theretofore or should thereafter be given to the perpetual support and maintenance of the said college or hospital, should be disposed of and expended for the support of the master and poor of the college or hospital for the time being, and for the support, maintenance, and repairs of the houses, tenements, and possessions of the college or hospital, according to the statutes, laws, and ordinances aforesaid. A body of laws and statutes was accordingly drawn up for the regulation of the hospital and its members, relating principally to the powers and duties of the master, and partly also to the conduct and obligations of the poor, who were to be resident, and not to lodge a night elsewhere without the licence of the master. At the time the information was filed the annual income derived from the property and possessions of the hospital had greatly increased, and amounted to upwards of 350*l.* a year; but no increase had at any time been made in the yearly payment of 52*s.* to each of the five poor persons; but the whole of the residue, after satisfying those five yearly payments, had from the establishment of the hospital been uniformly received and taken by the master for the time being for his own use. On the years 1796 and 1797 respectively, two leases of parts of the charity lands were granted by the then master of the college to the Board of Ordnance for the terms of twenty-one years each, on certain terms, for the purpose of building barracks; and on the 18th May, 1818, an agreement was entered into between the Rev. John Robert Smythies, the then master of the college, and the comptroller of the barrack-office, that the whole of the barrack-buildings should be sold by auction, and that one moiety of the proceeds of the sale should be applied in paying to Mr. Smythies two fines amounting to about 115*l.* and the residue should be received by Mr. Smythies in consideration of restoring the ground to its former state. This residue amounted to upwards of 5000*l.*, which Mr. Smythies treated as his own private property; but on the hearing of the information it was held, among other things, that this sum was not a profit personal to the master, but received by him in trust for the charity. The money was accordingly paid into court, and the income was received by Mr. Smythies in the same manner as the income of the other charity property. The sum so paid in, though over 5000*l.* at first, was subsequently reduced by sales of the Consols. In which it was invested from time to time, for payment of costs, &c. so as to amount now to only 2801*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.* Consols. Mr. Smythies died on the 24th March, 1852, and John Kinnersley Smythies and George Smythies are his executors. On the death of Mr. Smythies, the petitioner, the Rev. Barton Lodge was appointed master of the college or hospital; and he now presented his petition, praying that the costs might be taxed and paid, and that the income of the fund in question should be paid to him. The executors of Mr. Smythies, however, claimed to be entitled to a portion of the income of the half-year ending 5th July, 1852, corresponding to the time between the 6th January and the 24th March, and that the income should be apportioned accordingly.

Howe, for the petitioner, Mr. Lodge, said, it was admitted that the case did not come within the Apportionment Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22), but it is contended that there ought to be apportionment on the terms of the charter; but there is no foundation for any such construction. The only exceptions to the rule against apportionment, in cases not coming within the Act, are those of infants, and married women living separate from their husbands. In Rashleigh v. Master, 3 Bro. C. C. 101, it was held that the dividends of stock were not apportionable, though money invested in land might have been.

Smythe, contrà, contended that, the charity being intended for the maintenance and support of poor persons, the case came within the principle of the rule as to infants; and the same reason would apply to the case of successive incumbents of a benefice, the proceeds of which are apportionable. This is not an annuity, but only a case of a man having an office to discharge, and the corporation being a trustee of the money.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—I think there must be an apportionment. The question does not rest on the general ground of cases not coming within the Act, but upon the principle of the rule in cases of infants and married women who have no other support; and I think this is so, on the ground of the construction of the language of the charter. This is an eleemosynary establishment, the funds of which, upon a proper construction of the letters patent, are to be applied for the support and maintenance of poor persons, and that must be de die in diem, for otherwise the almspeople could not get what would support them during the year, and, if persons who supplied them could not recover what was owing for supplies, they would be deprived of payment altogether. The same principle applies to the master; and, therefore, there must be an apportionment of the dividends to the representatives of the late master. The costs as to this petition are to come, not out of the fund, but out of the half-year's income, and the residue of the payment thereof to be apportioned.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL v. HALL.

Charity—Setting aside long lease—Notice of charitable trusts—Grant of new lease in consideration of surrender of previous lease.

Charity lands were let in the year 1730 at a rental of 4*l.* per annum. The indenture of demise was made between the three then surviving trustees of the charity and the lessee, but no notice was therein taken of the trusts to which the property was subject. In 1800 the assignees of the lessee surrendered it, and in consideration of the surrender and a fine of 300*l.* obtained a new lease at the same rent as the old. The new lease was made by the trustees of the property (who had been newly appointed) with the consent of the party for the time being beneficially interested under the trusts, and it contained a clause empowering the lessee to erect such buildings as should be necessary, and at the expiration of the lease to remove and carry away the then or thereafter to be erected buildings. The lessee afterwards sub-let the property:

Held, that the lease was improvident, and both it and the under-leases must be set aside, and an account of the rents and profits must be taken since the filing of the information; but without costs.

Held also, that the fact of the lease being granted in consideration of the surrender of the previous lease made no difference.

Held also, that as none of the grantors of the new lease were the same as those who granted the old lease, this should have put the lessee on inquiry as to their title, which would have disclosed the trusts:

Held also, that both the last-mentioned circumstances, and the fact that the lease was made with the consent of one who turns out to be the party for the time being beneficially interested, constituted sufficient constructive notice of the trust.

This was an information to set aside certain leases of charity property. It appeared that Robert Stephenson, by lease and release, bearing date the 14th and 15th Aug. 1711, conveyed a piece of meadow land with a cottage and windmill standing thereon, situate at Drypool, Yorkshire, to trustees upon trust after the death of the grantor for the use and behoof of the nonconforming Protestant preaching minister or ministers for the time being, at the chapel or meeting-house in Lair Gate in Beverley, for ever. By indenture bearing date the 10th March, 1730, and made between the three then surviving trustees of the charity of the one part, and John Birkett of the other part, the property was demised to John Birkett for the term of ninety-nine years at a rent of 4*l.* In this lease no notice was taken of the trust. The original trustees being all dead in 1800, seven new trustees were appointed, and by lease and release of the 30th and 31st July 1800, and made between the heir-at-law of the last surviving trustee of the first part, Peter Feast, the then nonconforming Protestant preaching minister at Beverley of the second part, and the seven new trustees of the third part, the property was conveyed to the new trustees to hold upon the trusts of the original grant. Soon after their appointment the trustees, being desirous of raising money for the purpose of repairing the chapel, agreed with Mrs. Elizabeth Stickney, in whom the lease of 1730 had become vested, to grant a renewed lease of the property in consideration of her surrendering the old lease and paying a fine of 300*l.* An indenture of lease, bearing date 6th Sept. 1800, was accordingly executed by the seven new trustees of the first part, Peter Feast, described as the nonconforming Protestant preaching minister of Beverley of the second part, and Mrs. Stickney of the third part, and thereby the trustees, with the consent and approbation of Peter Feast, demised the property to Mrs. Stickney for a term of ninety-eight years at a rent of 4*l.* per annum. This lease contained a clause empowering the lessee to erect such buildings as should be necessary for her use: and at the expiration of the lease to remove and carry away such buildings as were then standing thereon, and also such other buildings as might be so built during the term. The clause as to the buildings, and the joining of the minister in the lease, constituted the only difference between it and the surrendered lease, which, in other respects, was expressed in precisely the same terms. On the 24th March, 1807, Mrs. Stickney granted an underlease of part of the premises to George Thompson, who died several years since, and his representative is the defendant John Hall. On the 2nd Oct. 1840, Mrs. Stickney granted an underlease of the residue of the property to the defendants Blaine and Ridsdale. Mr. William Young, the present minister of the chapel, having filed an information to set aside the lease of 1800, and the underleases, as improvident and injurious to the charity, the cause now came on to be heard.

R. Palmer and Humphreys for the information.

Roupell and Ellis, for the defendant Hall, contended that the lease was valid, and ought not to be set aside. The length of the term was not, per se, a ground for setting it aside; and, as to its being an improvident lease, it was sufficient to say that the property was of little value, and 300*l.* was an adequate consideration for the renewed lease. Besides, the lessee, Mrs. Stickney, had no notice of the charitable trust on which the land was held, nor was there any constructive trust; for the mere fact of the dissenting minister joining as a consenting party in the execution of the lease was not sufficient to raise any suspicion of the trust.

Lloyd and J. H. Palmer, for the devisees of Mrs. Stickney, insisted that the view of the case taken on the part of Hall was correct.

Cookrin for the trustees of the charity.

The following cases were cited: Attorney-General v. Owen, 10 Ves. 555; Attorney-General v. Backhouse, 17 Ves. 283; Attorney-General v. Green, 6 Ves. 452; Attorney-General v. Griffith, 13 Ves. 565; Attorney-General v. Magwood, 18 Ves. 315; Attorney-General v. Brooke, 18 Ves. 319; Attorney-General v. Wray, T. & R. 507; Attorney-General v. Morgan, 2 Russ. 306; Kenny v. Brown, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 512; Attorney-General v. Kerr, 2 Beav. 420; Attorney-General v. Purgeter, 6 Beav. 150; Attorney-General v. South Sea Company, 4 Beav. 453; Attorney-General v. Pilgrim, 12 Beav. 57; Jones v. Smith, 1 Hare, 55; S. C. 1 Phill. 244; Nest v. Reid, 2 Hare, 227; Sugd. V. & P. (11th edit.) 1040.

The MASTER of the ROLLS said, there were two questions to be considered in the present case, first, whether the lease in question was an improvident lease, and secondly, whether the lessee had notice of the trust. Now, as to improvidence, it was true the mere inadequacy of rent was not of itself sufficient to set aside a lease unless the inadequacy was excessive; but that rule applied only to cases in which the inadequacy of the rent was the only question. In the present case, there were other important considerations besides mere inadequacy to be taken into account. The lease was for a long term of ninety-nine years, though it was a mere husbanding lease, and, moreover, the covenants contained in it were very unusual, for it is thereby provided, among other things, that the lessee may remove any building on the premises at the end of the term. All the authorities concur in making it necessary for me to hold that a lease of such a kind is improvident, and in establishing the principle that the burden of proof rests on the lessee to show there was no notice of the land being charity property. The fact that the lease in this case was granted in consideration of the surrender of a previous lease made no difference, and even suppose it did, the fine paid for it was of very inadequate value; and, besides, there still remained the difficulty as to the length of the term. If, notwithstanding, it could be shown by the lessee that there was no notice of the trust, he (the M. R.) would not have made a decree to cancel the lease, unless, indeed, the lessee could have been put in the same situation as if it had not been executed; but in this case he was of opinion that Mrs. Stickney must be considered as having had notice. She was the owner of the lease of 1730, and she agreed to surrender it and take a new lease on payment of a premium. In carrying out this agreement, it was obvious, at first sight, that none of the persons who professed to grant the new lease were the same as those who made the lease of 1730; and this naturally ought to put Mrs. Stickney upon inquiry as to their title; and by that inquiry she would learn that their title must have been derived from the heir of the last surviving lessor or trustee of the charity property. This would lead her to a knowledge of the deed of July 31, 1800, in which she would find the trusts fully set out. That would be in itself sufficient notice of the trusts; but that is not all, for Mr Feast was made a consenting party to the lease, and that must clearly have been in respect of some interest in the property; and the question would naturally arise, what that interest might be; and the answer to that question would disclose the trust. Now a lessee must be supposed to know what interest a party who consents to or concurs in a lease has in the property demised; and Mrs. Stickney must in this case be fixed with constructive notice of the charitable trust. The lease must therefore be set aside, and an account must be taken of the rents and profits since the information was filed; but there will be no costs.

V. C. KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

Reported by W. H. RENNET, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-law.

Dec. 18 and 20.

SCOREY v. HARRISON.

Domicile—What effects pass under the words "property in a colony," in a will.

A person at the Cape of Good Hope was indebted to a testator's estate in England, who by his will bequeathed "all his property which he should leave in the said colony" to A. B. The debt was secured by a promissory note.

Held, that the promissory note passed under the word "property" in the testator's will.

The testator, James Scorey, who had been a master mariner, by a codicil to his will, after giving his widow a life estate in the income of his property and effects, upon the decease of his wife, "gave and bequeathed all his property which he should have in the said colony (the Cape of Good Hope) to his said child or children, if more than one, in equal shares." A suit had been instituted for the administration of the testator's estate, and the Master had found under the usual reference that the testator, at the time of his death, possessed a promissory note in the following words, "London, 11th Sept. 1845. 500*l.* Seven years after date, I promise to pay to Jas. Scory, Esq. or order, 500*l.* with interest from the date hereof, at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum, payable quarterly; the said sum to be paid before the said seven years at my option. Payable at J. M. Boyer's, St Michael's Alley, Cornhill. James Falconer." A question arose on the further directions whether the note passed under the words of the above bequest.

Russell and Martelli contended that the note did not pass. They cited Brook v. Turner, 7 Sim. 671, and Story's Conflict of Laws, 2nd edit. 416.

Giffard, contrà, contended that as Falconer was domiciled at the Cape, and the testator at the time of the making of the codicil was also there, the locality of the debt followed the domicile of the debtor. No presentment of the note in London was necessary. He relied on Williams v. Wentworth, 19 L. J. Ch. 2; Tyler v. Bell, 2 My. & Cr. 105.

Selwyn and Druce, for other parties.

Russell, in reply.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, The effect of the statements in the Master's report is this: Mr. Scorey was resident at the Cape of Good Hope; he made this codicil there, and after the day aforesaid, Falconer, the maker of the note, was also a resident at the Cape. What did the testator mean by the words of his codicil? Did he mean to include this property—this promissory note,—or did he not? If I could find in the codicil anything to lead me to say that he had not regard to probate or bona notabilia—if I could find any expression of what was his intention, whatever was the law of bona notabilia—I should decide according to such intention; but I have nothing to guide me except the words of the codicil. I have therefore only to consider what is the law with regard to the locality of such property. Perhaps, strictly speaking, it has no locality; but the law says that, for certain purposes, it shall have a locality when the party dies. The first question is as to probate: in what court is probate to be taken out? and that depends upon the question whether he had or had not property in such a diocese or province. If he had property only in a particular diocese, probate must be taken out there; if in more than one, then in the province; if more, then in both provinces. The law, therefore, has said that for determining in what court to take out probate there shall be observed certain rules with respect to the locality or supposed locality of the property; and where there is a simple contract debt upon a promissory note, the court has said that, for the purpose of probate, that debt shall be considered as having its locality in the place where the maker of it or the debtor resided. Now if Mr. Falconer, at the time of the testator's death, had been resident in England, for instance, in the diocese of Winchester, then it would have been necessary to have taken out probate or letters of administration, as the case might be, in the diocese of Winchester—but if property in more dioceses, then in the province of Canterbury. If that had been the case, in this instance the property would not have been within the terms of the will. Now what other indication can I have of the testator's meaning than that which I have already referred to—that which the law defines to be the locality? I have no other resource than to decide that this debt, which was due from a person resident at the Cape of Good Hope to the testator at the Cape, is to be treated as intended by him to be included in this property so designated by him, and must be included and treated as property comprised in this bequest. Order accordingly.

Lands Clauses Consolidation Act—Investment—Costs.

A sum of money having been paid into court by a company as the consideration money for part of an estate taken by them, a petition was presented that the amount might be taken as part of the purchase money of that estate and carried over to the account in the suit:

Held, that the transfer from the one account to the other was a payment out of court within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.

The company is not bound to pay the costs of all the parties beneficially entitled if they do not join in the application to the court.

The petitioner in this case was entitled to one-tenth part of a sum paid in by the London and North-Western Railway Company as consideration money for lands taken by them. The estate was in the course of administration in this court. The land, together with other land, had been directed by the testator in the cause to be sold and distributed in certain shares.

The petition prayed that the money paid in by the company might be transferred by the Accountant-General from the account to which it stood to the credit of the cause. The petitioner had served the trustees under the will and the other nine parties beneficially interested in the produce of the sale of the estate.

Bailey, Follett, and Eddis, and other gentlemen, for the petitioner and the other parties.

Speed, for the railway company, contended that the company ought not to pay all the costs of the application. The 70th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act authorises persons entitled to the rents so to apply. The owners of the other nine-tenths were not necessary parties to the petition, unless indeed they had been made co-petitioners, when the company could not have objected to pay the costs of the one application. This was not a payment out of court, but a simple transfer from one account to another. He cited Re Isaac, 4 Myl. & Cr. 11; Hare v. Smith, 14 Jur. 55.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR said: No doubt the petitioner had power under the Act to present this petition. He was entitled to one-tenth of the proceeds of the sale, which would of course include one-tenth of the income of the estates. As to the question whether the court possessed jurisdiction under the Act to direct payment of the costs of a transfer from one account to another, he thought it had; as one of the cases pointed at by the Act was a payment of money out of court. Now, although this was not literally a payment out of court, it was a payment out of one account to another, and he thought came within the court's jurisdiction as to costs. The other question was,—whether these parties ought not to pay their own costs. Now it appeared to him, that upon the authorities, as well as upon the common sense of the matter, the company was bound to pay the costs of all parties that ought to be served; but upon an application of this sort consistently with that rule, if there be a great number of persons entitled to aliquot parts, and one of them petitions and serves the others, it was by no means of course that the company should pay their additional costs incurred by such service. Here the petitioner is entitled to one-tenth, and nine others appear, many of them separately. In his, the Vice-Chancellor's opinion, the petitioner ought to have applied to the other persons having the same interest as himself, and asked them to join in the petition. There might have been some good reason why they could not so join; and there might in that case have been a reason why the company might have been obliged to pay their costs. As to the trustees they could not properly join in the petition, and they must have their costs. The company would therefore only have to pay the costs of the petitioner and the trustees. Order accordingly.

Apportionment Act, 4 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2.

A decree or order of the court which directs the payment of moneys to parties is not such an "instrument" mentioned in the 2nd section as comes within the operation of the Apportionment Act.

In the course of the hearing of a petition for the arrangement and payment of certain funds amongst parties entitled thereto, a question arose as to whether a deed of settlement, by virtue of the provisions of which the parties derived their interests in certain funds, was or was not executed before the Apportionment Act (which received the royal assent on the 16th June 1834) came into operation.

C. Hall, in support of the petition, said that, whether that were so or not various orders of the court had been made since that time, which he submitted had the effect of making the dividends of some of the funds apportionable under the 2nd section of the Act. The words of the first part of the section are: "And be it further enacted that from and after the passing of this Act all rents-service reserved on any lease by a tenant in fee, or for any life interest, or by any lease granted under any power (and which leases shall have been granted after the passing of this Act), and all rents-charge and other rents, annuities, pensions, dividends, moduses, compositions, and all other payments of every description in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland made payable or coming due at fixed periods, under any instrument that shall be executed after the passing of this Act, or (being a will or testamentary instrument) shall come into operation after the passing of this Act, shall be apportioned so and in such manner that, on the death of any person interested in any such rents, annuities, pensions, dividends, moduses, compositions, or other payments as aforesaid, shall," &c. &c.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR held that a decree or order of the court which was pronounced after the passing of the Act, and by which the rights of parties in funds or the dividends thereon might be declared, was not such an "instrument" as was contemplated by the Legislature in the above section.

SMITH v. HURST.

Trust deed for creditors—Voluntary deed—Power of revocation—Writ of fieri facias—No return.

A. B. was indebted to several creditors, and among them to C. D. He conveyed and assigned freehold, leasehold and personal estate to C. D. (without prejudice to the mortgage C. D. had over part of the property, and without prejudice to his character of receiver over the whole), upon trust for sale and to pay the produce among such of the creditors of A. B. as C. D. in his uncontrolled discretion should think fit; and there was an ultimate trust for A. B. his heirs, administrators, and assigns. The deed contained powers of compromise of debts, cutting timber, and that C. D. might at any time resign the trusts. C. D. was not described as a creditor, and was a party only as trustee, and no other creditor even knew of the existence of the deed. E. F. obtained a judgment against A. B. but no return was made by the sheriff on the fi. fa. E. F. filed a bill to impeach the deed:

Held, that the deed was revocable and therefore void; that the sheriff having made no return to the writ of E. F., no elegit could issue, and therefore E. F. could not maintain the suit as against the freehold estates: and that where property is vested in trustees for the benefit of creditors named, the grantor cannot revoke it; but where the deed is professed to be made for the benefit of unnamed creditors generally, the question whether it is revocable or not depends in each case on its own particular circumstances.

In this case the suit was instituted for the purpose of questioning the validity of, and setting aside, a deed of trust, professed to have been executed by Mr. Robert Henry Hurst for the benefit of creditors. The plaintiffs were Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smith, bankers; and the defendants were Mr. Hurst, Mr. Henry Padwick, his solicitor and receiver, and Mr. Francis O'Byrne, creditor by judgment of Mr. Hurst. The bill stated that in the month of Oct. 1844, the defendant Mr. Hurst was tenant for life under the will of his father of considerable freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates, subject to incumbrances, and was entitled absolutely to other freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates, and was possessed of considerable personal estate; that, being then largely indebted to Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths, the plaintiffs and to other persons, he determined to make a conveyance to the defendant Mr. Padwick, his solicitor and confidential agent, under the pretence of making provision thereby for the payment of his debts, but, in reality, for his private convenience, and for the purpose of hindering, delaying, and defeating his creditors, and particularly the plaintiffs; and that accordingly a conveyance and assignment were made by him to the defendant Mr. Padwick, by a deed dated the 29th Oct. 1844: that this deed was kept secret from the plaintiffs and the other creditors; that the defendant Mr. Hurst, notwithstanding the execution of it, continued in possession of the property, but that he soon afterwards went abroad; that after he had gone abroad, it was for the first time communicated to the plaintiffs by Mr. Padwick's agent, that the conveyance and assignment had been made to him, Mr. Padwick, in trust for creditors, but that the deed was not produced; and that the plaintiffs consequently, on the 28th Nov. 1844, brought an action against the defendant Hurst for 12,000*l.* and upwards, the balance due to them on a banking account: that a correspondence ensued pending the action, in the course of which it appears that an offer was made on the part of Mr. Padwick to give to the plaintiffs security on the defendant Mr. Hurst's life interest, and upon a life interest in remainder, to which the son of that defendant was entitled; and that in one of the letters which passed in the course of this correspondence, it was stated that no creditor was party to the deed except Mr. Padwick, and that he was not a party in the character of a creditor; that a consent was given to judgment being signed in that action, in default of the debt being paid, on or before the 21st Jan. 1845, and that, the debt not having been paid, judgment was signed on the 22nd of January, and a fi. fa. issued, but that the execution of the fi. fa. was prevented by Mr. Padwick, who was in possession of the property, and had produced the deed to the sheriff's officer, and told him that the sheriff must return nulla bona; and that under those circumstances the sheriff had not yet made any return,—the plaintiffs being in this difficulty, that on the one hand no writ of elegit could be issued until some return to the fi. fa. was made; and, on the other hand, if a return of nulla bona were made, other creditors of the defendant Mr. Hurst, who had obtained judgments and issued executions, would acquire a prior right at law against the personal effects of the defendant Mr. Hurst. That all the freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates were in mortgage, and the legal estate outstanding in the mortgage, and that the plaintiffs' judgment had been duly registered. The bill then charged that no creditor of Mr. Hurst was at the time of the execution of the deed of 1844, or at any time since, party or privy thereto, or assented thereto, and that the same was entirely for the convenience of Mr. Hurst, and revocable at his sole will and pleasure, and that Mr. Padwick was merely a trustee for him; and that the deed and conveyance was fraudulent and void in equity, and ought to be set aside as against the plaintiffs, Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smith. The bill then prayed a declaration that the conveyance and assignment of 1844 were fraudulent and void as against the plaintiffs, and that it might be set aside accordingly; that the plaintiffs might be declared to have a lien for the amount of the judgment debt and interest upon all their beneficial interest of Mr. Hurst in the real estates and personal effects comprised in it, and to have an equitable execution against the same, and for an account of the real and personal estates, and of the plaintiff's debt and interest; that, if necessary, the plaintiffs might be at liberty to sue out one or more writ or writs of elegit against the real estate, and might have equitable execution thereupon; that the defendants might be restrained from selling or removing any of the property, and from cutting any timber, and from receiving the rents of the real and leasehold estates, or intermeddling with the chattels, until the plaintiffs' debt and interest should be paid; and that a receiver might be appointed.

Mr. Padwick put in his answer, by which he admitted, that at the date of the deed of 1844 Mr. Hurst was indebted to Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smith; that he (Padwick) was the confidential solicitor and agent of the defendant Mr. Hurst; that the defendant Mr. Hurst left this country on the 31st Oct. 1844, under the impression that the arrangement of his affairs would be facilitated by his absence, and that he would be thereby saved from personal annoyance, and from being served with process in the suit of the plaintiffs, or any of his creditors. He also admitted the action brought by the plaintiffs, and the correspondence which passed during the pendency of it, the judgment, and the issuing of execution. He also fully stated the deed, and gave an account of the circumstances relating to it. He denied that it was kept secret, and said that the plaintiffs had reason to know that such a deed had been executed as early as the 5th Nov. following; and he also denied that any part of the property remained in the possession of the defendant Mr. Hurst after the deed was executed, except some small part of it, which was retained under an arrangement made before the date of the deed. He admitted the estates to be in mortgage, and submitted that the indenture of the 29th Oct. 1844 was not revocable, and that the trusts of it were still subsisting; and as to the personal estate, he stated that some portion of it formed part of the estate of the defendant Mr. Hurst's father, some of whose debts and legacies still remain unpaid, and to whom the defendant Mr. Hurst was residuary legatee.

The evidence on the part of the plaintiffs proved their judgment debt and the correspondence. On the part of the defendant Mr. Padwick, a Mr. Philpotts was examined, who, after deposing to his having been a large creditor of Mr. Hurst, and having obtained a mortgage for his debt, stated that he did not suggest any trust deed for the benefit of himself or other creditors, but advised Mr. Hurst to place his affairs in the hands of some gentleman who should be empowered to act in his absence; and that he himself declined to act as such trustee, and was ignorant of the contents of the deed. Several other witnesses were examined on the part of this defendant, who proved that they were creditors of the defendant Hurst in and before Oct. 1844, and employed Mr. Padwick to recover and obtain security for their debts, &c.; that he afterwards told them that the defendant Hurst had executed a deed of conveyance and assignment in trust for his creditors to him, the defendant Mr. Padwick; and some of them stated that they abstained from suing for their debts upon the faith of the deed. It was also proved on the part of this defendant that, independently of his mortgage debt, he was a creditor of the defendant Mr. Hurst at the time when the deed in question was executed to a considerable amount; and that immediately upon the deed being executed he acted as the trustee and in the trusts thereof. The arguments lasted the greater part of two days, and will be found sufficiently referred to in the judgment.

Sir W. P. Wood in reply.

May 28.—The VICE-CHANCELLOR, after stating in minute detail the facts of the case, the allegations of the bill, the statements and admissions in the answers, and the effect of the evidence in the cause, proceeded as follows:—In this state of circumstances the principal question appears to me to be whether the deed of the 29th Oct. 1844 is fraudulent and void against the plaintiffs. For I think that, independently of the questions as to the validity of the deed, and as to the right of the plaintiffs under stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, which do not arise upon the original bill (a), further than as the court might be bound to interfere for the protection of the property with a view to the future right arising under the statute, the bill hardly states a case for the interposition of a court of equity, independently of the remedies given by the statute referred to. The rights of judgment creditors, as I conceive, are purely legal rights, and the interposition of this court in their favour rests, as I apprehend, upon the principle of aiding the legal right. Thus the court may be called upon to interpose its aid for the purpose of removing out of the way any impediments which may exist to the exercise by judgment creditors of their legal rights, or it may, as I apprehend, be called upon to interfere for the preservation of the property pending disputes at law as to the rights of judgment creditors; and the court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction in the administration of assets, may also have occasion to deal with the legal rights of judgment creditors; but the province of this court is to aid, and not to supply or to extend the legal right. Those principles were laid down by Lord Cottenham in Neate v. The Duke of Marlborough, and in the principles there laid down I fully concur. I proceed, therefore, to examine the question as to the validity of this deed, and it will be convenient to consider the question in two points of view; first, as to the validity of the deed without reference to the circumstance of Padwick's being a creditor of Hurst, and to the dealings which are alleged to have been had under the deed; and, secondly, to what extent, if at all, the deed ought to be upheld with reference to the position of Padwick, and what has taken place since the deed was executed. As to the first point, it is unnecessary, I think, to say much upon it. There can, I apprehend, be no doubt that this deed, taken by itself, and without reference to the position of Padwick, and to the dealings with other creditors, was a mere deed of management, which it was competent to Hurst at any time to alter or revoke; and as little doubt can, I think, be entertained that such a deed could not be permitted to be set up against creditors, but would be fraudulent and void against them. A deed, which the debtor has power to revoke, and attempts to use as a shield against his creditors, cannot, I think, be otherwise than fraudulent and void against the creditors. The true question in the original case must therefore, as I think, depend upon the second point. How is the validity of the deed affected by Padwick's having been a creditor of Hurst at the time of its execution, and by the dealings which have been had with creditors under it? And, first, with reference to Padwick? Subject to the statutory rights in case of bankruptcy or insolvency, and other statutory remedies, every debtor has, as I apprehend, according to the law of this country, a perfect right to deal with his property in any mode which he may think best, provided he acts honestly in the disposal of it. He may dispose of it in favour of all or of any one or more of his creditors; and the law does not, so far as I am aware, interfere with his power and right to do so, if it be exercised bonâ fide; but I am not prepared to hold that the law of this country will permit a debtor to vest his property in one of his creditors for the mere purpose of protecting himself against the claims of his other creditors, or that a deed executed for such a purpose can be otherwise than fraudulent and void against the creditors whose interests are affected by it. Such a deed, although upon the face of it for the benefit of the creditors, is, in truth, a deed for the benefit of the debtor; and the creditor who accepts it takes not for his own benefit, but for the purpose of carrying out the views and objects of the debtor in fraud of his other creditors. He becomes a party to the fraud of the debtor, and, being a party to the fraud, he cannot, I think, be in any better position than the debtor who has perpetrated it. What then was the purpose and object of this deed? Was it executed for the purpose of securing the debt due to Padwick, or for the purpose of hindering and delaying the creditors of Hurst, and compelling them to come to such terms for his benefit as Padwick should think proper to dictate? The deed itself, and the conduct of the parties under it, must determine this question. The deed purports by the recital to be for the better arrangement of Hurst's affairs, and for the liquidation of his debts and engagements. It is left to the discretion of Padwick in favour of what creditors, and in what order of priority, the proceeds of the property should be applied. Power is given to him to negotiate and enter into compromises and arrangements, and to apply the proceeds of the property for the purpose of carrying them into effect. The trust is personal to him, and is to terminate with his death or resignation, and he has an unqualified power to resign. A salary is also reserved to him for collecting the income, and there is no mention throughout the deed of any unsecured debt being due to him. All these provisions seem to me to show that this deed was not framed for securing any debt due to Padwick. Could it be intended that he should exercise a discretion as to the application of the proceeds in payment of his own debt? Was his death to deprive his executors of all claim under the instrument? Was he to receive a salary for collecting the rents for his own benefit? Such could not I think have been the purpose of the deed. But, on the other hand, these considerations all tend, I think, to show that the object of the deed was to compel the creditors to come to such arrangements as Padwick should propose for the benefit of Hurst, and the conduct of the parties confirms this view; for immediately after the execution of the deed Hurst goes abroad, under the impression, as is avowed by his answer, that the arrangement of his affairs would be facilitated by his absence, and Padwick proposes terms of compromise with the plaintiffs; and in the course of the correspondence which ensued there is an admission by Padwick's agent that he had not become a party to the deed in the character of creditor. I am of opinion, therefore, that this deed cannot be maintained so far as its validity depends on any debt having been due to Padwick. It was said, however, that other creditors had abstained from suing upon the faith of this deed, and that the deed ought to be supported upon that ground; but those creditors are not parties to this suit, and no objection was raised at the hearing, or is raised by the answers, upon the ground of their not having been made parties; and I think that sufficient justice will be done to them and to Padwick in this case by reserving their rights, and directing such inquiries as may enable the court to give Padwick and them any protection in respect of their claims to which he or they may justly be entitled. I have thought it right to examine the cases upon voluntary deeds; and the authorities upon the subject appear to me to result in this: that in cases of deeds vesting property in trustees upon trusts for the benefit of particular persons, the deed cannot be revoked, altered, or modified by the party who has created the trusts; but that, in cases of deeds purporting to be executed for the benefit of creditors, the question whether the trusts can be revoked, altered, or modified, depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. It is difficult, at first sight, to see the distinction between the two classes of cases; for in each of the classes a trust is purported to be created, and the property is vested i the trustees. But I think the distinction lies in thi —that in cases of the trusts for the benefit of partion lar persons, the party creating the trust can have n other object than to benefit the persons in whos favour the trust is created; and, the trust being wel created, the property in equity belongs to the cestui que trust, as much as it would belong to them, at law if the legal interest had been transferred to them But, in cases of deeds purporting to be executed fo the benefit of creditors, and to which no creditor is a party, the motive of the party executing the dee may have been either to benefit his creditors or t promote his own convenience; and the court, there fore, has to examine into the circumstances, for th purpose of ascertaining what was the true purpose o the deed. And this examination does not stop with the deed itself, but must be carried on to what ha subsequently occurred; because the party who ha created the trust may, by his own conduct, or by th obligations which he has permitted his trustee to con tract, have created an equity against himself. Eac case of the latter description being thus governed by its circumstances, any further examination of th authorities would, I think, be useless. It would lea to the ascertainment of no principle, and would only involve the question, whether the principle has been rightly applied. Under the circumstances of thi case, I think the application of it must be such as have before stated. A further objection was raise on the part of the defendants to any decree being made in this case, upon the ground that no elegit ha been issued; and upon looking into the cases on this subject, I think that, so far as respects th freehold estates, this objection is good; but am of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree in the original suit, but only as regards lease holds and other personal estates. I think he is als entitled to the usual decree in the supplemental suit It was insisted that, the deed being set aside in th original suit, Padwick would not be a necessary party to the supplemental suit; but, the deed being set aside only as to creditors, I think there must be the usua decree in that suit against him as well as against Hurst. The decree, therefore, which I shall make will be in the original suit, to declare the deed fraudu lent and void against the plaintiff as to the leasehold and personal estate. Injunction to restrain defendan Padwick and Hurst from setting up the deed, so as i any manner to defeat or hinder the plaintiff's execu tion upon or against the leasehold and personal estate Direct an account against Padwick of his receipts, i respect of the personal estate, and rents and profits o the leasehold, and how applied and disposed of: in quiring whether at any times or time, and when afte the execution of the deed, any communications o communication were or was had by Padwick with any and which of the creditors of Hurst respecting the deed, and what was the nature and purport and effect of such communications or communication, and which of such creditors at any times or time, and when, in any and what manner, adopted or acted upon the deed, with liberty to state special circumstances. Continue the order for the receiver; dismiss the rest of the original bill. Decree to be without prejudice to the rights of any of the creditors or creditor who may be found to have adopted or acted on the deed. In the supplemental suit, usual decree against Padwick and Hurst. Reserve further directions and costs.

(a) Held, upon this passage it is necessary to remark that a supplemental bill had been filed, setting forth the fact of a year having elapsed since the registration of the plaintiff's judgment. Held that, upon the issue raised in the original bill.

ROBINSON v. BRIGGS.

Evidence—Examination of a defendant.

A plaintiff examining a defendant as a witness in support of his case is not now prevented from taking a decree against him.

In this case the defendant William Briggs, against whom relief was sought by the bill, was examined as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff.

Malins and H. Stevens appeared for the plaintiff, and proposed to read Mr. Briggs's evidence.

Walker and Selwyn, for the defendant Briggs; and Bacon and Rogers, and Daniel, Rawlins and Bagshawe, jun. for other defendants, objected to the evidence being read.

Elmsley, Allnutt, Boyle, Glass, and Dart, appeared for other parties.

Rowland v. Witherden, 3 Man. & Gran. 568; Attorney-General v. Dee, 3 De Gex & Smale, 556; Bessy v. Donegal, 3 Dow. 125; Cunliffe v. Parker, 2 Salk. 691; Alcock v. Alcock, 16 Jur. 852; Bayford v. Rees, 20 L. T. Rep. 282; and the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, were referred to.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, that his view of this question, independently of the authorities which had been cited, coincided with that of Wood, V.C., and was founded upon the same principle. What was relied upon by the defendants was the old rule, according to which, if a plaintiff examined a defendant as a witness in order to prove his case, he lost all right of a decree against him. It was said, further, that the principle of the rule must be taken to be, that the plaintiff had released his interest against the defendant whom he examined. Then it was contended that by the examination the release must still be presumed. That rule was perfectly intelligible; but his Honour never could think it just. It was perfectly well established; but being, as he conceived, inconsistent with justice, he rejoiced that it had been rescinded by the Legislature. The impolicy of the rule was obvious, because the same practice allowed a plaintiff in the first instance to examine a defendant on oath, and to found a decree upon his evidence; and yet held that, if a defendant was examined on interrogatories, the case was different. The Legislature had since thought fit to enact that a plaintiff might now examine a defendant in equity as a witness; and his Honour must infer that when the Legislature directed that to be done, it conferred a right upon a plaintiff which did not before exist, and that the right so given was unqualified, unless there was something expressed in the Act to qualify it. He could find nothing in the Act to qualify that right. Then it was said, that as the whole thing proceeded upon the principle of interest, and that as that right was not taken away under Lord Denman's Act, it still existed, and decisions had been cited under that Act in which the right had been treated as existing. But that circumstance arose from qualifications in that Act, which, however, no longer existed. He was then asked to construe an Act, in which no such provision existed, by decisions upon an Act in which it did exist. He was of opinion that the Act was intended to advance the purposes of justice; but if he were to put the construction upon it which had been urged at the bar, the Act would be worse than useless. Suppose the case of a single defendant; then, if he were examined, upon the construction contended for, the Act would be altogether inoperative. His Honour was therefore of opinion that he could not entertain this objection to Mr. Briggs's evidence.

Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845—Costs.

A company taking leasehold land under the powers of their Act ordered to pay the costs of the annual sales of stock representing the purchase-money, for the purpose of distributing the fund.

This was a petition by Lady Sydney under the following circumstances:—Leasehold lands in Rotherhithe were bequeathed to trustees for the separate use of Lady Sydney for her life, with remainders over. The Commercial Dock Company, under the powers vested in them by their Act, took these lands, and, by an award, dated in Sept. 1852, the purchase-money for the leases was ascertained to be 735*l.* This sum was accordingly paid into court, and invested in Consols. Sixteen years and a half of the term were unexpired when the purchase was made, and the petition prayed that 22*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*, being two thirty-thirds of the 735*l.*, might be paid to the petitioner, for her separate use, and that one thirty-third of the fund might be paid to her half-yearly during her life, and that the dividends from time to time becoming due on the remainder of the fund should also be paid to her during her life.

Burton, for the petitioner.

G. L. Russell, Gifford, and Roche for other parties.

Druce, for the company, objected to the payment of the costs of the sales of stock from time to time.

The Vice-Chancellor made the order asked by the petition, and directed that the company should pay the costs of all parties, and the costs of the sale of stock, such being incidental to the distribution of the fund.

Chancery Practice Amendment Act—Evidence—General Orders of August 7, 1852.

Upon a motion for a decree under the 15th section of the stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, the plaintiff gave notice, under Order 23 of Aug. 7, 1852, of reading one affidavit, but at the hearing proposed to read that and another affidavit, and the defendant's answer: a defendant in the same interest as the plaintiff proposed to read the answer of a co-defendant:

Held, that no affidavit but that one could be used; that the defendant's own answer could be read without notice, but that a defendant cannot, under any circumstances, read a co-defendant's answer.

This suit in this case was commenced by bill; and it prayed an account of a testator's estate, and the performance of the trusts of it. All the defendants had put in their answers. The plaintiff gave a notice under the 15th section of the statute amending the procedure in the Court of Chancery (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86) for a decretal order, and, pursuant to the General Order No. 23 of Aug. 7, 1852, which directs that "the affidavits to be used in support of such motion are to be filed before the service of such notice, and a list of such affidavits is to be set forth at the foot of such notice," he had stated one affidavit, which he particularised as intended to be read; and the cause on these materials came on for hearing. On behalf of the plaintiff it was proposed to read the answer of the principal defendant, that is, he against whom the decree was asked. For another defendant in the same interest as the plaintiff counsel proposed to read a co-defendant's answer, and in support of doing so cited that part of the 15th section of the statute which directs that "if such motion shall be made after an answer filed in the cause, the answer shall, for the purposes of the motion, be treated as an affidavit." On behalf of the principal defendant it was objected that the plaintiff had no right to read more than the affidavit of which he had given notice; and, not having given notice of reading his answer, it was not to be read, as the 26th Order of Aug. 1852 showed, that order directing that "no further evidence on either side is to be used upon such motion for a decree or decretal order, without leave of the court;" and no such leave had been obtained. Even if the reading by one defendant of a co-defendant's answer were not universally prohibited by the settled practice of the court, it could not be used as an affidavit under the 15th section, as no notice had been given; but it was against all settled rule to do so.

Prendergast, for the plaintiff.

Smythe, for a defendant in the same interest.

Rusk, for the principal defendant.

Jan. 28.—The Vice-Chancellor.—I have consulted the other judges of the court upon the points of evidence in this case. We are of opinion, and I therefore hold, that the plaintiff is at liberty to use the answer of a defendant without any notice. The object of notice being given is obviously to enable a defendant to know what evidence is to be used against him. This does not apply to his answer, for that must be fully within his knowledge. Of course no affidavits can be read of which no notice has been given. It is plain that the 15th section was not intended to, and does not, give one defendant a right to read the answer of a co-defendant either with or without notice.

The evidence was read pursuant to the above decision, and the decree was taken.

Friday, March 4.

The Official Manager of the Grand Trunk or Stafford and Peterborough Union Railway Company v. Brodie and others.

Joint-Stock Companies Winding-up Acts—Suit by official manager—Form of decree—Costs.

A suit was instituted against a company. The company was ordered to be wound up. The official manager, by direction of the Master, prosecuted the suit, which on the hearing was dismissed with costs, to be paid "by the official manager." The decree was subsequently altered by the insertion of "W. Turquand," before the words "official manager." Defendants issued a subpœna for the costs against W. Turquand personally, and an attachment thereon was issued. On motion to discharge the subpœna and to quash the attachment, the Court directed all proceedings to be stayed, on the ground that the decree was against the official manager as such by the use of these words.

Semble, that the Court has jurisdiction to award costs personally against an official manager.

The bill in this case was filed by Mr. Warren, on behalf of himself and others, against Mr. Brodie and others, directors and officers of the Grand Trunk or Stafford and Peterborough Union Railway Company. Various charges of fraud and misconduct were contained in the bill. After the suit had been instituted, a petition was presented under the Winding-up Acts, and an order was made for the dissolution of the company, and for the winding-up its affairs. After this Mr. Turquand was appointed the official manager of the company, and he made an application to the Master charged with the winding-up, who, under the 60th sect. of the Joint-Stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848, which enacts, that no action or suit in any of the Superior Courts shall be commenced or proceeded with by the official manager without the leave or special direction of the Master, and he directed that the suit should be continued and prosecuted. Under this authority Mr. Turquand went on, and brought the suit to a hearing before V. C. Turner, (a) who, however, dismissed the bill, on the ground that the suit was not properly constituted; that fraud had not been proved; that the other charges of misconduct were not warranted; and that the suit ought not to have been proceeded with by the official manager. His Honour then directed that the dismissal should be with costs, to be paid by the official manager. Subsequently an application was made on behalf of the defendants to the court, that the costs should be paid by Mr. Turquand personally, and that the decree should be altered in that respect. Upon this application an order was made that Mr. Turquand should pay the costs of the suit; but it appears that, although Mr. Turquand's name was inserted in the decree, the words "official manager" were suffered to remain. Upon this order, Mr. Turquand not having paid the costs, the defendants Brodie, Brown, and Carter, issued a subpœna for the payment of them; but Mr. Turquand still neglecting to pay, an attachment was issued at the instance of the same parties against him.

Daniel and Little now appeared in support of a motion made on behalf of Mr. Turquand, that the subpœna issued against him might be set aside, and that the attachment issued thereon might be discharged or quashed. They relied on the fact, undisputed, that the official manager had submitted the matter to the Master, who, in the exercise of his discretion under the 60th sect., had sanctioned the official manager in proceeding with the suit, so that, if its termination were not of advantage to the company, the official manager was not to blame. Had the Master considered that the suit ought to be compromised, he might have acted under the 55th sect., which enacts, that such a course may be adopted by the official manager, if the Master is of opinion that it is advisable. Then, the suit having been prosecuted with the approbation of the Master, the official manager is, by the 59th sect., held harmless of all losses in the following words: "that no judgment, decree, or order to be obtained or entered up against the official manager of any company, as representing the same, shall affect or be executed against the person or the property of the party who may for the time being be such official manager, otherwise than as a contributory, and that every official manager shall always be fully reimbursed and indemnified out of the assets of the company, or out of the credits thereof, and, if necessary, by calls to be made on the contributories, for all losses, costs, charges, damages, and expenses, without deduction, save and except such, if any, as shall have been unduly or improperly sustained or incurred by any such official manager." That the Master had authority to give leave for the prosecution of the suit there could be no doubt, for by the 53rd sect. the official manager is authorised to prosecute pending suits against a company ordered to be wound-up. The learned counsel submitted, therefore, that as Mr. Turquand had acted under the orders of the Master in prosecuting the suit, and as the Act of Parliament directed him to be indemnified in his character of official manager, and as the order of the court had directed the costs to be paid by Mr. Turquand as official manager, the subpœna calling on him personally to pay the costs, and the attachment thereupon, were wholly wrong, and the motion ought to be granted even supposing the court should be of opinion that there was any jurisdiction at all to visit an official manager with costs, seeing the large expressions contained in the 59th sect.

The Vice-Chancellor.—I have no doubt as to the jurisdiction of the court to order the official manager to pay costs personally, and I have also no doubt that the intention of the court was that the costs in this case should be paid personally by Mr. Turquand. I have, however, to deal with the language of the decree, which, unfortunately, contains the words "official manager of the company," and may import something more than a personal remedy against Mr. Turquand. I wish the counsel for the defendants to address themselves to the effect of those words in the decree. The defendants must be entitled to their costs against the official manager personally, or against the contributories and assets of the company, but not against both.

Selwyn, for the defendant Mr. Brodie.—It is perfectly plain that the V. C. intended Mr. Turquand to pay these costs personally, and therefore the proceedings on the subpœna and the attachment are perfectly regular. The mere fact that the decree contains the words "official manager of the company" is of no importance against the defendants, for those words are merely descriptive of the person who is meant to be identified as "Mr. Turquand." It was at the original hearing that the words "official manager of the company" were used in the decree by the registrar, and he so used them because they followed the title of the cause; but they were not struck out when, upon a subsequent application, the name "Mr. Turquand" was inserted, although the name was so inserted by order of the court with the express view and intention of charging him personally with the costs.

The Vice-Chancellor.—It is asserted that the words "official manager of the company" were left in by an inadvertence, or is it represented that the court designedly allowed them to remain?

Counsel stated that the court's attention was not drawn to the words.

The Vice-Chancellor.—If it were an inadvertence, that might form a ground for applying to the court to rectify the decree by expunging them.

Kenyon, for the defendants Brown and Carter.—It is abundantly plain that the court intended the costs to be paid by Mr. Turquand personally, and not by him as the official manager,—that is, by himself, out of his own money, and not out of the funds of the company,—because it has used his name, and by way of identity has added the words which designate the office such a person held. Had it been intended that the company should bear the loss, the word "as" would have been adopted thus: "as official manager;" or "as representing the company," or in some such manner; but clearly not as the decree stood.

The Vice-Chancellor.—The question before me is whether Mr. Turquand, being [illegible] "official manager" in the order makes it appear less the intention that the official manager is meant because the name of this gentleman is also used. It would have been as well that I should have known the form of orders or judgments at common law against official managers. It is perfectly clear that I cannot attend in any way to what has been the conduct of the parties, nor to what was the intention of the court in making the order, further than that, if the words of the order are consistent with the intention of the court, it is my duty to carry that intention into effect. No doubt, from the judgment, it appears that the court intended that Mr. Turquand should pay the costs personally. The original order directed them to be paid by the official manager of the company. There was a subsequent application to insert Mr. Turquand's name, that he might pay the costs personally. But the attention of the court was not drawn to the fact that the words "official manager" remained on the order. Is the court now to treat the words "official manager" as having no legal effect or operation? I cannot reject the words "official manager" as mere surplusage. The description of a person by his name without more seems to be very unusual, unless where it is intended that he should pay personally. If I cannot reject the words "official manager," I have to ask what effect is to be attributed to them? And in order to decide that, the court must resort to the 55th and 59th clauses of the Act. This is an order pronounced by a court of equity against an "official manager." It is so eo nomine; and, if so, it may be made effective against all or any of the contributories of the company. That would be against the avowed intention of the court. But so stands the order. No allegation of the intention of the court can prevent the order from being carried into effect, except that it may induce the court, on an application to alter or vary it, to do so. I regret being compelled to come to this conclusion, because I see, from the reported judgment, what was the intention of the court; but being of opinion that the order cannot have two meanings or aspects, I am bound, under the 56th section, to hold that there is in this case, under this order, no personal remedy against the official manager; and I must comply with the motion which asks that the subpœna should be set aside, and further proceedings stayed as against Mr. Turquand personally.

Daniel applied for costs.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Reported by ADAM BITTLESTON and JOHN THOMPSON, Esqrs. Barristers-at-Law.

Nov. 12 and Jan. 20.

The MAYOR, &c. of BERWICK-UPON-TWEED v. OSWALD.

Municipal corporation—Treasurer—Sureties—5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58—6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, s. 6.

A treasurer to a municipal corporation, elected annually in pursuance of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, entered into a deed with sureties for the due execution of his office, and for duly accounting for all moneys that should be received in virtue of the said appointment as treasurer, during the whole time of his continuing in the said office, in consequence of the said election, or under any annual or other future election to the said office. The treasurer continued in the office till the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89 passed, when he was elected under that Act to the office of treasurer during the pleasure of the council:

Held, that the nature and duties of the office were not so changed as to discharge the sureties, and that the words of the deed, "or other future election to the said office," were sufficient to charge the sureties of the treasurer for defaults after the election under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89.

A subsequent deed for a larger amount given before breach of a former deed cannot be pleaded in accord and satisfaction of such former deed, though for a smaller amount; nor is it any answer to it, unless there are words of release in the subsequent deed.

Debinet upon a bond in the Scotch form against a surety of the treasurer of the corporation of Berwick-upon-Tweed, for the default of the principal in paying over moneys received.

The declaration stated,—That, before the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89 ("An Act to amend the Act for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales") to wit, on the 15th day of Jan. 1842, a certain deed poll was made by the defendant, and sealed and delivered to the plaintiffs, which said deed poll is in the words and figures following:—

"We David Murray, John Campbell Renton, James Jeffreys Oswald, William Murray, and John Johnston, considering that, at special meetings of the council of the borough and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, held &c. for the purpose (amongst other things) of electing a treasurer, it was agreed that the salary of the future treasurer should be, &c., and that the treasurer should find sureties to the council in the sum of 2000*l.*; and that at every quarterly and adjourned meeting of the council, and also at any special meeting, if then required to do so, the treasurer should present a correct account of the cash in his possession; and, lastly, that the treasurer should be appointed for the remainder of the year ending the 9th Nov. next, if it should so long please the council; and considering that, at such meetings of council as aforesaid, they nominated and elected me the said D. Murray to be their treasurer upon the conditions aforesaid; and seeing that it was agreed that I the said D. Murray should find security or caution for the payment of all such sums of money as I might receive in consequence of my said appointment as treasurer aforesaid; therefore the condition of this obligation is such that I the said D. Murray, and we the said J. C. Renton and J. J. Oswald, W. Murray, and J. Johnston, as cautioners, sureties and full debtors, with and for the said D. Murray, hereby become firmly bound and obliged, as we do hereby bind and oblige ourselves, our and each and every of our heirs, &c. jointly and severally, well and truly to pay unto the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Berwick aforesaid, or to their successors in office, all such rents, sum and sums of money, principal, interest, and penalties, and other moneys whatsoever as I the said D. Murray shall or may recover or receive in virtue of my said appointment as treasurer as aforesaid during the whole time of my continuing in the said office in consequence of the said election, or under any annual or other future election of the said council to the said office, I the said D. Murray shall and will duly execute my said office, and be honest and faithful therein, and that I shall carefully attend to my duties as treasurer aforesaid during my continuance in office, and do everything relating thereto to the best of my knowledge and skill, and shall and will truly and faithfully account to the said mayor, &c. for all matters committed to my charge, and also for all rents and money with which I shall from time to time be intrusted in the manner above specified. And whatsoever loss, damage, or expense shall be sustained or incurred through the negligence, fraud, default, or intromissions of me the said D. Murray, we the said D. Murray, J. C. Renton, J. J. Oswald, W. Murray, and J. Johnston, under the declaration after mentioned, hereby bind and oblige ourselves and our foresaids, jointly and severally, to content and pay the same to the said mayor, &c. and that immediately upon such default, with a fifth part more of liquidate penalty over and above the said loss and damage, and together therewith. But declaring always, and it is hereby provided and declared, that this present bond and obligation is, so far as concerns us the said J. C. Renton, J. J. Oswald, W. Murray, and J. Johnston, and shall be limited to the sum of 2000*l.* sterling, to which our security is hereby restricted, and to be no further extended, without prejudice nevertheless to the said mayor, &c. in the events above mentioned, to have access and recourse against me the said D. Murray, my heirs, executors, and successors whomsoever, and my estate and effects, for the whole sums of lawful money, interest, penalties, loss, damage, and expenses, which they shall or may happen to sustain or incur through my default or intromission in any manner of way whatsoever."

And the plaintiffs, in fact, say that the said person in the said deed poll or writing obligatory described as J. J. Oswald, was and is the defendant. And the plaintiffs further say that the said D. Murray, in the said deed poll or writing obligatory mentioned, was and continued treasurer of the said borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and held the said office of treasurer of the said borough, in consequence and under and by virtue of the said election of the said council in the said deed poll or writing obligatory mentioned, and under and by virtue of other future elections of the said council to the said office, to wit, an election of the said council, at a meeting of the said council, duly holden on the 9th Nov. 1842, and at another election of the said council, at a meeting of the said council, duly holden on the 9th Nov. 1843, from the time of the making the said deed poll or writing obligatory, until and at and after the respective times of the recovery and receipt by him, as such treasurer as aforesaid, of the moneys next hereinafter mentioned, to wit, from the day and year first aforesaid, until the 24th June 1848; and the plaintiffs further say, that while the said D. Murray was such treasurer as aforesaid, to wit, on, &c., the said D. Murray as such treasurer recovered and received divers sums of money, to wit, 100,000*l.*, and although a reasonable time for the said D. Murray to pay the same and every part thereof to the plaintiffs had elapsed, yet he hath not yet paid a large part thereof, to wit, the sum of 5000*l.* to the plaintiffs. And the plaintiffs further say, that although a reasonable time for the said defendant to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of 2,000*l.*, parcel of the said last-mentioned sum of money, and which he was so liable to pay to the plaintiffs as aforesaid, had elapsed—Breach, non-payment thereof. And the plaintiffs further say, that after the receipt by the said D. Murray as such treasurer as aforesaid of the said sums of money as aforesaid, and before it became and was the duty of the said D. Murray truly and faithfully to account to the plaintiffs for the said sums of money so recovered and received by him, nevertheless the said D. Murray did not nor would account to the plaintiffs for a large part thereof, to wit, for 5000*l.* so received by him as such treasurer as aforesaid, although a reasonable time for him so to do had elapsed after the receipt of the said moneys, but therein made default; and the plaintiffs further say that, although a reasonable time for the defendant to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of 2000*l.* for and on account of the said loss, and which he was so liable to pay as aforesaid had elapsed—Breach, nonpayment thereof.

Sixth plea.—That the said election of D. Murray to be treasurer in the said deed mentioned, and also the election of the said D. Murray to be such treasurer under and by virtue of the said election, by the said council at the meeting of the said council holden on the 9th Nov. 1842, as in the said declaration mentioned, were made under and in pursuance of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76; and that on the 9th Nov. 1843 the said D. Murray ceased to be such treasurer as aforesaid under and by virtue of the said elections or either of them; and the defendant further says that after the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, to wit, on the 9th Nov. in the said year 1843, the said D. Murray was, in pursuance of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, elected by the said council to be the treasurer of the said council, to hold the said office of treasurer during the pleasure of the said council, the said election in this plea last-mentioned being the same election of the said D. Murray as in the declaration is alleged to have been made on the said 9th Nov. in the said year 1843. That the said D. Murray, to wit, on the 16th Jan. 1842, and afterwards, accounted for and paid to the plaintiffs all the money by him as such treasurer in the declaration mentioned, and by virtue of his said office of treasurer of the said borough recovered or received before the said 9th Nov. in the said year 1843, or whilst he was such treasurer as aforesaid under and by virtue of the said election in this plea first and secondly assigned, and that the whole of the money for the nonpayment of or nonaccounting for which this action was brought and is now attempted to be maintained was recovered and received by the said D. Murray after the said 9th Nov. in the said year 1843, and after the said election of the said D. Murray in pursuance of the said statute made and passed in the seventh year of the reign of her present Majesty as in this plea aforesaid, and this the defendant is ready to verify, &c.

Seventh plea.—That after the making of the deed in the declaration, and after the death of the said J. Johnston therein named, and during the lifetime of the said W. Murray, and before the committing of any of the breaches of covenant in the declaration mentioned and complained of, to wit, on the 13th Nov. 1847, the said D. Murray, the said W. Murray, and the said J. C. Renton made and sealed and delivered as their deed to the said mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the said borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the said mayor, aldermen, and burgesses then accepted and received from the said D. Murray, W. Murray, and J. C. Renton, a certain other writing obligatory hereinafter mentioned of great value, to wit, of the value of 5000*l.* in full satisfaction and discharge of the said deed in the declaration mentioned, and of all the covenants, clauses, and things therein contained. The plea then set out the deed for 5000*l.* and concluded with a verification.

Demurrers to the sixth and seventh pleas.

Manisty, in support of the demurrers.—As to the sixth plea, the sureties are to be bound by the deed during the whole time of D. Murray's continuing in office in consequence of the said election in 1842, or under any annual or other election of the said council to the said office. The other side will contend that the office of treasurer of a municipal corporation has been changed in its nature since the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, s. 6, and that the words in the deed, "or other election to the said office," are not sufficient, as the office is no longer the same as it was when the deed was executed. The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, directs that the council or every borough shall in every year appoint a treasurer of the borough, and shall take such security for the due execution of his office as the said council shall think proper; and by sect. 60 the treasurer shall at such times during the continuance of his office or within three months after the expiration of his office, and in such manner as the council shall direct, deliver a true account of all matters committed to his charge, and of all moneys received and paid by him, &c. Then the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, s. 6, changes the term of the office from an annual one to one during pleasure. The change so made is no change in the essential character of the office, and the deed contemplates another than an annual election. The words are: "under any annual or other future election." The sixth plea, therefore, is no answer to the action. Secondly, as to the seventh plea. This is a plea of accord and satisfaction before breach of the covenant, attempted to be pleaded in bar to an action after breach. Before breach a deed can only be discharged by release under seal, and the deed in the seventh plea has not the effect of a release: (Snow v. Franklin, 1 Lutw. 558; Blake's case, 6 Co. Rep. 43 b; Allen v. Edgar, Bro. Jac. 29; Neale v. Sheffield,

QUEEN'S BENCH.

Cro. Jac. 284; Kaye v. Waghorn, 1 Taun. 428; The Mayor of Ludlow v. Charlton, 6 M. & W. 815.)

H. Hill, contrà.—Whilst the office was an annual one under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the treasurer was bound to account from time to time, &c. And the sixth plea avers, that D. Murray duly accounted for all moneys up to his election under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, and that the default was subsequent thereto. The deed must be read as if the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, was incorporated therewith. Though the office is the same in one respect, it is very different in point of tenure, being during pleasure by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89. Besides, in the latter Acts there is no definite time for accounting, as under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 60. The words "other future election" in the deed must be construed with reference to a year, or any less part thereof. The effect of this alteration in the office is to discharge the sureties under this deed: (Lord Arlington v. Merricke, 2 Wms. Saund. 414; London Assurance Company v. Bold, 6 Q. B. 514; Barker v. Parker, 1 T. R. 291; The Liverpool Waterworks v. Atkinson, 6 East, 507; Whitcher v. Hall, 5 B. & C. 275; Collins v. Gwynne, 9 Bing. 444.) Then, as to the seventh plea, this is not strictly a plea of accord and satisfaction, but one of discharge. In the deed of 1842, the sureties were bound to the extent of 2,000*l.* only; in the deed pleaded their liability is extended to 5000*l.* In Clarke v. Henley, 8 You. & C. 187, A. gave a bond to secure the repayment of a debt due by B. A. died, and the creditor, proceeded against his estate upon the bond, but afterwards took a fresh bond from B. and from A.'s representatives, conditioned for paying the debt by instalments, the creditor retaining at the same time the original bond; and it was held that the original bond was discharged, because the second bond was considered as having been given in satisfaction of the first. The deed pleaded was given in substitution of the first. Or if it is to be considered as a security from its date, the remedy should have been on the deed pleaded, and not on the original one.

JUDGMENT.

Jan. 20.—Lord CAMPBELL, C. J.—We begin with considering the validity of the sixth plea. It is quite clear, according to Lord Arlington v. Merricke, and many subsequent cases, that the liability of the sureties of David Murray would have ceased on the 9th Nov. 1843, however long he might have continued in the office of treasurer, if to the words "during the whole time of continuing in the said office in consequence of the said election," there had not been added the words, "or under any annual or other future election of the said council to the said office." There appears to be no objection in point of law to the council taking prospectively a security for the good conduct of the treasurer, to remain in full force while he should continue in the office of treasurer under any number of successive elections. The question, therefore, comes to this short point, whether, after the change in the tenure of the office made by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, the office is or is not to be considered the same office as that to which he had been elected when the security was given. A mere change in the tenure of the office would not, we think, discharge the sureties; for such a change is contemplated by the instrument which they have executed. As the law stood in 1842 the office of treasurer was an annual office, and they have stipulated that the liability should continue while David Murray continues in his office, "under any annual or other future election of the council to the said office." From being an annual office, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, it became, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, an office to be held during pleasure, or for an indefinite time, the council being required to appoint a fit person to be treasurer, who should henceforth hold the office during the pleasure of the council for the time being. When David Murray was subsequently appointed under this statute, we think he must be considered as continuing in the office, although not under an annual, yet under a future election to the office, within the meaning of the deed. The sureties seemed to have contemplated the possibility of the Legislature changing the tenure of the office, and no objection existed in point of law to their stipulating for continuing the liability notwithstanding such a change. If the nature and provisions of the office had been altered by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, though its name remained the same, still it would not be "the said office" within the meaning of the deed; but we cannot find that such an alteration has been made. The duties of the office are defined by the 5 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 59, 64, 92, 126. Although some of these duties are expressly altered by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, it is contended there is a consequential alteration in the duty of accounting by reason of the treasurer now holding the office for an indefinite time. However, on examining the manner in which he is directed to account under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, we think it may be, and ought to be, substantially and effectually followed when he holds the office for an indefinite time, so that the risk of the sureties is not increased by the alteration, and the office must be considered as remaining the same. We do not think it necessary to refer more particularly to the numerous cases which have been cited in the argument on this head, as the principles they establish are not in dispute, and none of them would assist in construing the Act on which the case arises. On the demurrer to the sixth plea we give judgment for the plaintiffs. The defendant's counsel admits that the seventh plea cannot be supported as accord and satisfaction being pleaded to the covenant before breach, and the authorities are many and uniform to this effect. But, if not by way of accord and satisfaction, how can the seventh plea be a bar to an action in the first deed? It contains nothing that can operate as a release as to the first deed: and the two deeds may stand together concurrently. We have no difficulty therefore in giving judgment for the plaintiffs upon the demurrer to this plea. The objection to the declaration, suggested on the ground that the security taken was not in conformity to the statute, was abandoned during the argument.

THE WEST LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY v. THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Railway lease under an Act of Parliament—Meaning of covenant "to efficiently work"—Powers, rights, and liabilities of lessees under agreements between third parties and the leasing company.

The W. L. Railway was constructed under an Act of Parliament in which was a clause providing that, if after the railway should be completed it should for three years cease to be used as a railway, the lands purchased under the Act should revest in the owners of the adjoining land. An agreement was afterwards entered into by the W. L. with G. W. Railway Company, reciting that a piece of land had been conveyed to the W. L. subject to the right of the G. W. to construct their railway across it, in which the G. W. covenant to construct a station upon that piece of ground and to stop their trains at it. That agreement was confirmed by an Act of Parliament, which also provided that, if the W. L. Railway should cease to be used as a railway for three years, the piece of land should, upon tender to the W. L. Company of the purchase-money, vest in the G. W. Company. An Act was afterwards passed, which in the preamble stated that it had been found that the W. L. Railway could not be worked with advantage as a separate and independent line, but might be advantageously worked in connection with the L. and B. and the G. W. or either of them, and which authorised a lease from the W. L. to the L. and B. of their railway, &c., and all their rights, powers, and privileges. A lease of the line and the piece of land above mentioned was accordingly executed. The L. and B. were to pay to the W. L. one-fourth of the gross earnings on the W. L. line for passengers, goods, and other things carried thereon. And the L. and B. Company covenanted that they "would, at their own expense, during the continuance of the lease efficiently work and repair the railway and works demised, and indemnify the W. L. against all liabilities, loss, charges, and expenses, claims and demands, whether incurred or sustained in consequence of any want of repair, or in consequence of not working, or in any manner connected with the said railway and works." The N. W. Company worked the W. L. line for goods traffic only, and upon the above covenant an action was brought by the W. L. against the N. W. (formerly the L. and B.), one of the breaches assigned being that the L. and B. "did not efficiently work the said railway."

Held, first (dissentientibus Platt and Martin, BB.), that the N. W. are not bound to work the W. L. line for passenger traffic, if so much gross profit could be obtained by working it for goods only.

Secondly, That they are not bound to carry passengers even if passengers present themselves, if by working the railway efficiently for goods they produce as much gross profit as they would by working it for passengers and goods or for passengers alone.

Thirdly, That under the statute authorising the lease, and the lease itself, the right to sue the G. W. Company on their covenant with the W. L. to stop their trains passed with the railway to the N. W., and that they had power to compel the G. W. to stop their trains.

Semble, also, that they might sue on that covenant, being one which affects the temporary enjoyment of the estate, and beneficial to the owners pro tempore, by the common law.

Fourthly, That the N. W. were not bound necessarily to work the W. L. line in connection with trains on the G. W. line.

Fifthly, That they were not necessarily bound to stop the G. W. trains where necessary for the purpose of working in connection with the W. L. line.

Sixthly, That they were not necessarily bound to work the W. L. line in connection with the trains on their own line.

Seventhly, That they were not necessarily bound to stop their own trains where necessary for the purpose of working in connection with the W. L. line.

Eighthly, That the N. W. Company were not to be treated by the jury, for the purpose of considering their liability, as if they were the lessees of a separate and independent line, having no control over the G. W. and N. W. lines; and that the covenant "to work efficiently" must be construed with reference to the subject-matter and the character of the covenantors; and that the construction of the word "efficient" would be different in a covenant by a person armed with very limited or very extensive powers. And that, therefore, although the N. W. are certainly not bound to make a sacrifice of their own concern for the purpose of efficiently working the W. L. line, so as to produce the greatest gross profits, yet, having greater facilities for increasing the traffic on the W. L. line than a lessee of that line only would have, they are bound to do more than such a lessee in order to perform their covenant to work efficiently.

The Court observed also in their judgment, with respect to the first, second, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh of the above questions, that it is difficult to see how the N. W. Company could practically work the W. L. line effectively, so as to produce the greatest gross profits without working it for passenger traffic, and in connection with the G. W. and their own line. But that that was a question for the jury.

And further, in answer to a suggestion of Maule, J. in the Court of C. P., that the covenant was not to be construed as merely binding the N. W. Company to work the line so as to avoid a forfeiture of it to the G. W. Company, or to the adjoining landowners.

The declaration in this case set out the agreements between the West London Railway Company and the London and Birmingham Railway Company, the substance of which is stated in the judgment, and therefore need not be repeated here.

There was also given in evidence an agreement between the plaintiffs and the London and Birmingham Railway Company, dated March 11, 1845, for a lease of the line, in which it was, inter alia, agreed that the West London Railway Company should, from time to time, at the cost, charges, and risk of the London and Birmingham Railway Company, exercise and put in force the powers of their Acts of Parliament, when and in such manner as the London and Birmingham Railway Company should require for any purpose or purposes connected with, or arising out of, or required for, giving effect to those presents. That the London and Birmingham Railway Company should, at their own expense, during such times as they should be tenants or lessees or in the possession of the West London Railway and other works agreed to be leased as aforesaid, or in the receipt of the rates and tolls arising therefrom, or from any part thereof, efficiently work and repair the same railway and works. That the London and Birmingham Railway Company should indemnify the West London Railway Company against all liabilities, losses, charges and expenses, claims and demands to be incurred or sustained in consequence of any want of repair, or in consequence of not working, or in any manner connected with the working, of the same railway and works; but the West London Railway Company should have no control whatever over the working or management, by the London and Birmingham Railway Company, of the West London Railway or works, except and subject nevertheless to the stipulation contained in the last preceding article. And there was also given in evidence the indenture of March 10, 1846, being the indenture declared on by the plaintiffs; and the counsel for the plaintiffs proved that the Great Western Railway, at a point between the termini thereof, crossed the said West London Railway on a level, being the crossing mentioned in the agreement with the Great Western Railway Company; and that there was, and had always been since the commencement of the working of the said West London Railway, a balk or stop kept across the said West London Railway by the Great Western Railway, except at certain periods during each day; and that the said West London Railway ran into and joined the said London and North-Western Railway (formerly the said London and Birmingham Railway), at a point on the said last-mentioned line between the termini thereof, being at Harlesden Green, in the county of Middlesex, about five miles and three quarters of another mile from London; and also that the said West London Railway was about three miles in length, and was laid down with a single line of rails only, though a double line of rails might have been laid down, and there was sufficient land for that purpose included in the lease to the London and Birmingham Railway Company; and that before the said demise of the West London Railway and works to the defendants, the plaintiffs worked the said demised railway and works themselves, both for passengers' traffic and goods traffic, and ran trains on the said line, and carried on the said line both passengers and goods, though to a very trifling extent; and that the said plaintiffs had only two locomotive engines, two carriages, and five or six waggons; and that the whole receipts were about 2*l.* per week; and that before the making of the said first-mentioned agreement, the said West London Railway had been worked by the plaintiffs at a great loss to themselves, and that they had ceased to work the same; and that, at the time of making the said indenture of March 10, 1846, and thence to the commencement of this action, there were four stations on and belonging to the said line; and at the said stations respectively there were booking offices and accommodation for booking and receiving both passengers and goods to be carried on and along the said railway; and that on the said demised railway and works there was accommodation for receiving both passengers and goods, and carrying the same along the said railway. And the said counsel for the plaintiffs gave evidence before the said jury to prove that in the neighbourhood of the said line and the stations thereof a large population resided, and to show that many of them would have become passengers upon the line if passenger trains had been run through and worked in connection with trains on the said London and Birmingham, and London and North-Western and Great Western Railways, or some or one of them; and evidence to show that large quantities of goods might, after the making of the said lease, have been carried on the said West London line if the same had been worked in connection with trains on the said other railways, or some or one of them. And the said counsel for the plaintiffs gave evidence before the said jury that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company, before their dissolution by the said Act of the session of Parliament of the ninth and tenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, and the defendants since their incorporation by the said Act, did not, nor did either of them, nor did any body or person, at any time run or provide passenger trains or carriages, or carry passengers along or upon the said West London Railway, or keep open the stations or booking-offices of the said railway, or any of them, for the purpose of receiving passengers to be conveyed on the said line, or advertise or in any way make known to the public that passengers might travel or be carried on the said line. And the plaintiffs' said counsel then contended that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants had not nor had either of them efficiently worked the said West London Railway and works, and had not performed the said covenant on which the said sixth breach was assigned. And the said counsel for the plaintiffs also then contended before the said Chief Justice and jury, that under the said covenant on which the said sixth breach was assigned, and in order to perform the same, it was necessary that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants should work the said West London Railway and works (or that the said railway and works should be worked) for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic, or that the said London and Birmingham Company and the defendants should so work the said West London Railway and works (or that the same should be worked) for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic, if such traffic presented itself; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively could and ought to have enforced, against the Great Western Railway Company the said stipulations of the said last-mentioned company with the Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, and could and ought to have compelled the said Great Western Railway Company for the purpose of working in connection with the said West London Line; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were bound to work the West London Line (or that the same should have been worked) in connection with trains on the Great Western Railway; and that the London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants were bound to compel the Great Western Railway Company to stop trains on the Great Western Railway, where necessary, for the purpose of working in connection with the West London Line; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were bound to work the West London Line (or it was necessary that the said line should be worked) in connection with trains on the line of the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants were bound to stop the trains of them the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively, on the line of the London and Birmingham and London and North Western Railway, where necessary for that purpose. And the counsel for the plaintiffs also then contended that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not to be treated, for the purpose of considering their liability under the said covenant on which the said sixth breach was assigned, as if they were lessees of a separate and independent line, and having no control over the Great Western, and London and Birmingham, and London and North-Western Railways, or any of them. And the said counsel for the plaintiffs then prayed the said Chief Justice to direct the said jury in accordance with the said contentions of them the said counsel for the plaintiffs. And the said counsel for the defendants then disputed and denied the said contentions. And the said chief justice, after hearing the evidence aforesaid, and certain other evidence in the said cause on the said trial, as to the capabilities of the said railway, and the mode in which the said railway had been worked for goods traffic, did then and there submit and leave the issue joined on the said sixth breach to the jury aforesaid, and, in so doing, did declare and deliver his opinion to the jury aforesaid—that, under the said covenant on which the said sixth breach was assigned, and in order to perform the same, the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not bound to work the said West London line (nor was it necessary that the same should be worked) for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic; and that it was not necessary that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants should work the said West London Railway and works, or that the same should be worked, for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic, if such traffic presented itself; and that the said agreement of the 4th Feb. 1837 was not transferred to the London and Birmingham Railway Company or the defendants, or made binding between them and the Great Western Railway Company, and that, therefore, the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively had no power to compel the Great Western Railway Company to stop trains on the line of the Great Western Railway; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not bound to work the West London Line (and that it was not necessary, that the same should be worked), in connexion with the trains of the Great Western Railway; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not bound to compel the Great Western Railway Company to stop trains on the Great Western Railway, where necessary for the purpose of working in connexion with the West London Line; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not bound to work the West London Line (and that it was not necessary that the same should be worked) in connexion with trains on the line of the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively were not bound to stop the trains of the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants on the line of the London and Birmingham and London and North Western Railways respectively, where necessary for that purpose; and that the said London and Birmingham Railway Company and the defendants respectively must be treated by the jury, for the purpose of considering their liability under the said covenant, as if they were lessees of a separate and independent line, having no control over the Great Western, and London and Birmingham, and London and North-Western Railways, or any of them; and with those directions the Chief Justice left the matters of the issue on the said sixth breach to the jury.

Assignment of errors.—That the said Chief Justice ought not at the said trial to have declared or delivered such opinion to the jury as aforesaid, or to have directed the jury as aforesaid, or to have left the said issue to the said jury, with his direction aforesaid, and ought to have declared and delivered and left to the jury the contrary thereof.(a)

(a) The following portions of Acts of Parliament were dwelt upon in the argument:—

6 Will. 4, c. 79, s. 1.—"Whereas the making a railway from the point of junction of the London and Birmingham and Great Western Railways, at Harlesden Green, in the county of Middlesex, to the basin of the Kensington Canal, at Kensington, in the said county, would be of great public advantage, by opening an additional certain and expeditious communication between the said last-mentioned railways and the South-western districts of the metropolis and the river Thames."

6 Will. 4, c. 79, s. 85, by which it was enacted that in the event of the said railway (i. e. the present West London Railway) being at any time abandoned or disused by the said company for the space of three months, the roads under which it passed were to be reinstated, and the railway company was not to be discharged from their liabilities to the trustees of the roads until such reinstatement.

6 Will. 4, c. 79, s. 210.—And be it further enacted, that if the said railway, or any part thereof, shall at any time hereafter be abandoned or given up by the said company, or after the same shall have been completed shall, for the space of three years, cease to be used and employed as a railway, then and in such case the lands so purchased or taken by the said company for the purposes of this Act, or otherwise the part thereof over which the said railway or any part of such railway, which shall be so abandoned or given up by the said company, shall pass, shall vest in the owners for the time being of the land adjoining that which shall be so abandoned or given up, in manner following (that is to say), one moiety thereof in the owners of the land on the one side, and the remainder thereof in the owners of the land on the other side thereof.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, ss. 34, 35, 36 and 37.—Sect. 34 recites a portion of the agreement dated 4th Feb. 1837, between the Great Western Railway Company and the Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, and makes certain provisions with respect to the one line crossing the other.

Sect. 35 enacts: And whereas by the said recited agreement it is provided, among other things, that the said Great Western Railway Company shall, and they are thereby authorised to maintain and keep in repair the lines of railway and other works at the point of crossing of the said two railways, and it is essential for such purpose, and for the security of the public using the said two railways, or either of them, that the said Great Western Railway Company should, after the completion and opening for use of the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway, continue to have the exclusive management and control of the said lines of railway at the point of crossing, and of the rails, switches, and other apparatus and machinery connected therewith, as hereinbefore described, subject to the ownership of the soil of the land at the point of crossing aforesaid being vested, as in this Act mentioned, in the said last-mentioned railway company, and subject to the performance by the said two companies of the several provisions in the said agreement contained, so far as the same may remain unmodified by any future agreement in writing between the said two companies, or any Act of the Legislature: be it therefore enacted, that when the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway shall have been completed, the management and control of the lines of the said two railways at the point of intersection thereof, and of the rails, switches, and other apparatus and machinery connected with such lines at the said point of intersection as aforesaid, which have been or may be hereafter constructed and made, and which by the said agreement are required to be maintained and kept in repair by the said Great Western Railway Company, shall remain vested in the said Great Western Railway Company, but subject to the performance by the said two companies respectively of the several stipulations in the said recited agreement of the 4th Feb. 1837 contained, or to such other stipulations or arrangements as may be hereafter agreed on in writing by the said two companies; and in default, by either of the said two companies, in the performance of any of the said stipulations which may be necessary for the protection of the public using the said two railways or either of them, the company so making default shall, for each and every offence, forfeit and pay to the other company 10*l.*, to be recovered before any magistrate for the Metropolitan District of Police, or before any two justices of the county of Middlesex in petty sessions assembled, and all such penalties shall be recoverable as is provided by the said recited Act in regard to any penalties thereby imposed: provided always, that if, upon due service of such summons as therein mentioned, the said companies respectively shall not, by their secretary or other agent, appear before such magistrate or justices, in compliance with such summons, then in such case it shall be lawful, and the said magistrate or justices are hereby authorised, empowered, and required to hear and proceed to adjudicate upon such complaint ex parte: provided also, that such magistrate or justices shall, upon the hearing of any such complaint, direct by which of the parties the costs of, and attending on, such summons and hearing shall be paid.

Sect. 36 saves the rights of the Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, under the agreement of Feb. 4, 1837, as to the working the railways at the point of crossing.

Sect. 37 enacts: "That the said Great Western Railway Company, and all persons duly authorised by them, shall at all times, whether before or after the completion of the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway, have full liberty to construct, maintain, use, alter, and repair their line of railway, and all necessary works and conveniences connected therewith, on and across the land referred to in the said recited agreement of Feb. 4, 1837, and on which, by the said agreement, they have a right to enter and to make and maintain upon the said lands, to cleanse, alter, and repair thereon or therein all such cuts, drains, embankments, and other works, being the property of the said Great Western Railway Company, as may be necessary or convenient for the purposes of the said Great Western Railway; and to pass upon and across the said lands with engines, carriages, and otherwise, without hindrance or interruption by or on the part of the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, and without being subject or liable to the payment of any toll or other sum to the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, or any person claiming under them, but subject to the provisions in the said agreement and in this Act contained, and also, except as hereinafter mentioned, to the ownership of the soil in the said land being vested in the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company: Provided always, that if the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway shall not be completed so as to be used as a public communication across the said Great Western Railway within five years from the passing of this Act, or if the said line shall be abandoned or cease to be used as a railway for the space of three years after the completion thereof as aforesaid, then and in either of such cases, upon payment or tender at any time thereafter by the said Great Western Railway Company to the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company of the sum paid by them for the purchase of the lands mentioned in the said recited agreement, and hereinbefore referred to, the said lands shall thereupon absolutely vest in and become the property of the said Great Western Railway Company, freed from all right or interest of the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway Company, or of any person claiming under them in reference thereto, in like manner as though the Act authorising the construction of the said Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction Railway had never passed, and the said lands had been originally purchased by and conveyed to the said Great Western Railway Company; and the said Great Western Railway Company shall be thenceforth freed and discharged from all obligations in respect of the said agreement hereinbefore recited, or any enactments consequent thereon, or in relation thereto.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

Byles, Serjt. (with whom was Aspland), for the plaintiffs.—The covenant "to efficiently work" means that the defendants are to use ordinary means to secure and increase the traffic; or, that they are to work up to the requirements of the public, or up to the best powers of the workmen. First, the defendants were bound to work for passenger traffic. The West London company, at the time of the lease, were carriers both of passengers and goods; and so also were the lessees. The railway was constructed for the carrying of passengers, as shown by the provisions of their Act, 6 Will. 4, c. 79, which prescribes the tolls to be taken for passengers. The evidence shows that passenger traffic was to be had. The agreement provides for the exchange of passengers from one railway to another; and the lease provides for the payment to the West London of a certain proportion of the rates and tolls taken in respect of passengers. The terms of the lease therefore clearly contemplate passengers being carried, and the defendants were bound to take means for producing passenger traffic. [ERLE, J.—Is your test what a prudent owner would do?] Yes; one who had no inducement to throw it on another line. Secondly, the defendants had power to compel the Great Western to stop their trains. The fee-simple of the land at the point of intersection belonged to the plaintiffs; and the Great Western had only an easement over it in a particular manner; and the plaintiffs, before the lease to the defendants, could stop the Great Western trains. This right passed by the demise to the defendants. It runs with the land. The benefit of the easement continues to the Great Western; and so also does the burden. All the rights of the plaintiffs pass by the demise to the defendants. This would be so by the common law. But 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, ss. 34, 35, 36, 37, and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 91 (passed after the lease) sanction the agreement, and, in fact, enact it. The leasing Act, 8 & 9 Vict. authorises the leasing of the rights of the West London. This was one of those rights, and passes under the general words in the operative part of the lease, by which the plaintiffs grant their line, &c. together with all their rights, powers, and privileges. The defendants therefore may bring actions against the Great Western in respect of such right, either in their own names or in the name of the plaintiffs; or they may file a bill for a specific performance. Thirdly, the defendants are bound to work the trains of the West London line in conjunction with the trains of the London and North-Western and Great Western Railways. The leasing Act recites in the preamble that the railway cannot be worked separately with advantage, but might be in connexion with the other railways; and no other mode of effectually working the line can be suggested. Fourthly, the defendants are not to be treated merely as lessees of a separate line, but regard is to be had also to their possessing another railway; and they are to be regarded as the lessees of a line connected with other railways. In ascertaining the meaning of a day's work, regard must be had to the ability of the workman: Bacon's maxims, rule 10, verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel personæ; as in the case of a grant of an annuity pro consilio impendendo, you must consider the ability of the person who is to give it. There are several objections urged against our construction of the covenant; first, it is said (this having been suggested by Maule, J.) that the covenant to work efficiently is merely a covenant to indemnify against a forfeiture of the lands taken by the company under sect. 210 of 6 Will. 4, c. 79, to the owners on either side of the line; or, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 37, to the Great Western. But this cannot be so; for, looking at the first branch of the covenant, if it had been framed on the forfeiture clause it would have run—"The railway shall not during the term be abandoned or given up, but shall be used during the term." But they covenant not only to work but to repair; and in the forfeiture clause there is nothing about repairs. The covenant contains no allusion to forfeiture; but is a positive covenant to efficiently work and repair, and so to work as to effectuate the objects of the lease, and give gross proceeds to the lessors by using reasonable means to do so. Nor does the latter branch of the covenant control the first: (Seward v. Anstey, 2 Bing. 519.) It is not in the alternative to work or indemnify; but to work and indemnify. The second branch itself contemplates far more than the forfeiture clause. For what is to become of the word "loss?" We might assign good breaches, and yet stop far short of the forfeiture clause. Another objection is that there is one case in which the defendants are not bound to carry passengers; namely, where the railway would produce more by merely carrying goods. But we answer that we have nothing to do with the net profits; and that it is impossible that the gross profits should not be greater if passengers were carried. [CROMPTON, J.—Is not "efficiently" a question for the jury? Do the exceptions hit it?] We say in the bill of exceptions that we contended that the defendants were bound to carry on both trades. [CROMPTON, J.—Suppose it were more profitable to the lessors that goods only should be carried?] To that we do not object; but it will be said that if the carrying of goods only is more beneficial to the lessors, they need not carry passengers. [COLERIDGE, J.—If in any supposable case they are not bound to carry passengers, is the direction of the Lord Chief Justice wrong upon that point?]

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

Channel, Serjt. (with whom was Boyle), for the defendants.—The defendants are not bound in all possible events to run passenger trains; and the direction of the Lord Chief Justice on that point is right. Suppose the breach relied upon had been that the defendants had not run any passenger trains, and we had demurred: could the plaintiffs have succeeded? If not, then the omission to run passenger trains does not constitute a legal breach. [MARTIN, B.—The second exception is to the ruling that the defendants are not bound to provide passenger trains, if passengers present themselves.] We say the lease does not show the necessity of passenger trains. The clauses relied upon by the other side only show what we are to pay to the plaintiffs if we carry them; but do not show that we are bound to carry them. The gross proceeds may be greater by our carrying goods only; and if so, we should not be bound to carry passengers in order to work the line efficiently. Suppose the carrying of passengers would so impede our goods traffic as to diminish the gross proceeds. If the covenant is to indemnify against loss by forfeiture or against actual loss, we are entitled to succeed. The case of Seward v. Anstey is distinguishable. The covenant there is to pay absolutely; but the indemnity goes beyond it. In construing the covenant, it is not to be taken in reference to the public at all, but merely as a contract between the parties themselves. It cannot mean that the defendants are to work the line in a manner not only not beneficial to themselves, but in a manner in which the plaintiffs could not beneficially have worked it. We are entitled, unless they can show that we have lessened the gross proceeds by indiscreet working. As to stopping the trains of the Great Western, the Act of Parliament only notices the agreement in order to provide for omissions of what might benefit the public. And as to the leasing Act and lease, penalties are imposed on both parties; and it must be shown, not only that we acquired rights, but also had liabilities imposed upon us by the demise. The powers in the agreement with the Great Western are very special; and if it had been intended that they should pass they would have been more particularly alluded to. The rights intended to pass under the general words were those which were required for the purpose of completing or extending the line. [COLERIDGE, J.—Is the power of the Great Western to enforce the agreement extinguished by this demise?] New arrangements were at the time contemplated, and about being entered into, between the London and North-Western and Great Western; and, in fact, the Great Western became part owners of the line. As to our being bound to stop our own trains, the covenant taken by itself can only operate on the land demised. It is only by looking at the preamble of the leasing Act that it can be inferred that we are bound to stop our trains. But the statement in that preamble that the West London trains might be advantageously worked in conjunction with the London and North-Western, was inserted for the purpose of satisfying the Legislature that the London and North-Western were justified in asking powers to take what was then a failing line; and it was left to the parties themselves to agree to any terms which might be beneficial to themselves, if not inconsistent with the Act. The London and North-Western, in fact, paid their money and took the powers under the Act for the chance of working the line advantageously. And I submit that this covenant is to be looked at exclusive of the Act. One ruling assumes that we have no power to stop; and we should like, for the final determination of the case, that that question should be decided.

Aspland, in reply.—As to the form of the exceptions, the first is to the ruling that "the London and North-Western are not bound to work for both traffics." That means, if passenger traffic should present itself, and there was evidence that passenger traffic might have been had. It is said that the leasing Act was only for the purpose of enabling the parties to contract; but it does more, for it confirms the agreement previously entered into, which contains the same words as the covenant in the lease, that the London and North-Western shall efficiently work. The power to stop the Great Western is transferred by the demise; for the agreement made between the West London and the Great Western is now in operation; and, if it were not, the trains of the Great Western could not get to London. Indeed, by reason of the statute giving, in certain events, the land to the adjoining landowners, the Great Western might be altogether stopped. If, therefore, they can enforce the agreement, it can be enforced against them by the London and North-Western. The word "indemnify," in the covenant, means that the London and North-Western will put us in the same position, if they do not efficiently work, as if they did.

Cur. adv. vult.

JUDGMENT.

Jan. 28.—PARKE, B.—The case of the West London v. The London and North-Western, heard by myself, Mr. Justice Coleridge, Mr. Justice Wightman, Mr. Justice Erle, my brothers Platt and Martin, and Mr. Justice Crompton, comes before us upon a bill of exceptions to the ruling of the Lord Chief Justice of the C. P. in the trial of an action of covenant brought by the plaintiffs against the defendants. The question arising on the construction of that covenant, we are informed, had been before the C. P. upon cross motions by the plaintiffs and the defendants, and the ruling was in conformity with, or rather was, the ultimate opinion of the court, though necessarily in the record it is treated as the ruling of my Lord Chief Justice. The questions arising on the record were fully and most satisfactorily argued on both sides before us, and I have now to state the opinion of my brethren and myself on each of them. The action is brought on a covenant contained in a lease by the plaintiffs to the London and Birmingham Railway Company, which has since been incorporated with, and had its liabilities transferred to, the defendants. The lease was made on the 11th March 1846, pursuant to an Act of the 9 Vict. for enabling the London and Birmingham to take a lease of the West London. The West London had, under its then name of the Birmingham, Bristol, and Thames Junction, and under an Act of the 6 Will. 4, c. 79, made a railway from the basin of the Kensington Canal at Kensington to join the defendants' railway near Harlesden Green; and there was in that Act of Parliament a clause, the 210th, providing that, if the railway or any part should be abandoned or given up, or if after it was completed it should for three years cease to be used as a railway, the lands purchased for the purposes of the Act should revest in the owners of the adjoining land. In the progress of the works of the plaintiffs and the Great Western they became competitors for the purchase of a small piece of land belonging to the Bishop of London, over which both railways would have to pass, and an agreement, under the seal of both companies, was executed, dated the 4th Feb. 1837, which recited the above fact, and also that the bishop had conveyed the land to the company, now the plaintiffs, subject to the right of the Great Western to construct their railway across it; and the deed contains mutual covenants regulating the right of each company in respect of such piece of land so conveyed. The Great Western covenant with the company now the West London to construct a railway station at the point of junction, for the purpose of transferring passengers and goods from the one railway to the other, and to stop the trains, for the purpose of meeting corresponding trains of that company, in the manner particularly detailed in that deed. In the year 1840 another Act, the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, passed, giving further powers to the company now the plaintiffs; and, in the 34th section of that Act, it recites the agreement of the 4th Feb. 1837, regulates the mode of crossing until the plaintiffs' railway should be completed, saves the plaintiffs' rights under the agreement by section 36, and, by section 37, provides that if the plaintiffs' line is abandoned or cease to be used as a railway for three years after its completion, then, on payment or tender to them of the purchase-money of the piece of land mentioned in the agreement, that land should vest in the Great Western. In July, 1845, the London and Birmingham, having previously agreed with the plaintiffs to take a lease of their railway, obtained an Act of Parliament (the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 156) to enable them to take that lease. It recites that it had been found that the West London, which name was given to the plaintiffs' railway by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, could not be worked as a separate and independent undertaking with advantage to the proprietors thereof: but the same might be advantageously worked and used in connection with the London and Birmingham and the Great Western, or either of them, by either of the companies to whom those railways belong. Power is given to the West London to lease to the London and Birmingham their railway, stations, &c. and all their rights, powers, and privileges in relation thereto; and it is declared to be lawful for the London and Birmingham to accept such lease, and to use, exercise, and enjoy all such powers, rights, and privileges as aforesaid, subject to the provisions of that Act, and to the performance of the conditions in the lease. Pursuant to the Act, the lease from the plaintiffs to the London and Birmingham was executed on the 10th March, 1846, upon a covenant in which the present action is brought against the London and North-Western. This indenture recites the Act, and witnesseth that, in consideration of 60,000*l.* paid by the London and Birmingham to the plaintiffs, in pursuance of the said power, did grant, demise, and lease unto the London and Birmingham the West London, and all the stations, wharfs, buildings, and appurtenances thereto belonging or held, used, and enjoyed therewith, and to the rates and tolls payable in respect thereof, together with all the rights, powers, and privileges of the West London in relation thereto, and also the free and uninterrupted use of the Kensington Canal, for the purposes of the traffic of the London and Birmingham and the West London. And it was agreed that, during the continuance of the lease, the London and Birmingham should, within twenty-one days after the 30th June and the 31st Dec. in every year, carry to the credit of the West London such a sum of money as should be equivalent to one-fourth of the gross sums received by the London and Birmingham during the period of six calendar months next preceding the said 30th June and the 31st Dec. in respect of passengers, goods, and other things carried or landed on the West London, or the lands and appurtenances thereto belonging, or on or over any alterations and improvements in any of the premises demised, or in lieu of, or by way of substitution for, any part thereof, and also such a sum of money as should be equivalent to one half of the net profits arising from the rates, tolls, and duties, to be received for the use of the same respectively, from persons providing their own locomotive or other moving power or carriages. Here follows the material covenant upon which this question turns. It is in these terms, "That the London and Birmingham should, at their own expense, during the continuance of the lease efficiently work and repair the railway and works demised, and indemnify the West London against all liabilities, loss, charges, and expenses, claims and demands, whether incurred or sustained in consequence of any want of repair, or in consequence of not working, or in any manner connected with the working of the same railway and works;" but the West London were to have no control whatever over the working or management by the London and Birmingham of the West London or works. Several breaches were assigned, to which it is not material to advert. The sixth was that the defendants did not efficiently work the said railway, to which the defendants pleaded that they did efficiently work it; and on that issue the Lord Chief Justice directed the jury. The only question for us to decide is, whether the direction of my Lord Chief Justice was right in all the particulars pointed out in the bill of exceptions. There were several objections, and we propose to give our opinion on each, though if we decided that one only was wrong, a venire de novo would be granted, but that would leave the case in a very unsatisfactory condition, and prolong a litigation which it is very desirable, if possible, to terminate by laying down a rule which may lead the parties to settle the proper damages to be paid by arbitration. The exceptions are that the Lord Chief Justice was wrong in stating his opinion to the jury on the following eight particulars:—First, that under the said covenant, and in order to perform the same, the defendants were not bound to work the said West London line, nor was it necessary that the same should be worked, for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic. Secondly, that it was not necessary that the defendants should work the said West London and works, or that the same should be worked, for passenger traffic as well as for goods traffic, if such traffic presented itself. Thirdly, that the said agreement of the 4th Feb. 1889 was not transferred to the defendants or made binding between them and the Great Western, and that, therefore, the said defendants had no power to compel the Great Western to stop trains on the line of the Great Western. Fourthly, that the defendants were not bound to work the West London line, and that it was not necessary that the same should be worked, in connection with trains on the Great Western. Fifthly, that the said defendants were not bound to compel the Great Western to stop trains, on the Great Western where necessary, for the purpose of working in connection with the West London line. Sixthly, that the defendants were not bound to work the West London line, and that it was not necessary that the same should be worked, in connection with trains on the line of the said defendants. Seventy, that the said defendants respectively were not bound to stop the trains of the defendants on the line of the London and Birmingham, and London and North-Western respectively, where necessary for that purpose. Eighthly, that the defendants must be treated by the jury, for the purpose of considering their liability under the said covenant, as if they were lessees of a separate and independent line, having no control over the Great Western, and London and Birmingham, and London and North-Western Railway, or any of them. It was suggested to us on the argument that, in giving this opinion, the Lord Chief Justice acted in some degree on the principle which is stated to us to have been sanctioned by most of the judges of the C. P., and of whose opinions we have been furnished with a printed report, but not from the regular reporters of that court. The principle suggested is that, taking the whole of the covenants together, the main object of it was that the railway was to be worked so as to prevent any loss or forfeiture, or injury to the plaintiffs, in consequence of not working; but as long as that is done, it might be worked in any way that the lessees pleased; that the lessees merely took on themselves the obligation of the lessors, and undertook to relieve them from the obligation cast on them by the Acts of Parliament. But the able argument of my brother Byles satisfied us that this was too narrow a view of the construction of the covenant in question, and we so intimated our opinion in the course of the argument. Had the object been merely to protect the plaintiffs from the forfeiture of the line under one of the clauses already referred to, either under the 6 Will. 4, c. 75, s. 210, by abandoning or giving up or ceasing to use it as a railway, or under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 87, by abandoning or ceasing to use it for three years, it would have been unnecessary to do more than to covenant not to abandon, give up, or cease to use the railway: the covenant to indemnify against all liabilities, losses, charges, and expenses, claims, and demands, in consequence of any want of repair, or in any manner connected with the working of the railway and works, and more especially the covenant to work efficiently, would have been quite unnecessary if the object had been merely to preserve the railway to the plaintiffs' company. We must give effect to all the words of the covenant if we can; and in so doing we do not think that the obligation can be limited in the way which has been suggested. The railway is to be worked efficiently, and efficiently repaired; and if the plaintiffs are to share in the gross profits in the proportion of one-fourth, and in half the net profits of the rates and tolls payable by others using their own locomotive power, this shows that the object of the covenant to work efficiently was to secure the stipulated benefit to the plaintiffs on the gross profits, and efficiently to repair, to give them a chance of the share of the net profits. But we agree with the reported judgment of my brother Maule that it never could have been intended that the defendants' company were to work the railway in such a manner as to produce the largest quantity of gross proceeds. That might entail a ruinous loss on themselves; they were not bound to lay down a double railway where a single one was before, or to apply a part of their large capital to the erection of new stations, or to disarrange all their plans, so as to make the plaintiffs' line of railway productive at the expense of their own. A fair and reasonable mode of working the railway, so as to make it productive, is all that can be required. We now proceed to consider the eight points made by the bill of exceptions, keeping these observations in view. The first of these depends upon the question whether the defendants were, under all the circumstances, in order to perform the covenant "to work efficiently," bound to work the line for passenger traffic. We think that this proposition cannot be maintained—at least all of us think, with the exception of my brothers Platt and Martin, who are not satisfied to concur on that particular part of the judgment, although they concur in the other parts. A satisfactory criterion of the truth of it was offered by my brother Channell, when he asked, whether it would be a good breach of such a covenant to state simply that the defendants did not work the railway for passenger traffic. We think, with the exception of my brothers Platt and Martin, it clearly would not. If as much gross profit could be obtained by efficiently working the railway for goods only, or for passengers only, or for both passengers and goods—and there is no evidence stated in this case that it could not—surely the plaintiffs had no right to complain. We therefore think that the first objection cannot be maintained. The second is of the same nature: it seems a strange thing to assert that they are not bound to carry passengers even if passenger traffic presented itself; but in truth the same answer is to be given, that if they work the railway efficiently for goods, so as to produce as much gross profit as the railway when worked for passengers and goods, or passengers alone, would produce, they perform their covenant. The mode of working the railway is certainly in their discretion. The third question is, whether the Chief Justice was right in his opinion that the agreement of Feb. 4, 1837, was not transferred to the defendants, and that therefore the defendants had no power to compel the Great Western to stop trains on their railway, pursuant to their covenant contained in that agreement. We think that this covenant to make a station on certain land, and to stop the trains there, which affects the value of the land, and of the whole of the plaintiffs' railway, is one which runs with the estate in the plaintiffs' railway (the cases being collected in Spencer's case, in the first volume of Smith's Leading Cases); and that the assignee of the whole estate in the railway could sue upon the covenant at common law. Whether the assignee of that estate for a term of years, as the defendants are, could sue at common law, is not a point which has been settled, the cases on the subject being generally those of covenants for title which pass with the entire estate; but as this is a covenant affecting the temporary enjoyment of the estate, and consequently beneficial to the owners of it pro tempore, there is no reason why it should not, as in the case of covenants affecting the reversion which are transferred with part of the reversion, or the reversion of part by operation of the statute of 32 Hen. 8, c. 34: (Coke Littleton, 215 a; Farquhar v. Pickard, 2 B. & Al. 105. At all events, we think that the words of the statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 105, and of the lease, are sufficient to vest the rights under the agreement in the defendants, as not only the railway, but all the rights, powers, and privileges of the plaintiffs in relation thereto, are demised by the plaintiffs to the defendants; and this is a power and privilege which does relate to the railway. For these reasons we do not agree in the opinion of my Lord Chief Justice on the third question, that the defendants had not power to compel the Great Western; that part of his direction we think wrong. The fourth and fifth objections admit of a different answer, and the direction is right, on the same principle that the first and second were. Though they had power, they were not bound to exercise it necessarily as part of the efficient working of the railway by the defendants; and the defendants were not bound necessarily to work the West London in connection with trains on the Great Western, as a part of their obligation to work effectively. It would not have been a good breach of their covenant to allege simply that they did not so work the line. Precisely the same observation is to be made on the sixth and seventh objections; there is no covenant in the lease obliging the defendants to work their line in connection with either in particular, or with both the Great Western and London and North-Western lines together, though it is difficult to see how practically they could work the lines effectively without some connection with one or the other. This would be for the jury; and if the jury found that they could work the line effectively without, so as to satisfy the covenant, that would be sufficient. The last position laid down by the Chief Justice is that the defendants must be treated by the jury, for the purpose of considering the liability of the defendants, as if they were the lessees of a separate and independent line, having no control over the Great Western and London and North-Western. We do not think that this proposition is correct. The covenant to work efficiently must be construed with a reference to the subject-matter and the character of the defendants. The word "efficient" must admit of a different construction in a covenant by a person armed with very limited or very extensive powers. If this railway had been leased to a simple individual or company without any connection with any other railway, and leased alone, the measure of efficient working, we cannot help thinking, would be very different from what would be required from a company whose line was connected with it, who had the entire control over their own line, and were armed with the power of adding to the traffic of the railway by the control possessed over another line, and whose capabilities and powers in this respect were reasons which disposed Parliament to permit the lease to be made to them. It is difficult, indeed almost impossible, to define the precise nature and degree of efficient working which such a company ought to apply under the covenant,—not so difficult to say that it ought to be different and greater than would be required from a company or an individual who had nothing but the railway leased. They would only be required to supply convenient accommodation and attendance for the receipt, and sufficient means of carriage, of such goods and passengers as might be offered at one terminus, or an intermediate station, and this however small the gross profits might be. But that would be too small a measure of efficient working in the case of the defendants, who have the power of supplying more goods and passengers themselves, by facilitating the transit of both from Harlesden to the Kensington terminus, or Great Western Station, or by increased facilities for receiving them at the Kensington terminus, by arrangements within their power, without any serious injury to their own concern. They are certainly not bound to make a sacrifice of their own concern for the purpose of efficiently working this line so as to produce the greatest profits for the plaintiffs and themselves. The covenants have a reasonable construction in this respect; but they are, we think, bound to do more than a lessee of merely the railway in question would do unconnected with any other: therefore there must be venire de novo.

ERROR FROM THE EXCHEQUER.

Lease of coal mine—Construction.

A lease of a coal mine gave a power to the lessees to drive and use outstrokes, drifts, and other communications not exceeding the breadth of four yards each within and through the barrier covenanted to be left unworked of the said colliery thereby demised, lying contiguous to or adjoining any other colliery which they were or should at any time during the said demise, become possessed of or entitled to, or in which they or any of them had or should have any interest, as should be thought necessary or convenient by the said lessees for the effectual mining of such adjoining colliery, and for the purpose of bringing and leading underground the coals which should be wrought or gotten by them within such adjoining colliery, and which should be thought fit and convenient to be brought and conveyed underground from such adjoining colliery into the colliery thereby demised, or the shafts or workings thereof, and by such outstrokes, drifts, &c. to bring lead, &c. from such adjoining colliery into the demised colliery or the shafts or workings thereof, and from thence to convey and carry away all such coals as should by them be wrought within or out of such adjoining colliery:

Held, that this clause authorised the lessees to break through such barrier for winning coal of the demised mine, and for winning coal of the adjoining mines in the occupation of the lessees, though the coal of such demised or adjoining mines when won was not to be nor was brought to the surface through a pit or shaft in the land of the lessors above the demised mine, and although no such pit or shaft in fact existed.

The lease also contained a covenant by the lessees that they, their executors, &c. should once in every month or oftener during the said term, at their own expense, draw to bank at some of the pits or shafts of the said collieries demised (provided the same should be pits or shafts from which coals of the thereby demised collieries should not be worked by an outstroke), and lay in some convenient place upon the said lands of the lessors for them, &c. all the manure, &c. to be made by the horses employed underground in working the said demised collieries, and should spend and bestow so much thereof as might be necessary for that purpose in dressing or manuring any land which the said lessees might, during the said term thereby granted, occupy as tenants to the said lessors. The lease further spoke of pits and shafts to be sunk in the demised premises, but did not contain any express covenant binding the lessees to sink a pit:

Held (affirming the judgment of the court below), that no covenant could be implied which bound the lessees, upon the mines being worked and manure made within them, to make a pit or shaft on the demised premises.

The lease further contained a provision that the lessors should not do or commit, &c. any act in the working the said demised coal mines, whereby the same or any part thereof should be damnified, drowned, or overburthened with water or styth, or which might occasion or bring any creep or thrust upon the workings, shafts, aircourses, or watercourses of such colliery; and should and would keep the levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air, clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the levels or drifts, during the continuance of the said demise; and should and would, during the continuance of the said demise, raise all the water to come forth and out of the said colliery and coal mines by means of fire and other engines. The evidence in support of the breach of this covenant went to show that, long prior to the commencement of the plaintiffs' title, and thenceforward continuously down to, and at the time of, the commencement of this action, the part of the High Main seam, where workings had formerly been carried on, had been and was filled with water, and thereby the aircourses in the said workings in that seam were interrupted, but that had no effect on the aircourses or workings in the Hutton seam:

Held, that this was properly left to the jury, and that the judge at the trial was right in directing them that the facts proved with reference to the water in the High Main seam did not entitle the plaintiffs to a verdict on that issue.

In this case a writ of error had been sued out against the judgment of the court below, on a demurrer to the declaration, and also a bill of exceptions against the ruling of Cresswell, J. who tried the cause at the Durham assizes.

The action was in covenant. The declaration stated that the plaintiffs on the 5th Oct. 1824, by indenture, demised to the defendants a certain estate called Eppleton, in the parish of Houghton-le-Spring, in the county of Durham, and all the collieries and seams of coal within and under that estate. This deed contained clauses by which full liberty and power was given to the lessees to dig, sink, rid, win, work, and make pit and pits, trench and trenches, grove and groves, staple and staples, and to drive drift and drifts, and to make watergates and watercourses, as well for the searching for and winning, working, obtaining, and getting coals from forth and out of the said collieries or coal mines, seam and seams of coal, thereby demised, as for the avoiding and carrying off water, foul air, and styth, or for the conveying of air into, through, and out of the same, and also sufficient and convenient groundroom, &c. and also sufficient and convenient wayleave or liberty of passage over the lands to carry away the coals, and also to erect cabins for the workmen and all needful engines, &c.; and also full power and liberty to the lessees, their executors, &c. from time to time and at all times during the continuance of the demise, to make, drive, and use such outstroke or outstrokes, drift or drifts, or other communications not exceeding the breadth of four yards each, within and through the barrier, bulk, or warren of coal, thereby covenanted as thereinafter mentioned to be left unworked of the said colliery, adjoining to any other colliery which they then were or should at any time thereafter during the continuance of the demise become, possessed of, or in which they should have any interest, as should be necessary or convenient by the lessees, their executors, &c. for the effectual winning of such adjoining colliery, and for the purpose of bringing and conveying underground the coals which at any time during the continuance of the demise should be wrought or gotten by them out of such adjoining colliery, and which should be thought fit or convenient to be brought and conveyed underground from such adjoining colliery unto and into the colliery demised, or the shafts or workings thereof, and thereby and by such outstroke or outstrokes, drift or drifts, or other communications, to bring and convey underground from such adjoining colliery into the colliery demised, or the shafts or workings thereof, and carry away, all such coals as should by them be wrought or gotten within or out of such adjoining colliery; and also to draw to bank at any of the pit or pits sunk or to be sunk by them in any of the lands aforesaid, coals out of such adjoining colliery, in such manner as the lessees should think fit, such outstrokes to be stopped up (if practicable) at the end of the term, saving to the lessors the right to pass over the waggon-ways on the demised premises, &c.: Habendum for the term of forty-two years from the date of the lease. The lessees to pay to the lessors yearly for the first two years of the term the rent of 20*s.* for every ton of merchantable coals of the High Main and Hutton seams; and 17*s.* 6*d.* per ten of every other coal, except coal used in the engines, &c. which should be gotten during the first two years, not exceeding 1000 tons a year; and 22*s.* and 17*s.* 6*d.* a ten (as before) for each ten gotten exceeding that amount; and also paying yearly during the remainder of the term the sum of 1000*l.* yearly for such number of tens of merchantable coal, to be gotten out of the demised collieries, as at the rate of 20*s.* and 17*s.* 6*d.* a ten respectively would amount to 1000*l.*, whether the coal should be gotten or not; and also paying yearly during the remainder of the term above the certain yearly rent of 1000*l.* the further rent of 22*s.* and 17*s.* 6*d.* a ten respectively (as before mentioned) above the number of tons for which the yearly rent of 1000*l.* was reserved, payable half-yearly, and also paying the further clear rent of 7*s.* 6*d.* per ten of coal which by the lessees should during the term be gotten from and out of any collieries adjoining the demised colliery by virtue of all or any of the liberties, powers, and privileges granted by the indenture, and which should be drawn to bank in any of the said lands of the lessors, the rent or sum of 7*s.* 6*d.* per ten to include outstroke rent, shaft rent, and wayleave rent; but in case the coals to be gotten out of such adjoining collieries should be gotten by means of pits in such adjoining collieries, and the water should be conveyed therefrom through the demised collieries, the lessees were to pay the lessors a watercourse rent of 2*s.* 6*d.* per ten annually. And the lessees covenanted to pay 40*s.* annually per acre for ground taken for or injured by pit room, &c. with a proviso that, in case the rent after demand should be for forty days in arrear, the lessors should have the power to distrain all coals that should be found at or in any of the pit or pits of the demised colliery, and all horses, gins, waggons, &c. which should be at or used on the premises. The deed, after various clauses, contained a covenant by the lessees that they, their executors, &c. should and would, in working and carrying on the colliery and coal mines, and seam of coal thereby demised, leave unwrought sufficient square walls or pillars of coal for the support of the roof, and for the working and preserving of the remaining part of the coal in the said colliery and coal mines thereby demised, and for the keeping open the drifts and watercourses thereof, and for preventing any thrust or creep from damaging the shafts, aircourses, and watercourses of the said coal mines thereby demised; and should and would, at all times during the said term thereby demised, work all and every the said colliery and coal mines, seam and seams of coal thereby demised, in and according to the best and most approved method then adopted and used in the working of the collieries and coal mines; and should not nor would at any time or times during the continuance of the said term thereby demised work the walls or pillars of coal so to be left unwrought as aforesaid; and should not commit or suffer to be committed any act, matter, or thing in the working the said mines whereby the same might be damnified, drowned, or overburthened; and should and would keep the levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air, clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the levels or drifts, during the continuance of the said demise; and should raise and draw all the water, to come forth by means of engines, to the surface; and also should and would, in the working of the said colliery and coal mines thereby demised, and all and every seam and seams of coal, leave unwrought a barrier or warren of whole coals of forty yards in breadth or thickness, in all or any parts next to and adjoining each and every other colliery and coal mine not belonging to the said lessors, to prevent any communication of water; and should not at any time during the continuance of the said term work or take away the barriers, bulks, or warrens of coal so agreed to be left, or any part thereof, or by any ways or means open a communication between the said coal mines thereby demised, and any adjoining mine, the coals of which should not be won or wrought by them the said lessees, their executors, &c. by virtue of the liberties and powers aforesaid, or make or suffer any outstroke, drift, or watercourse into or through the same except by virtue of those liberties; and should not permit or suffer any person to lead coals, cinders, &c. from or to any other colliery along the waggon-way to be made on the said lands, save and except such coals and cinders as should be won, wrought, and gotten by the lessees from any adjoining collieries, and which should be brought to bank on the said lands. The deed also contained a covenant, by which the lessees covenanted that they, their executors, &c. or their servants or workmen, should and would once in every month, or oftener during the said term, at their own expense, draw to bank at some of the pits or shafts of the said collieries or coal mines thereby demised (provided that the same should be pits or shafts from which the coal of the thereby demised colliery should not be worked by an outstroke), and lay in some convenient place in that behalf upon the said lands and premises of the said lessors, for the said lessors, their heirs, or assigns, all the manure, compost, and dung to be made and bred by the horses employed under ground in working the said demised collieries; and should spend and bestow so much thereof, and of all such dung, &c. as should be made or bred or arise in, under, or upon the said estate, lands, and premises of the said lessors, or any part thereof, as might be necessary for that purpose in dressing and manuring any lands or grounds which the said lessees, &c. might, during the said term, occupy as tenants to the said lessors; and further, that the lessees should and would, from time to time, and at all times during the demise, sufficiently fence the pits and shafts to be sunk in any of the demised lands, and also that the lessees would deliver up to the lessors, at the end of the term, all such pits, &c.; also, after the determination of the said demise, at their costs, use their best endeavours to stop up the drifts, outstrokes, watercourses, and other communications which should be made by virtue of any powers given, through any barrier, warren, &c. belonging to the said coal-mine, by making and fixing in each of the said drifts, &c. one or more frame dam, so as effectually to prevent any further communication of water or air between the said demised colliery and any adjoining colliery. And the lessors covenanted that the lessees might work any of the seams of coal they might think fit; and also that the lessees might during the demise, by such outstroke, or drift or drifts as might be so made as aforesaid, bring and carry underground from the demised colliery unto any adjoining colliery, of which the lessees might then or thereafter be possessed or have an interest in, or to the shafts or workings thereof, all coals, &c. as should be gotten by the lessees within the demised colliery, without paying to the lessors any outstroke rent for the same, such rent (if any) being payable to the owners of the adjoining colliery. The declaration then set out another deed between the parties of the 11th March 1825, whereby, after reciting the covenant to leave unwrought sufficient square walls of coal to support the roof, &c. it was witnessed that such recited parts of the said first-mentioned indenture should from thenceforth be null and void. And the lessees did by the said second indenture covenant with the lessors that, in working the said colliery, they would leave unwrought sufficient walls or pillars for the support of the roof, and for the working and preserving the remaining part of the coal, and for keeping open the drifts, aircourses, and watercourses thereof, and for preventing any thrust or creep from damaging the shafts, aircourses, and watercourses of the said mines, and should during the said term work all the said collieries in and according to the best and most approved method adopted in the neighbourhood of and on the rivers Tyne and Wear, &c., so as to obtain the largest possible quantity of merchantable coal; and in case it should be expedient to work the walls and pillars, and in case the same could be worked without prejudice to the colliery, the lessees, at the request of the lessors, should work such of the said walls and pillars as might be worked without prejudice to the said colliery. And by the said second deed, the lessees were empowered, in case they should have expended 5000*l.* in sinking a pit or pits wholly in the said lands of the said lessors, or in case the demised collieries should become incapable of being worked at a profit, to determine the lease at the end of the fourth, seventh, tenth, &c. years of the said term.

The fourth breach alleged that, after the making of the said indentures, and during the continuance of the said term, and after the plaintiffs had become and whilst they were so seised as aforesaid, and before the commencement of this suit, the said lessees did not nor would keep the levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air, of the said demised colliery and coal mines, clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the levels or drifts; but, on the contrary thereof, after the making of the said several indentures, and during the continuance of the said term, and after they the plaintiffs had become and whilst they were so seised as aforesaid, and before the commencement of this suit, to wit, &c. they the said lessees suffered and permitted the said lands and drifts and necessary staples for air to be, and the same then became, and were, and thence hitherto have been, and still are, stopped up, and in bad repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to such levels and drifts as last aforesaid, contrary to such covenant of the said lessees in the said first-mentioned indenture in that behalf contained.

The sixth breach alleged that, although the defendants, after the making of the said several indentures, and during the continuance of the said term, and after they the plaintiffs had become and whilst they were so seised as aforesaid, and before the commencement of this suit, to wit, on the days and at the times last aforesaid, worked the said demised colliery and coal mines, and divers seams thereof; and, although divers parts of the said demised colliery and coal mines, and of the said seams thereof, so worked as last aforesaid, were, at and during all the times last aforesaid, next to and adjoining divers other collieries and coal mines not belonging to the said lessors, as hereinbefore in that behalf is mentioned, to wit, a certain colliery and coal mine, called the Hetton Mine, a certain other colliery and coal mine called the Lyons Mine, a certain other colliery and coal mine called the Jane Pit, otherwise the Downs, a certain other colliery and coal mine called the Little Eppleton Mine, a certain other colliery and coal mine called the Warden Law Mine, and a certain other colliery and coal mine called the Sharperly Mine, yet the defendants did not, in so working the said demised colliery and coal mine, and the said seams thereof as last aforesaid, leave unwrought in each and every of the said seams so worked as last aforesaid, a barrier or warren of whole coals of the breadth or thickness in the said first-mentioned indenture and hereinbefore in that behalf mentioned and provided, in all and every part or parts next to and adjoining each and every of the said other collieries and coal mines not belonging to the said lessors as aforesaid, according to the said covenant in that behalf, but on the contrary thereof, the barriers or warrens of coal so agreed to be left unwrought as aforesaid, and next to and adjoining the said other collieries and coal mines so not belonging to the said lessors, were, at and during all the times last aforesaid, wrought and hollowed out, abstracted, and carried away by them the defendants in so as aforesaid working the said demised collieries and coal [illegible] for winnings and purposes other than and different from all and every of the winnings and purposes in that behalf authorised by the said indentures, or either of them, and without and contrary to the power, liberty, and authority to the said lessees in that behalf granted by the said indentures, or either of them, contrary to the said covenant of the said lessees in the said first-mentioned indenture in that behalf contained.

The seventh breach was of a like nature, and alleged that the defendants worked and took away barriers, bulks, and warrens of coal. The eighth, that defendants opened and kept open divers communications between the demised colliery and other collieries not belonging to the plaintiffs, &c. The ninth, that defendants made divers outstrokes, drifts, &c. through the said barriers, &c. covenanted to be left, into other collieries not belonging to the plaintiffs. The tenth, that defendants used, for winnings and purposes other than and different from the winnings and purposes in that behalf authorised by the said indentures, divers outstrokes, &c. and other communications before then made through the said barriers into other collieries not belonging to the plaintiffs; but these four last, it was admitted, depended on the sixth.

The eleventh breach alleged that, after the making of the indentures, and during the continuance of the term, and at times respectively more than a month before the commencement of the suit, certain manure, &c. was made and bred under the said estate in the demised colliery by horses employed by the defendants underground in working the above collieries; and that the said manure, &c. could not be drawn to bank, &c. on the said lands otherwise than by means of some pit or shaft: and that there was not any pit or shaft of the said colliery from which the coal of the said demised colliery were not worked by an outstroke: and that although, after the said manure, &c. had been bred, a reasonable time had elapsed, &c. for the defendants to have made a pit or shaft on the said demised colliery from which the coals thereof would not have been nor would be worked by an outstroke, yet the defendants had not made such pit or shaft, &c. by reason whereof the said manure so made, &c. could not be and was not at any time drawn to bank, &c.

The defendants traversed the fourth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth breaches, and demurred to the eleventh breach on the ground that neither of the indentures contained such a covenant as that alleged to have been broken: and on the demurrer the court below (Jan. 21, 1852) gave judgment for the defendants, and on this judgment the plaintiffs now brought their writ of error. At the trial before Cresswell, J. at the assizes at Durham, the learned judge directed the jury "that the liberties to break through the barrier covenanted to be left as in the pleadings mentioned extended to authorise the lessors to break through such barrier for winning coal of the demised mine, and for winning coal of the said adjoining mines in the occupation of the defendants, though the coal of such demised or adjoining mines, when won, was not to be brought to the surface through a pit or shaft in the land of the lessors above the demised mine, and although no such pit or shaft in fact existed."

The evidence on the fourth breach in the declaration went to show that, long prior to Aug. 1848, when the plaintiffs' title commenced, thenceforward continuously down to, and at the time of, the commencement of this action, the part of the High Main Seam of the Eppleton Mine, where workings had formerly been carried on, had been and was filled with water, and thereby the aircourses in the said workings in that seam were interrupted with the water: but that had no effect upon the aircourses or working in the Hutton Seam, and the learned judge directed the jury that "the facts proved with reference to the water in the High Main Seam did not entitle the plaintiffs to a verdict on that issue."

And as to the other breaches, the evidence went to show that the lessees held certain mines under other lessors adjoining the demised mines on both sides, and that the barriers had been broken through; that the communications so made had been used for various purposes for winning the coals of the demised mines, and also for taking coals won in the adjoining mines through the demised mine. And to the above rulings of the learned judge the plaintiffs excepted.

Atherton, Q.C. (with him Knowles, Q.C. and Aspland), for the plaintiffs in error, the plaintiffs below. —The question here turns upon the construction of the liberties granted by these indentures. Stripped of unnecessary verbiage, the power to drive and use outstrokes, drifts, &c. not exceeding four yards through the barrier covenanted to be left, amounts to this: first, there is a statement of things permitted to be done; and, secondly, the purpose for which they are to be permitted; and that purpose is to make such outstrokes as may be necessary for winning the coal from the adjoining mines, and the words "and also to draw to bank," &c. are a part of that purpose, —and if there is any ambiguity in the liberties reserved, they will be found to be explained by the other parts of the deed. An outstroke is a pit or shaft on the surface of the adjoining land; and the parties clearly contemplated the establishment of a pit or shaft on the demised premises, and never contemplated that the demised mines should be used as a passage for working the adjoining mines. As to the demurrer to the 11th breach, the true meaning of the covenant was, that upon the manure being bred within the demised mines, the lessees were bound to make a pit. The nonpayment of rent for two years of the term showed that that time was allowed for getting at the coal; and as there was no power given to the lessees to work the mines by outstroke, it was clearly the intention that they should be worked by a pit on the demised premises.

Feb. 2. (a)—The COURT called upon the defendants to speak as to the direction on the 4th breach.

Manisty (H. Hill with him), for the defendants.—The evidence referred to by the plaintiff, as supporting the 4th breach, would, if it were worth anything, support the other breaches; but taking that evidence in the strongest possible light, it cannot support this breach in the declaration; and the ruling of the learned judge at the trial was therefore right.

The judges retired a few minutes to their private room for deliberation, and then pronounced the following

JUDGMENT.

COLERIDGE, J.—In this case the first question arises upon the direction of the learned judge upon the issues raised upon the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th breaches—the four last, as it was said, depending upon the 6th; and the propriety of his direction depending upon the proper construction of that clause in the lease by which the lessees were empowered to break through barriers of coal which, by a covenant in the same lease, they were bound to preserve generally unbroken between the demised mines and the adjoining mines. The learned judge had ruled that this clause authorised the lessees "to break through such barrier for winning coal of the demised mine, and for winning coal of the said adjoining mines in the occupation of the defendants, though the coal of such demised or adjoining mines when won was not to be nor was brought to the surface through a pit or shaft in the land of the lessors above the demised mine, and although no such pit or shaft in fact existed." The question divides itself into two parts. Might a breach be made through the barrier for the purpose of introducing coal won in the adjoining mine into the demised mine, to be carried through it and passed through another breach to be made in another adjoining mine, and so to be lifted to the surface? And might a breach be made through the barrier for the purpose of carrying coal won in the demised into an adjoining mine, and through that mine, and lifted up to the surface through a pit in that mine? As to the first part the affirmative seems to us clearly to follow from the language of the liberty. It gives full power and liberty to make, drive, and use such outstroke or outstrokes, drift or drifts, or other communications, not exceeding the breadth of four yards each, within and through the barrier, bulk, or warren of coal thereby covenanted as hereinafter mentioned to be left unworked of the said colliery and coal mines thereby demised, lying contiguous or adjoining to any other colliery or coal mines which they then were, or should at any time thereafter during the continuance of the said demise become, possessed of or entitled to, or in which they or any of them then had or should have any share or interest, as should be thought necessary or convenient by them the said lessees, their executors, administrators, or assigns, for the effectual winning of such adjoining colliery or coal mines, and for the purpose of bringing, leading, and conveying underground the coals which at any time during the continuance of the said demise should be wrought or gotten by them within or out of such adjoining colliery and coal mines, and which should be thought fit or convenient to be brought and conveyed underground from such adjoining colliery and coal mines, unto and into the colliery or coal mines thereby demised, or the shafts or workings thereof, and by such outstroke or outstrokes, drift or drifts, or other communications, to bring, lead, and convey underground from such adjoining colliery and coal mines unto the colliery or coal mines thereby demised, or the shafts or workings thereof, and from thence to convey and carry away all such coals as should by them be wrought or gotten within or out of such adjoining colliery or coal mines. These words provided for three things being done: first, the introducing of coal into the demised mine by a breach made for that purpose; secondly, to give the power generally of carrying them away, including, we think, in this general language the power to pass them into another mine; thirdly, and distinctly, to give the power of raising them to the surface through a pit sunk, or to be sunk, in the demised land. Unless we give that extended meaning to this part of the lease, we shall leave an important part of the sentence without any meaning at all. As to the second of these things, that is, the making a breach for the purpose of taking the coal of the demised mine into an adjoining mine, it is true that this part of the lease does not in terms convey this power; but if the coal of adjoining mines might be brought through the demised mine without being raised to the surface through any pit sunk in the demised mine, but might be raised through pits in adjoining mines, it is difficult to say that the coal of the demised mine itself might not also be so raised. It is clear, from more than one provision in the lease, that that was really contemplated; thus, in the covenant regarding manure, upon which the last breach is assigned, the manure is to be brought up "at some of the pits or shafts of the said colliery or coal mines demised: provided that the same should be pits or shafts from which the coal of the demised colliery should not be worked by an outstroke," leaving a clear inference that it was intended rather that the coals of that mine might be worked by an outstroke, that is, brought to bank by being carried into and raised up through pits in some adjoining mine. In the lessors' covenant a provision is made that this may be done without any outstroke rent. Then there is a provision "that it might be lawful to and for the said lessees, their executors, administrators, and assigns, from time to time, and at all times during the continuance of the said demise, by such outstroke or outstrokes, drift or drifts, as might be made as aforesaid, to bring, lead, and carry underground from the said colliery and coal mines thereby demised unto any adjoining collieries and coal mines which they the said lessees, their executors, administrators, or assigns, then were or should at any time thereafter during the continuance of the said demise become possessed of or entitled to, or in which they or any of them then had or should have any share or interest in or to the shafts or workings thereof, all such coals and cinders as should by them be wrought or gotten within or out of the said colliery and coal mines thereby demised, without paying to the said lessors, their heirs, or assigns, any outstroke rent for the same, such rent, if any, being payable to the owner or owners of such adjoining colliery or collieries. When, therefore, we find the language clear that through breaches made in the barrier the coal of the demised mine might be carried, and we find that provision in the same instrument which specifies that breaches might be made, the just conclusion is that breaches might be made for that purpose. The other question which was discussed yesterday was on the demurrer to the last breach; and here we think the judgment of the court below ought to be affirmed. It is admitted that in the covenant upon which this breach is founded there is nothing which admits it was the usage to sink a pit on the demised premises, nor can we collect from the language anything which binds them to do so by implication. We agree in the reasoning to be found in the judgments of the members of the court below, though hardly perhaps going so far as to say that the sinking of a pit was anticipated when the lease was framed. We should think it more correct to say that it was considered a possible, and perhaps a not unlikely event, and provisions were made to meet that event in case it should come to pass. There still remains a question upon the direction of the learned judge upon the plea to the fourth breach, which breach is assigned upon one of the covenants of the lease, which I am now about to state. Taking the whole of it together, it is a provision "that the lessees should not do or commit, or wittingly or willingly suffer to be done or committed, any act, matter, or thing in the working and carrying on the said coal mines, seam and seams of coal thereby demised, whereby the same or any part thereof should or might be damnified, drowned, or overburthened with water or earth, or which might occasion or bring any creep or thrust upon the workings, shafts, air-courses, or watercourses of such colliery or coal mines, and [and these are the material words upon which the breach is assigned] should and would keep the levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air, clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

levels or drifts, during the continuance of the said demise, and should and would, during the continuance of the said demise, raise and draw all the water to come forth and out of the said colliery and coal mines, by means of fire or other engines." This covenant is capable of being divided into three parts, and it has been so treated by the plaintiffs in this action; and they have assigned breaches upon all three of these parts. At the same time it is very material, in order to the right understanding of any part, to take the whole into consideration; and without expressing any absolute opinion upon this point, I must confess it seems to me that the part upon which the breach in question is assigned was not addressed to a stoppage by water, which seems to me to have been sufficiently provided for, both by what went before and what came after; and the true meaning of this (not, however, that this will be the foundation of our judgment: I am merely stating a probable opinion respecting it) is, that this part was rather confined to preventing stoppages by rubbish and other things, so as to keep what, in ordinary understanding, the parties would know to be a level, or drift, or air-course, in good repair, order, and condition, not carrying it so far, as Mr. Atherton suggested, as to say that a stoppage with water might not, under certain circumstances, be a breach of the covenant, because a stoppage by water might put the levels or the drifts or aircourses entirely out of condition, and occasion a stoppage by reference to other things. Taking it simply, it seems to me it was not addressed to a mere filling up by water, such as is found to have taken place here. Now that being the covenant, the breach upon this part of it was assigned in this way: "That the plaintiffs further complain that the defendants did not nor would keep the levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air, of the said demised collieries and coal mines clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the levels or drifts; but, on the contrary thereof, after the making of the said several indentures, and during the continuance of the said term, and after they (the plaintiffs) had become, and whilst they were, so seised as aforesaid, and before the commencement of this suit (to wit) on the days and at the times last aforesaid, they, the said lessees, suffered and permitted the said levels and drifts and necessary staples for air to be, and the same then became and were, and thence hitherto have been, and still are, stopped up and in bad repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to such levels and drifts as last aforesaid." And I cannot help observing, with reference to what I have just been saying, that the expression "stopped up," which the plaintiffs themselves have made use of, seems to me to be not immaterial; it rather confirms the view which I had before taken of this covenant; and it is also right to notice what I omitted before, that this covenant is to be observed by doing something or preserving a state of things from the surface of the earth down to the "levels and drifts as last aforesaid," implying, I think, there the same thing, that it is looking to material stoppages rather than a stoppage by water. That being the breach, the plea is: "and, for a further plea, the defendants say that they did keep the said levels and drifts, and the necessary staples for air of the said demised colliery and coal mines clear and in good repair, order, and condition, from the surface of the earth down to the levels or drifts, according to the defendants' said covenant, and they did not suffer or permit the said levels and drifts and necessary staples for air, or any or either of them, to be, nor were the same, nor any or either of them, stopped up or in bad repair, order, or condition, in manner and form as allegod." These being the covenant, the breach, and the plea, let us see what the evidence is. In the first place, with regard to that which has reference to the High Main seam, the evidence is that this seam had been partly worked to a small extent by the defendants, but had not been worked for many years before, since the 14th Aug 1848, when the plaintiffs' title commenced. That is the statement; and a very certain statement it is undoubtedly, as regards either the extent or nature of the workings; and the jury further find—"That, long prior to Aug. 1848, and thenceforward continuously down to and at the time of the commencement of this action, the part of the said High Main seam of the said Eppleton Mine, where workings had so as aforesaid formerly been carried on" (not condescending upon any particulars at all, but leaving it in the same uncertainty as it had been by the former part of the evidence), "had been and was filled with water, and thereby the aircourses in the said workings in that seam were interrupted with the water; but that had no effect upon the airsources or workings in the Hutton seam." Now, upon this covenant, this breach, this plea, and this evidence, the plaintiffs' counsel contended that the facts proved in reference to the water in the High Main seam entitled the plaintiffs to a verdict on the said issue, and the direction was, that the facts proved with reference to the water did not entitle the plaintiffs to a verdict upon that issue. Now, the first question is, what was the contention of the plaintiffs' counsel, and what was the answer to it by the learned judge? We are all of opinion that the plaintiffs' counsel contended before the learned judge at the trial, and he affirms to-day, that if these facts which I have now stated were believed by the jury, all the deliberative functions of the jury were at an end, and that they had nothing to do but to find a verdict for the plaintiffs; and the answer of the learned judge was simply a negative to that proposition. He does not say "there is nothing to go to a jury upon for a verdict for the plaintiffs;" he simply says that it was not a necessary consequence from this evidence, so as to deprive the jury of all choice or deliberation in the matter. Now that, we think, was rightly said by him; the jury, as it seems to us, had to consider this evidence with reference to the fair meaning of the covenant, the breach, and the plea, and, more materially still, with reference to the workings which had been spoken of, their nature and their extent; and, probably, there might have been other things stated with reference to them in the course of the evidence than is now set down upon this record; but if not, if there was nothing more than that there had been some workings, without the least specification of their nature or extent, the jury must have considered the question as well as they could. These workings might have been such that the evidence as to the water might, if believed, conclusively support the breach; but, on the other hand, they might be such, so trifling, so unimportant, that even if, with regard to them all, the facts found were literally true, still there had been no breach at all. This, therefore, was a matter for the jury to consider, and if there was anything for the jury to consider, the ruling of the learned judge was correct. Upon the whole, therefore, we are of opinion that the judgment of the court below must be affirmed.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

Judgment generally for the defendants.

ERROR FROM THE EXCHEQUER.

Monday, Feb 7.

(Before COLERIDGE, WIGHTMAN, CRESSWELL, MAULE, ERLE, WILLIAMS, and TALFOURD, JJ.)

OLDFIELD v. DODD AND ANOTHER.

Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 78-82—Act of bankruptcy—Admission of part of demand—Bond.

Where proceedings had been taken under the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act, upon appearance to a creditor's summons is, the trader-debtor summoned admitted a part only of the demand, and made an affidavit as required by the Act that he believed that he had a good defence upon the merits as to the residue; but the Commissioner dispensed with his entering into the bond to pay the disputed residue:

Held (reversing the judgment of the Court below), that no bond having been entered into, no act of bankruptcy had been committed.

This was an action of trespass which was tried before Martin, B. at Guildhall, on Dec. 31, 1852. The action had been directed by the Court of Bank. to be tried, for the purpose of ascertaining the construction to be put upon certain sections of the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act; or, in other words, whether, under the circumstances proved on the trial, the plaintiff had committed an act of bankruptcy. The action was in trespass. The declaration contained two counts; the first for breaking and entering a messuage of the plaintiff, and seizing his goods; the second, for breaking and entering another messuage of the plaintiff, expelling the plaintiff and his servant, and converting and seizing the plaintiff's goods therein. The defendants pleaded, first, not guilty by statute; secondly, that the house was not the house of the plaintiff; thirdly, that the goods taken were not the goods of the plaintiff; and the fourth and fifth pleas also denied the plaintiff's property in the messuages and goods mentioned in the declaration. Upon these pleas issues were joined. At the trial, on the part of the plaintiff, it was proved that the defendants broke and entered the messuages and seized the goods, as alleged in the declaration. The plaintiff admitted that he was a trader within the meaning of the bankrupt laws; and that 112*l.* 10*s.* was due from him to the defendant Dodd; he also admitted that such sum had never wholly or in part been satisfied or released. The defendants admitted the seizure of the goods. For the purpose of proving the second, third, fourth, and fifth issues, the defendants proved that the plaintiff was on Sept. 4, 1852, served with particulars in writing of the defendant's demand, containing items of a debt amounting to 122*l.* 8*s.*, together with a notice requiring immediate payment of the same, according to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act (see 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 78, sch. G.); that on Sept. 14 the defendant Dodd duly filed an affidavit of the truth of such debt; that on Sept. 17 the plaintiff was served with a summons in the form contained in sch. H. of the said Act; that on Sept. 24 the plaintiff appeared before Mr. Commissioner Evans, and made a deposition on oath, which was afterwards filed in the Bankruptcy Court, in the form in sch. J. of the said Act; that he verily believed that he had a good defence to the said demand upon the merits as to the sum of 10*l.*, part of the said demand of 122*l.* 8*s.*; and at the same time signed and filed an admission that he was indebted to the defendant in the sum of 112*l.* 8*s.*, the residue of the said demand; and that the said Commissioner thereupon dispensed with the bond with sureties, which he was authorised by the statute to require the plaintiffs to enter into, to pay such sums as should be recovered in any action to be brought for the recovery of the said balance of the said demand, with costs. It was further proved that the plaintiff never paid or tendered the said sum so admitted to be due, nor did he at any time either secure or compound for the same. On Oct. 15, 1852, the defendant Dodd presented a petition to the Court of Bank. stating that the plaintiff was indebted to him in more than 100*l.*, and that he had been informed and believed that the plaintiff did lately commit an act of bankruptcy; and the petition then proceeded to pray adjudication of bankruptcy against the plaintiff; that the said petition was filed and entered of record on the same day, and was verified by affidavits that the said Commissioner found that the plaintiff became a bankrupt before the date of the filing of the said petition, and adjudged him a bankrupt accordingly; that on the 15th Oct. 1852 the defendant Pennell was appointed official assignee, and the defendant Dodd was chosen creditors' assignee; that the plaintiff was on the 16th Oct. served with a duplicate of the adjudication of bankruptcy (s. 104); that the alleged trespasses were committed by the defendants as such assignees; and that no other alleged act of bankruptcy than that above-mentioned was proved. It was then contended, on the part of the defendants, that an act of bankruptcy had been committed by the plaintiff on the eighth day after the filing of the admission of the residue of the said demand; and the learned judge, Martin, B. directed the jury that the evidence produced on the part of the defendants was, upon the whole, sufficient to show that the plaintiff had committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after the filing of the said admission of debt; and the jury thereupon found a verdict for the defendants. The plaintiff's counsel then tendered a bill of exceptions to the above ruling.

Pearson, for the plaintiff in error (the plaintiff below.)—In this case there was no proof of an act of bankruptcy having been committed; if a trader signed an admission for a part only of the creditor's demand, the Court of Bank. has no power under the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act to dispense with the bond there provided for being given for the residue; and to support this point, he cited the several enactments on the subject, showing how from time to time it had been treated by the Legislature. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 5; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 8; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, ss. 11-16, these sections being kept in view, would materially help to interpret the sections of the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act. Sect. 15 of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, is the same as sect. 82 of the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act, except that it gives no power to the court to dispense with the bond. This may be compared to the giving bail under the old mesne process, and not being in prison for twenty-one days: (Anon. 1 Fonbl. 65.) Until the action on the bond is at an end, the trader cannot be called upon under sect. 82 to pay the sum admitted to be due. The costs recovered in that action might exceed the debt admitted. The question is to be tried as to the whole debt; that is shown by the provision in sect. 86: (Smith v. Temperly, 10 M. & W. 278.) From what time is the act of bankruptcy to date? sects. 80 and 82 state, from the filing of the admission; sect. 81, from the service of the summons. This is in the nature of a criminal proceeding, and therefore the court will lean to a strict interpretation of the enactment.

H. Hill, Q.C., for the defendants in error (the defendants below.)—The words in the 82nd sect. "then and in such case," must be read distributively; and if not so read, the Act contains no provision for such a case as this. [MAULE, J.—If a man admits a part of the demand, and disputes a part, but does not pay the part admitted, then there is no clause to meet that case. I see no incongruity. You may say that it is inconvenient that a man is not to be made a bankrupt if he do not pay; but that is the act of the Legislature. We cannot alter the provisions of a statute, and strike out certain words and substitute others.] The Act contained many mistakes. In the title of Schedule K. "Form of Bond to pay admitted demand" is printed instead of "Form of Bond to pay disputed demand."

Pearson replied.

COLERIDGE, J.—We are all agreed that the ruling of the learned judge in the court below was not right, and that the plaintiff was not guilty of an act of bankruptcy. The reasons for our judgment stand on the plain wording of the Act. The terms of the 82nd section have not been followed. The section is not so clearly expressed as it might have been; but if it be insufficient for the purpose intended, we cannot make it better.

Judgment reversed.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS COURT.

IRISH INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT, DUBLIN.

Reported by JOHN LEVY, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

Jan. 1853.

Re MURRAY.

Making away with property—Vexatious opposition.

Defending proceedings to try a right, although a verdict be against the defendant, is not a vexatious defence to an action.

Where an insolvent possesses himself of money belonging to the trustees of his marriage settlement, and purchases property with it in a foreign country, which property he returns on his schedule, he will be deemed to have been guilty of a making away, although the trustees do not oppose.

The insolvent had been a cloth manufacturer in a small way in the neighbourhood of Dublin, and a dispute having arisen between him and a person named Edgar, who had a mill adjoining his, with regard to the right of water, proceedings were taken by the latter, which ended in a verdict against the insolvent for nominal damages; but the costs were enormous, the matter having been first before the L. C. and afterwards before a jury in the shape of an issue. The insolvent, finding that the suit terminated against him, sold out 400*l.* worth of Bank Stock that was standing to his credit in the Bank of Ireland, but which belonged to the trustees under his wife's marriage settlement. With this and some small sum in addition he proceeded to America, where he purchased a farm and a mill in the state of Wisconsin. He then returned for the purpose of taking out his family, and soon after his arrival at Dublin he was arrested at the suit of Edgar under an execution for the costs incurred during the litigation between them; and having filed his petition and schedule he now came up to seek his discharge. The mill and farm in America were returned in his schedule, and said to be full value for the money he had taken out with him there.

Walker now opposed for the detaining creditor, on two grounds. First, a vexatious defence to the proceedings taken against him; and, secondly, a making away with his property and putting it beyond the reach of his creditors. Both grounds were sufficiently proved by the schedule and the execution for the costs under which the insolvent was in custody.

The COURT intimated that the ground of vexatious litigation was not tenable; such ground only applied when an action was brought for a debt to which there was no fair ground of defence. In the present case the proceedings terminated in an issue to try a right, and the insolvent defending that right could not subject himself to an adverse decision on the ground of a vexatious defence to an action.

Coates, for the insolvent, contended that the second ground was equally untenable. In the first place, the money of which the insolvent possessed himself legally belonged to the trustees of his marriage settlement, and he had only a contingent interest in it as cestui que trust. Had he not laid hands on the money, the trustees would have been entitled to call on him to transfer it to them for the purposes of the trust, so that the opposing creditor lost nothing by his taking it. In the second place, the property which was purchased with it was returned for the benefit of his creditors, and although it was in another country, it could be disposed of there for their benefit. The trustees did not oppose, although the money legally belonged to them; and even if the property which was purchased with it was not forthcoming, the opposing creditor had no right to complain; but as the property was forthcoming, there could be no ground for saying that there had been a making away. Under all the circumstances of the case, he thought the insolvent entitled to a free discharge.

Mr. Commissioner BALDWIN could not agree with the view taken by the insolvent's counsel as to the one ground of remand that exists in the case. Although the trustees upon whom, by their own account, he committed a fraud did not choose to oppose, that was no reason why the court would not take all the circumstances of the case into their consideration. It appeared from the schedule that the trustees had sold all the insolvent's chattel property under an execution immediately after his leaving the country, and that it was after he was served with a scire facias to revive the judgment that he possessed himself of the proceeds of the bank stock and absconded; the trustees had a legal right to sell under that execution, and no complaint had been made about it, but so far that got priority over the other creditors, or rather creditor, for there appeared to be no creditor to any amount worth notice but the opposing creditor. The bank stock was in his power and control, and should be looked upon as if it were his own absolute property—that property he removed from the reach of his creditors, and it was absurd to talk of its being returned for their benefit—he would be glad to know what value would be set upon the authority of an assignee of the Irish Insolvent Court in the wilds of Wisconsin? The court would consider the case further as to the period for which he ought to be remanded, and would adjourn their decision for a week; and, in the meantime, his protection should be withdrawn.

The insolvent came before the court on a subsequent day with medical evidence as to the state of his health, and judgment was further postponed; but the court intimated that it was their intention to have remanded him for seven months from the date of his vesting order.

Penalty—Breach of trust.

A poor-rate collector who is sued for, and pays, a penalty imposed by the Poor-law Act for not paying in his collection weekly, may be remanded for a breach of trust, for any balance that remains in his hands on foot of the same collection.

The insolvent was a collector of poor-rates for the Baileberro union, and had omitted to return to the guardians a sum of about forty pounds which appeared due on the foot of his collection. For this omission he was sued under the Poor-law Act for a penalty for not paying in his receipts weekly, which he paid; he was afterwards sued for the defalcation as a debt, and being taken in execution, he came up to be heard on his petition.

Penefather, for the guardians, opposed on the ground of the insolvent having committed a breach of trust. That fact was admitted by the insolvent's schedule; he admitted having received the money, and that the balance in question was due on the foot of his account.

Maher, for the insolvent, contended that the guardians having sued for the penalty (ten pounds), which the insolvent paid, was a bar to their right to oppose him on the ground of a breach of trust. It was a well-known principle of law that a man could not be punished twice for the same offence, and the guardians had no right to first enforce the penalty and then ask the court to incarcerate the insolvent.

The court were of opinion that the enforcing of the penalty was no bar to their jurisdiction under the Insolvent Act, and remanded the insolvent for eight months.

Re EGAN.

Contracting debts when in a state of insolvency.

Although a trader may contract a debt when in a state of insolvency, yet, if it appear that within the last six or twelve months of his trading he had greatly reduced his liabilities, he will not be held to have contracted the debt without the probable expectation of paying it; and it will be considered a very favourable circumstance in his case to have kept regular books.

The insolvent was a trader in Longford, and was opposed by Phillips and Mooney, on the part of a creditor named Hannon, on the ground of having contracted the debt when in a state of insolvency, and without reasonable expectation of paying it. It appeared that in October 1851, the insolvent paid the opposing creditor a balance of about 30*l.* which he owed him, and in November and December following he got two parcels of flour, amounting to 72*l.* which was still due to this creditor. In January, the insolvent being suddenly pressed for payment by parties from whom he expected indulgence, he called a meeting of his creditors, and having submitted to them a statement of his affairs, they all but Hannon agreed to the execution of a trust-deed, assigning all his property over for their benefit. By the statement then submitted, it appeared that when the debt with Hannon was contracted he had not assets equal to half his liabilities; and upon these grounds it was contended that he clearly came under the penal section of the Act for having contracted the debt when in a state of insolvency, and without reasonable expectation of being able to pay it; and a remand was called for at the suit of Hannon. The whole current of decisions in the English Insolvent Court run in favour of the trader who submitted his affairs to his creditors as soon as he found he was insolvent and unable to meet his engagements; and against the trader who continued to contract debts when he knew he had not the means of paying all his creditors.

Levy, for the insolvent, submitted that, upon two grounds, the point raised against the insolvent did not apply. In the first place the credit for the flour was purchased by the payment made in October; it was then the flour was bought, although not delivered until November and December; and at the time of the purchase the insolvent had a fair expectation of going on and paying for the goods purchased, on which he reasonably calculated he would have made a fair profit. In the second place it would be found, on reference to his book, that within the last twelve months of his trading he reduced his liabilities from upwards of 2000*l.* to 1000*l.*; it was therefore for the advantage of his creditors that he remained in trade up to the period at which he stopped.

A reference to the chief clerk was then ordered by the court to ascertain if that statement was borne out by the insolvent's books; and on the report coming back it appeared that the fact was precisely as stated by counsel; namely, that the insolvent had, within the last six months of his trading, reduced his liabilities to the amount of 500*l.*, and within the last twelve months he had reduced them to the extent of 1000*l.* The opposition was still pressed.

Mr. Commissioner CURRAN delivered judgment.—He said the Court was at first disposed to remand the insolvent; for there was no doubt, that at the time the flour was delivered he was unable to pay any thing like the amount of his liabilities, and, being insolvent, he ought not to have gone on increasing them. But the issue raised by his counsel could not fail to make a most favourable impression on the mind of the court when found in his favour. In the first place his books appeared to have been extremely well kept, which was a favourable circumstance; and the chief clerk, without any difficulty whatever, was able to report that he had within the last twelve months lessened his liabilities to the extent of 1000*l.* It would be too bad then to remand a man for contracting a debt without reasonable expectation of paying it, who, instead of increasing his liabilities, went on decreasing them until he was unable to go any further. If he had not been suddenly pressed by other creditors, the probability was, that the greater portion of the flour would be paid for. The insolvent was discharged.

KNIGHT v. RICHARDS.

Will—Codicil thereto made when testator was non compos mentis.

John Knight made and duly executed a will bearing date the 29th May 1828. He afterwards became of unsound mind, and was transferred to a lunatic asylum, in which he died on the 4th Oct. 1852. On the 10th May, 1852, before he became an inmate of the lunatic asylum, he made a codicil, in which he gave the whole of his property to his housekeeper. This codicil had the names of three attesting witnesses subscribed to it. The deceased acknowledged his signature in their presence. From the affidavit of one of these attesting witnesses it appeared that the deceased was, at the time he so acknowledged his signature, of unsound mind; and the witness explained his having subscribed his name to the will as having done so with a view to pacify and calm the deceased. It also appeared, from the affidavits of two other persons, that before the day of the execution of the codicil the deceased had shown unequivocal symptoms of madness; and that he had consequently been removed to the lunatic asylum, where he died, having continued of unsound mind till his death.

A decree had issued citing the universal legatee, there being no executor named therein, to propound the codicil, or show cause why probate of the will alone should not be granted to R. K. as the surviving executor thereof. This decree was personally served upon M. R., the universal legatee named in the codicil. She appeared by her proctor, and exhibited a proxy, in which she declared she would not propound the codicil, but consented to probate of the will alone being granted to the said R. K.

Sir J. D. Harding, Q. A., moved for probate of the will alone under the circumstances detailed above. He cited Palmer and Brown v. Dent and others, 2 Robert. 284.

Sir JOHN DODSON.—The universal legatee named in the codicil having consented to the probate of the will alone by reason of the deceased having been non compos at the time the codicil was made, and such being the fact from the affidavits, I have no hesitation in granting the motion. There is in fact no one who will propound the codicil, that is, adopt it as a valid instrument.

SITTINGS AT WESTMINSTER AFTER HILARY TERM.

HARMAN v. JOHNSON.

Attorney—Partners—Liability.

One partner in a firm of attorneys is not liable upon a bill of exchange or promissory note given by another in the name of the firm for money left with such partner to be placed out on mortgage, unless there has been a course of dealing between the partners of drawing and accepting bills or notes.

But such other partner is liable for the money, though paid to his partner without his knowledge, and appropriated by him.

The action was brought to recover 1775*l.* upon a promissory note given by William Henry Smith, in the name of his firm of Smith and Johnson, attorneys; and in a second count to recover the same sum as money deposited with the firm to be placed out on mortgage.

It was proved that Mrs. Harman, a widow, having money which she wished to invest, was introduced to Smith, then a partner in the firm of Smith and Johnson, for that purpose; that in May 1850 she went to the office of Smith and Johnson,—the name of the firm being over the door; that she saw Smith, the head partner; that she told him she had money which she wished to be invested on good security, and that she should prefer mortgages; that Smith said the firm would be able to do it. That he then introduced her at the Commercial Bank, where she paid in 1775*l.*, and that he appointed the 27th May for her to call again at the office, when she was to hear of the mortgages. That on May 27th she went and again saw Smith, when Smith told her he had two mortgages, one for 1000*l.* the other for 570*l.*, with five per cent. interest; that she, at Smith's request, then gave him two cheques on the Commercial Bank for those sums; that Smith said the mortgages would be ready shortly, and gave her, until completion, an acknowledgment that he had received 1570*l.* to place out on mortgage, with an undertaking that it should bear interest from that time; that Smith afterwards invited her to stay with his family in Sussex, and that while she was there he said the firm had an opportunity of investing 200*l.* more on good security; that he handed her a cheque, which she signed; that on July 1st she went to the office to inquire about the mortgages; that Smith said he had an opportunity of investing another 100*l.*, handing her a cheque, which she signed, Smith saying the mortgage would be ready Aug. 10; that she went to the office on that day, when Smith said that there had been further delay, but that she need not be uncomfortable, as the money was in the firm and carrying interest; that he then handed her the note in question signed "Smith and Johnson," saying that he would give her an acknowledgment in the name of the firm; that she then said she would greatly prefer a mortgage; that Smith said the note was just as good as a mortgage. That she went again to the office in October, to inquire about the mortgages; that Smith said, nothing had been done, but that the money was equally safe in the firm; that she called repeatedly afterwards, seeing sometimes Smith, and sometimes Robinson, then a clerk, now a partner with Johnson; that she received money, as interest, from Smith, from Robinson, and from Ward, another clerk, in sums of 10*l.*, amounting to 160*l.* from Dec. 1850 to the latter part of 1851, but that during that time she from time to time inquired for the mortgages; that in Dec. 1851, she saw Johnson, the defendant, and his son, at the office; that Smith went abroad in 1851, and never returned; that Johnson the defendant was abroad in 1850.

Macaulay, Q. C. applied for a nonsuit on the ground that there was no evidence of authority given by the defendant to Smith to give the promissory note; nor any proof of such a mode of dealing as would confer authority; and as to the second count, that there was no evidence of any interference by the defendant, and this was not a part of the legitimate business of attorneys.

LORD CAMPBELL, C. J.—I am of opinion that there is abundant evidence to support the second count; but I shall tell the jury that there is no evidence upon which they can find for the plaintiff upon the first count.

LORD CAMPBELL, C. J., in summing up the case to the jury, said: It may be very hard for Mr. Johnson to be liable for the acts of Mr. Smith; but he entered into partnership with him, and, though the defendant may have been enjoying himself at Naples, he is certainly liable for every act done by Smith within the scope of their business. There is no evidence upon which you can properly find a verdict for the plaintiff as to the promissory note. The evidence fails to show that there has been any course of dealing between Smith and Johnson as to drawing and accepting notes or bills. But upon the second count, which charges that the money was given to Smith and Johnson for the purpose of being invested by them on mortgage, there is abundant evidence. If you believe it, and draw the inference that the money received was deposited with Smith and Johnson for the purpose of being laid out on mortgage, the plaintiff is entitled to your verdict. There was formerly a distinct profession of scriveners; one was the father of Milton, the poet: the last was Jack Eddis, mentioned by Johnson; but the race is now extinct,—and placing out money on mortgages or otherwise usually now forms part of the business of an attorney.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Hugh Hill, Q. C. and Bovill, for the plaintiff.
Macaulay, Q. C. and Phipson, for the defendant.

Election Committees.

Reported by W. MARSHALL, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

CLITHEROE, 1853.

Saturday, Feb. 19, et seq.

(Chairman—MILNE GASKELL, Esq.)

This petition, presented by three electors, alleged that corruption, bribery, and treating had been practised at the election by the sitting member and his agents; that his return had been procured thereby; and that his election was void.

Previous to the proceedings the committee agreed upon the usual resolutions; amongst which were the following:—

1. "That counsel be not allowed to go into matters not referred to in their opening statement, without a special application to the committee to do so."

3. "That the committee do not expect the counsel for the petitioners to state the facts respecting the individual cases of bribery which he intends to bring forward, merely with a view to invalidate the particular votes; but they do expect that, with respect to cases of bribery which it is intended to bring home to the sitting member or his agent, the counsel will now state the names of the electors bribed, and those of the persons who actually gave the bribes."

4. "The committee, however, reserve to themselves a power, on the special application of counsel, to proceed with any case which tends to inculpate any principal or agent, the knowledge of which case has been brought out before the committee in the progress of the investigation, with the circumstances of which the parties could not be reasonably supposed to have been previously cognisant."

Wrangham, Serjt. (with whom F. James, Q. C. and T. Webster) opened a general case of bribery and treating. He specified one case of bribery, in which an elector named Taylor was the person bribed, and he particularised four persons as having participated in administering the bribe; and he handed in, in compliance with the third resolution, a list containing the names of the electors who it was alleged had been bribed, and of the persons who had given the bribes. In this list about forty persons were specified as having been bribed, and opposite each of such names were placed the names of several, in some cases of as many as ten, persons who were alleged to have given the bribe; and after such last-mentioned names, the words "or some or one of them" were in each case written.

Practice—List of voters bribed, and by whom.

Where the names of several persons are mentioned in the list as having given a bribe, the words "or some or one of them" will not be allowed.

A list specifying the persons as having bribed an elector, held unobjectionable.

Piggott (with whom Kinglake, Serjt. and Power), for the sitting member, submitted that the petitioners must confine their proof of bribery to the single case which had been opened. The list does not comply with the third resolution, the object of which is, that the sitting member should be supplied with specific information of the precise cases which it is intended to bring against him, in order that he may be prepared to rebut them. This list altogether fails in complying with that requirement, and should be sent back to be amended. That was the course which was pursued in the Derby case, Pow. Rod. & Dew. 100.

Wrangham, Serjt. contrà.—The list is unobjectionable. The petitioner is not bound to furnish only the name of the person who manually gave the bribe. An act of bribery is frequently a complicated transaction. It may be a corrupt agreement, and many persons may be concerned besides the individual who actually hands over the money. It is not easy to tell the hands through which the bribe may have passed in its transition to the pocket of the voter, and several may be engaged as principals. It would therefore be unreasonable to confine the statement to one name. The case mentioned in the opening illustrates the complicated nature of the transactions at this election, and it was avowedly given as a specimen. That was not done in the Derby case. In the Canterbury case 1853 (then going on), the committee held that a statement of three names, as those of the persons who had bribed by means of coloured tickets, was sufficient. The rule was never intended to be applied strictly.

Kinglake, Serjt. in reply.—The list is merely a substitute for the statement in the opening speech; it should therefore be no less explicit. In the Canterbury case, which has been referred to, the mode of bribery was specified. Where several persons have joined in bribing, their names may be specified, but that is not done here; the words "or some or one of them" are appended, and the petitioners will seek to prove an act of bribery by any one of the ten persons. They may under these words prove a joint, a several, or an individual case of bribery. The list complies neither with the letter nor the spirit of the resolution.

THE CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are of opinion that the words "or some or one of them" are not admissible; but they are not inclined to fetter the discretion of the petitioners with regard to the statement of the number of persons alleged to have given the bribe.

A witness is not entitled to demand his necessary expenses before being sworn.

A witness called for the petitioners stated that he had not been reimbursed the expenses he had been put to in coming to give his evidence; and refused to be sworn until they were paid.

Piggott, for the sitting member.—The witness is entitled to refuse to be sworn. It was laid down in the Southampton case, Barr. & Aust. 379, "that the necessary expenses to enable a witness to appear before the committee shall be paid before he gives his testimony; but with regard to all other expenses, the witness must apply to the Speaker under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 58, s. 89." That resolution was acted upon in the Lyme Regis case, Barr. & Aust. 460; and it is generally consonant with the practice in all judicial tribunals.

Webster, contrà.—The witness is here under the order of the House, and must consent to be examined if required.

THE CHAIRMAN.—The witness must be sworn.

The statement of an agent of the sitting member to a voter whom he bribed, that the votes of many depended upon his, is receivable in evidence.

A witness named Taylor, on examination, said that he had received 30*l.* from one Whalley to vote for the sitting member. In answer to a question he further said, that Whalley told him the votes of many depended upon his.

Kinglake, Serjt.—This conversation is not admissible in evidence. The statement of Whalley has no reference to the particular case of bribery at present under consideration. It refers to the votes of other parties, and those parties whose names, for aught that appears, may not be included in the list.

James, Q.C., contrà.—The question is admissible. It is this,—did Whalley, while bargaining for the witness's vote, say something about other votes; and the object of the inquiry is to learn what he reckoned to be the value of the vote which he bargained for. It is part of one transaction. Whalley, in effect, says, "Your vote is worth 30*l.*, because others depend upon it."

THE CHAIRMAN.—The answer may be received in evidence.

LANCASTER, 1853.

Saturday, Feb. 19, et seq.

(Chairman—EDWARD DIVETT, Esq.)

Hearsay evidence.

What an elector, whose vote is impeached on the ground of bribery, said to a third person, with reference to what candidate he intended to vote for, is not receivable in evidence.

This was a petition against the sitting Member for the borough of Lancaster, charging him with bribery and corruption.

A witness was asked by the counsel for the petitioner, whether he had inquired of two electors, who had polled for the sitting member, and whose votes were impeached on the ground of bribery, for whom they were going to vote? To this question an affirmative answer was returned. He then proposed to ask what the voters replied to the inquiry of the witness. This question was objected to by the counsel on the other side, and the Committee decided that it could not be put.

Wrangham, Serjt. and Mereweather, for the petitioners.

Monk and Wheeler, contrà.

GUILDFORD, 1853.

(Reported by JAMES PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.)

Saturday, March 5, et seq.

(Chairman—LORD SEYMOUR.)

Practice—List of persons bribed, and by whom.

The counsel for petitioner, after opening one or two cases of bribery, handed a list to the opposite counsel of all the persons alleged to be bribed, and by whom. In some cases as many as six persons were named as having bribed one voter:

Held, this was an evasion of the usual preliminary resolution, and time (one day) was given to amend the list, by striking out all names except of those who, petitioners were prepared to prove, had actually administered the bribe in question.

This point was similar to that reported supra, at Clitheroe, 1853. After the counsel for the petitioners, in a petition alleging bribery and treating, had opened a few individual cases of bribery, he, according to the usual practice, handed to the opposite counsel a list of all those voters whom the petitioners alleged to have been bribed, and of the persons who bribed each respectively. The numbers of persons bribing were therein set forth as varying from two up to six.

E. James, Q. C. (with whom Power) for the sitting member, objected to this list on the ground of vagueness, and as being an evasion of the usual preliminary resolution agreed to by all committees. The petitioners ought to be called upon to state the person or persons who actually bribed the voter. Unless this is done, we have really no sufficient information given us, according to the spirit of the third resolution: (see Clitheroe case, supra.) The list is drawn up obviously as a fishing list, with a view to fix one or other of the six individuals by the aid of information extracted in the course of the examination of the witnesses.

Farrer (with whom Kinglake, Serjt., and R. Clarke, contrà. The list is sufficient. It is impossible to state exactly the one individual who may have actually administered the bribe. If there are several persons in a room, they may all in some degree contribute, at one stage or another of the transaction, to the common purpose in view, and yet it would be difficult to say which of them actually gave the bribe. It is therefore competent in such a case to put down all the names of the persons who seemed to have taken part in the transaction at different stages. [The COMMITTEE.—Then do you mean to say that, in all the cases in the list, where there are several names given as those of the persons bribing, those persons were all sitting in a room, and took part in the bribery?] No; we are not prepared to say that. Still, it would practically defeat the end of such inquiries as the present, if we were called upon to single out one of these persons as the one we are prepared to prove guilty of the act of bribery.

Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are of opinion that the list is not sufficient, and that it must be amended, for which time will be given till Monday morning (March 7); in the meantime counsel for the petitioners must go on with those cases in which they have set forth the name of one or two individuals as the persons bribing, and which cases they are prepared to prove in reference to those individuals.

[It will be seen from the above case, taken along with the Clitheroe case, supra, that the committees have laid down no rule on the subject. As a further illustration of variety of practice, it may be stated that, in the Wigton case, 1853 (opened March 9), a similar objection was raised, that the list was insufficient, inasmuch as there were seven or eight names set forth of those alleged to have bribed one voter: but the committee overruled the objection, and did not order any amendment.]

BERKSHIRE SPRING ASSIZES.
Reading, March 2.
(Before WILLIAMS, J.)

BUCKMASTER v. MERRIJOHN.

Secondary evidence—Notice to produce documents relating to the cause—Staying execution—Practice under the Common Law Procedure Act.

In a declaration in debt, the defendant, after having previously pleaded a set-off and payment, pleaded a plea puis darrein continuance of an agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, whereby the set-off was admitted, and all accounts settled between the parties. To this plea the plaintiff replied that the agreement was obtained by fraud and covin; on which issue was joined:

Quære, whether the contents of an account-book containing the items of the defendant's set-off, were relevant to the issue so as to enable the plaintiff to give secondary evidence after notice to produce all books, &c. in anywise relating to, touching, or concerning the matters in question in the cause.

Where there appears to be a bonâ fide intention to dispute a verdict at the assizes, and to move to set it aside, the judge will stay the execution on bringing the debt or damages into court.

Declaration, June 22, 1852, in debt for money had and received, money lent, money paid, and on an account stated.

Pleas, in the first instance, set-off and payment. After issue joined on those pleas, and on the eve of trial, the defendant pleaded a plea puis darrein continuance. The plea set out an agreement, bearing date July 12, 1852, between the plaintiff and the defendant, reciting that the plaintiff had commenced the action against the defendant to recover the sum of 290*l.* or thereabouts, to which action the defendant had pleaded a plea of set-off to a large amount, and reciting that the plaintiff admitted the set-off so pleaded as aforesaid, as well as other sums to be due to the defendant for money expended by him in and about the erection of a cottage for the plaintiff, and in respect of other transactions; and that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff upon another contract in 158*l.* 1*s.*; and then alleging that the defendant had agreed to pay, and the plaintiff to receive, that sum by certain specified instalments, the first of which, amounting to 25*l.*, the defendant had agreed to pay down, and had paid in pursuance thereof.

To this plea the plaintiff replied that the agreement was obtained by the fraud and covin of the defendant, and issue was joined thereon.

To prove that the agreement was fraudulently obtained, the plaintiff and other witnesses were called to shew that he had signed the agreement, believing that it had been approved of by his own attorney, and had been misled by other false representations of facts.

On the part of the defendant, it was sworn that, previously to the agreement being drawn up, the claims were fully investigated.

Upon cross-examination, the defendant's attorney stated that the accounts on each side were entered in a book, and Whateley, Q. C., was about to question the witness with reference to some of the items forming the alleged set-off, when

Allen, Serjt. objected to questions being asked as to the contents of the book.

Whateley submitted that he was entitled to give secondary evidence under a notice to produce given by the plaintiff to the defendant. The notice was to produce the agreement of the 12th July 1852; an original subpœna issued in the cause; the original will of the plaintiff; a book of account of alleged claims of the defendant against the plaintiff, in which book the defendant, on or about the 14th April 1852, made a memorandum to the effect that all claims of the defendant upon the plaintiff had been paid or satisfied; also the pass-book between the defendant and his bankers since the 1st of January 1851; "also all other books, papers, writings and documents in your custody, possession, or power, in any wise relating to, touching, or concerning the matters in question in this cause." The notice was dated the 25th Feb. 1853.

Allen, Serjt. contrà.—This notice did not include the book in question. It was not particularly described, and it could not be said to be within the general words at the end of the notice, for it did not relate to the matters in question in the cause. The only issue, as the cause now stood, was that of fraud or no fraud, and any question as to particular items of account was not relevant to that issue. The notice therefore did not point to this book.

WILLIAMS, J. said it was a very nice point whether the question was relevant to the issue. The cases bearing on it run so very fine, that he had a difficulty in deciding; but according to his usual practice he should admit the evidence, and give the defendant leave to move upon it.

Whateley said if his Lordship had any doubt on the point he would not press it.

WILLIAMS, J. said he had great doubt, and accordingly the questions were withdrawn.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

Allen, Serjt. applied to the judge to stay the execution until the fifth day of Easter Term, to give the defendant an opportunity of moving for a new trial on a question which arose during the trial, as to the admissibility of a document tendered in evidence on the part of the plaintiff, and which point was ruled against the defendant.

WILLIAMS, J. said the question was whether before the Common Law Procedure Act, he should have granted speedy execution? As this application was one likely to be made frequently, and no rule had been yet laid down with reference to the trial of cases at the assizes, he would consult Talfourd, J. and endeavour to arrive at some general rule.

On the following morning WILLIAMS, J. said he had conferred with Talfourd, J. and they had come to the determination to stay execution on the debt or damages brought into court, whenever there was apparently a bonâ fide intention to dispute the verdict and take ulterior proceedings. Execution would be therefore stayed in the above case on the amount of damages being brought into court.

Whateley, Q. C. and Bros, for the plaintiff.
Allen, Serjt. and Skinner, for the defendant.

Evidence.

The rule excluding the evidence of the wife in actions by or against the husband does not prevent the widow of a testator giving evidence, in an action against his executor, of conversations between the testator and the plaintiff, a third party.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, as executrix of one Thomas Davies, for the balance of an account for work and labour, and materials and money lent. The defendant pleaded the general issue, payment, and the Statute of Limitations. The plaintiff was the nephew of Thomas Davies, and had lived with his uncle for many years, assisting in the management of his farm, and receiving board and lodging in the uncle's house. There were various money transactions between them which had never been balanced; but the plaintiff claimed remuneration for his services; and if that claim was correct, there would be a balance due to him, not covered by the Statute of Limitations, of 46*l.* To prove that the plaintiff was entitled to such remuneration, the plaintiff deposed to the performance of the services, and also an express verbal agreement made between himself and the testator for remuneration. To confirm the plaintiff's evidence on this point the widow of the testator was called, who distinctly deposed to conversations between the testator and the plaintiff in her presence, in which conversations the testator promised the plaintiff to pay him for his services at a specified rate.

Gifford, for the defendant, objected that the evidence of the widow of the testator was inadmissible, and referred to O'Connor v. Marjoribanks, 4 M. & Gr. 435, and Barlow v. Allen, 21 L. J. 155, Ex.

Grove and Dolling, for the plaintiff, contrà, argued that the case of Barlow v. Allen, only decided that the evidence of the wife during her husband's lifetime was inadmissible, the object of the exclusion being to secure domestic happiness, which could not be endangered by the wife deposing, after her husband's death, to conversations between him and a third party.

WIGHTMAN, J. said, he was of opinion that neither of the cases cited excluded the evidence of a widow under the circumstances disclosed in this case, and he was of opinion that the widow was a competent witness. Verdict for the plaintiff, damages, 46l.

REG. v. JAMES CREAGH.

Mandamus—Duty of magistrate—Signing conviction.

A. being summoned under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 43 (Pound-keepers' Act), for a penalty under that Act, the magistrates at petty sessions adjourned for a fortnight, instead of a month as usual. At the adjourned sessions, A., having been convicted in his absence, came into court and stated that the arrangement for an adjournment for a fortnight was not known to him, and protested against the conviction. One of the two magistrates who had presided refused to sign the conviction, which had been entered on the 12th Dec. 1850, although several times applied to for that purpose by the prosecutor. The court refused to issue a mandamus directing the magistrate to sign the conviction, under the above circumstances, and, a conditional order having been obtained on the part of the prosecutor, allowed the cause shown with costs.

In this case E. Lawless, under the following circumstances, obtained a conditional order for a mandamus to issue to be directed to James Creagh, Esq., Justice of the peace for the county of Clare, requiring him to sign a conviction for a penalty under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 43 (the Pound-keepers' Act). The first section of that Act imposes a penalty of 10*l.* on any pound keeper who has not renewed his security for the due execution of his office. The 11th section provides for the manner in which the penalty is to be recovered, viz., before two justices of the peace at petty sessions. A pound-keeper, William Halpin, had neglected to renew his security, and a summons had been served on him by another pound-keeper of the name of Hynes; and, the case having been gone into on the 29th Nov. 1850, before two of the magistrates at petty sessions, Messrs. Franks and Creagh, Halpin was convicted of the offence, and the penalty prescribed by the Act, 10*l.*, was imposed on him. The prosecutor afterwards stated that the warrant to levy and the conviction were properly made out, and that Mr. Franks had signed the conviction, but that Mr. Creagh refused to do so in Sept. 1851, when applied to for that purpose; and charged that Mr. Creagh was influenced by motives of favouritism to Halpin, and that he therefore refused to sign the conviction, and that consequently the prosecutor was unable to levy the 10*l.* to which he was entitled under the 13th section of the Act.

Brereton, Q. C. now showed cause.—From the affidavits which have been filed on our side, it appears that there was an adjournment of the petty sessions held on the 29th Nov. 1850, to the twelfth of the following month, December; that on the latter day the justices proceeded with Halpin's case, and that a conviction was then entered against him; that afterwards, before the rising of the court, Halpin came into the Court-house and complained of the case having been disposed of in his absence, and that he thought the court had adjourned for a month and not a fortnight as they had done, and that the arrangement to adjourn the sessions on the first day for a fortnight, and not as usual for a month, was not made in his presence. The conviction was sought for a trifling breach, namely, two days having elapsed in the new year without Halpin having entered into the recognisance directed by the Act. The words "Irish Currency" were not in the conviction or in the book of the sessions clerk; and when the conviction was brought to Mr. Franks for his signature, he put in these words with his initials after them. [LEFROY, C. J.—Did the magistrate apprise the prosecutor of those objections to the conviction?] He did, and in his answers to the Lord-Lieutenant and the Lord Chancellor, to whom complaints were made of him, he set forth these objections in full, and that he considered it was not a wilful infringement of the Act, and that it was not fair to Halpin to proceed in his absence.

MOORE, J.—I entertain a doubt whether this conviction as it stands is legal. It directs the bailiff to levy 10*l.* Irish, leaving it to him to ascertain what the correct sum in the present currency is.

LEFROY, C. J.—I confess it appears to me that Hynes seeks to take advantage of an irregularity; he induces the magistrates to prosecute the case and convict in Halpin's absence; he then turns round and insists on their putting in force this irregular conviction, and seeks to compel them to carry out the proceeding.

E. Lawless, in support of the rule.—It does not appear that Halpin made any affidavit that he did not know of the adjournment to the 12th Dec. The court should not go behind the conviction; and Mr. Creagh, having been one of the magistrates who convicted Halpin, should not be heard here saying the conviction was bad. The charge we make of favouritism is not contradicted. Mr. Creagh merely says that he is not actuated by any unfair or improper motive in refusing to sign this conviction. We charge, and it is not denied, that at one time Mr. Creagh had told the prosecutor that he had signed the conviction; and again, when refusing, had not given any reason for his refusal. Mr. Creagh, if he left himself open to an action by signing this conviction, might be excused from doing so; but the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 16, s. 1, provides that magistrates acting within their jurisdiction shall not be liable to an action for anything so done by them, unless it shall be alleged to have been maliciously and without probable cause. [CRAMPTON, J.—If the court should make this order for you, would there be anything to prevent Halpin from applying to quash the conviction?] He neglected to appeal, and he is therefore estopped by that. [LEFROY, C. J.—Why should he be put to the expense of an appeal when the conviction was improper?] It will be for us to consider whether we shall act on our conviction or not; we have a right to have this conviction signed by Mr. Creagh, who acts as a partner all through this matter.

LEFROY, C. J.—Allow the cause shewn, with costs.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Reported by C. H. KEENE, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

Jan. 18, 27, and Feb. 8.

(Before LORD CRANWORTH, L. C. and the LORDS JUSTICES.)

In THE DOVER AND DEAL RAILWAY COMPANY, ex parte MOWATT and ex parte ELLIOTT.

Winding-up Acts—Liability—Parties primarily and secondarily liable—Gay's case considered.

The directors of a railway company, on the faith of a guarantee contained in a circular letter, induced shareholders to sign the subscribers' agreement for a large number of shares. The guarantee could not be enforced:

Held, that the directors by whose authority the letter was sent were primarily liable as between themselves and the shareholders who so signed the deed; and an order made by the Master and confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor for a call rateably on all the shareholders was discharged.

Where one class is primarily and another secondarily liable, the Court will not sanction a call on the latter unless it clearly appear that a call on the former would be fruitless.

Where a man has two debtors, of whom as between themselves one is bound to indemnify the other, the creditor may proceed against both or either, and leave them to settle the matter between themselves.

This was a motion by way of appeal from an order of Kindersley, V. C. refusing to discharge an order of Master Brougham, directing a call to be made on the contributories of a company whose affairs were being wound-up under the provisions of the Winding-up Acts.

The facts were briefly these. An association for the purpose of forming a company was established in the year 1845, and provisionally registered under the Joint Stock Registration Act for the making of a railway from Dover to Deal. A subscribers' agreement and a Parliamentary contract were prepared; and a committee of management and a board of directors chosen. In the beginning of the year 1846 shares were allotted by the company to the public. A Mr. Mowatt and Dr. Elliott signed the deed in respect of 200 shares which had been allotted to each of them. At the time of the allotment an agreement had been come to by the directors, or a negociation had been entered into by them with the South-Eastern Railway Company, the object of which was to obtain from them an indemnity or guarantee against all the expenses incurred by this company if it did not succeed in its application to Parliament for its Bill; and if it did so succeed, then the line was to be leased on certain terms to the South-Eastern Railway Company, or the stock of the projected company converted into South-Eastern Railway stock.

The directors subsequently published an advertisement in the daily newspapers; and a copy of that advertisement, in the form of a circular letter (which is set out in the Lord Chancellor's judgment), was sent by the secretary, by the direction of the directors, to each allottee of shares with the letter of allotment. One of these letters was sent to Mr. Mowatt, and another to Dr. Elliott, and, as appeared by the evidence of the secretary, a copy was intended to be sent to all the allottees of shares.

The directors proceeded with the scheme; but, the deed not having been signed by such a number of shareholders as would enable them to go to Parliament, they, by their solicitors, prevailed upon Mr. Mowatt to again subscribe the deed for 1575 additional shares, upon the representation of the solicitors that he could incur no responsibility, inasmuch as the directors had guaranteed the return of the entire deposit if the Act of Parliament were not obtained; and if the Act of Parliament were obtained, then he would get stock in the South-Eastern Railway Company which would be a beneficial investment. On the faith of their representation Mr. Mowatt executed the subscribers' deed and the Parliamentary contract in respect of 1575 shares, and paid the deposit.

The directors then proceeded with their application to Parliament, but did not obtain their bill. Application was then made to the South-Eastern Railway Company for the performance of their guarantee and indemnity by paying to the directors of this company the expenses which they had incurred. Pending the negociations consequent upon that application, the directors of this company returned 1*l.* to the shareholders out of the two guineas, the amount of the deposit paid. An order was afterwards obtained to wind up this company under the provisions of the Winding-up Acts. The Master proceeded to settle the list of contributories, and placed upon that list the names of Mr. Mowatt and Dr. Elliott as contributories, they having executed the subscribers' agreement and the Parliamentary contract.

The directors of the South-Eastern Railway Company having refused to perform their guarantee, the directors of this company brought an action against them; and on the order for winding-up being obtained, the official manager, as representing the company, was substituted for the plaintiff. That action proceeded, and a verdict was obtained by the plaintiff, which was afterwards set aside by the court. Some formal proceeding was taken, by which the plaintiff failed to recover any money from the South-Eastern Railway Company. Having failed to recover that money, the official manager applied to the Master for an order for a call, first for the purpose of paying the debts of the company, of which none were proved before the Master or allowed, except a sum of 180*l.* The costs of the action and of the proceedings resulting from it were the main object for which the call was made. The Master ordered a call of 5*s.* per share, which, with the outstanding balance of the deposit, virtually amounted to a call of 1*l.* 7*s.*

The question was whether the call ought to have been so made or not.

The present appellants moved before Kindersley, V.C., to discharge the order. This his Honour refused, and the present was an appeal from that decision.

Roxburgh (in the absence of Daniel and Willes of the Common Law Bar) submitted that he was entitled to use the same arguments in respect of the call as would apply to the question whether the appellants were or not contributories to the company. The ground upon which the Master proceeded to make the call was this—that, inasmuch as the proceedings in the action against the South-Eastern Railway Company had been for the benefit of the subscribers to this association, it was just that they should pay a rateable proportion of the expenses of that proceeding. He submitted that it was not for their benefit; that the directors were the persons to be benefited by that trial; they had undertaken with the public that they would, if they did not get their bill passed, return the deposits untouched. If they made that guarantee on the faith of the South-Eastern Railway Company, they, and not the subscribers to the deed, were interested in getting that question disposed of. The subscribers were not made aware of the benefits which they would receive from the agreement, though they had heard and been informed that there were some. This case differed altogether from Gay's case. There a call for costs was supported upon the ground that the official manager sought to recover back a sum of money which had been misapplied by the directors, in which sum of money all the contributories were directly interested: and there the parties personally liable were insolvent, and but for that circumstance the order for the call would not have been upheld. Here the directors were bound to give back the money without the slightest deduction whatever. The shareholders had no interest whatever in the action which the directors brought against the South-Eastern Company on their indemnity. The liability or non-liability was a question between the directors of this and of the South-Eastern Railway Company. The directors of this company were primarily liable for the payment of those costs for which the call was made. They were solvent parties; and until their insolvency had been proved it was premature to call upon parties who were only secondarily liable to contribute.

Glasse and Selwyn appeared for the official manager.

The following cases were referred to:—Ex parte Gay, 18 L. T. Rep. 282; Hulton v. Bright, 19 L. T. Rep. 289, 249; Ex parte Markwell, 19 L. T. JUDGMENT.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—But for the very high authorities that there have been pronounced in favour of the present decision—first that of the Master, and then that of V. C. Kindersley,—we should, probably, have thought it prudent to have heard the matter fully out, and have taken time to consider the subject; but, from the opportunities which we have had during the time this case has been before us of reflecting on its merits, we do not think any further consideration would be of any use. From the cursory view that I have been able to take of the case before V. C. Kindersley, I confess a doubt has crossed my mind whether the precise point was ever very distinctly brought before the mind of that very learned and accurate judge. However, I need not speculate upon that, because I believe we are unanimous in opinion that the case is nearly free from any doubt or difficulty. This company being unable to get a sufficient number of people to take shares, by reason of its being thought that a railway from Dover to Deal was not likely to answer, and in order to induce people to come in more readily and take shares, they entered into an arrangement—whether they had authority or not seems utterly immaterial—with the directors or the proper functionaries of the South-Eastern Railway Company, by which they thought they would be put on a good footing; and that they might make certain sacrifices in inducing others to take shares in this company, by reason of advantages they would themselves derive from the South-Eastern Railway Company, and with that view, on 24th Jan. 1846, the persons who were then exercising the functions of directors of this company—the Right Honourable Lord Albert Conyngham, Henry Beauclerk, Esq. and the Honourable H. M. Gore, passed the particular resolution in pursuance of which the letter to which I shall presently allude was sent. The solicitors having reported the result of their negociations with the South-Eastern Railway Company, and having read the letter which had been settled and approved of by them which was proposed to be addressed to each applicant for shares; it was resolved that the letter be adopted and sent accordingly." That letter, which was meant to be a circular to every one whom they thought might be likely to take shares, was in these words: "14th Jan. 1846. Sir—Dover and Deal Railway—In forwarding you the accompanying letter of allotment, the directors desire to explain that they have delayed issuing any shares until the standing orders of both Houses of Parliament have been complied with, and certain arrangements entered into with the South-Eastern Railway Company had been brought to a conclusion. The directors have now the greatest satisfaction in stating that arrangements with the South-Eastern Railway Company have been concluded: and they are fully justified in asserting that the company will be placed in such a position as to ensure its proprietory against loss, and in the event of the passing of the Bill, shares in the South-Eastern Railway Company will be allotted to the proprietors in lieu of stock in this company. The directors in making this announcement feel that the affairs of the company as now settled are on such a basis as to secure important advantages to its proprietors, and to warrant the directors in proceeding to Parliament with the undertaking with every expectation of success. In the event of the Act not being obtained, the directors undertake to return the whole of the deposits without deduction." The letter was written "by order," and signed "S. P. Hook, G. T. Thompson, joint solicitors." Now, under any construction, that letter amounts to this—that the directors undertake to indemnify the parties against all loss from taking shares, provided they do not obtain an Act of Parliament. That took place on Jan. 24, and it is in evidence uncontradicted, that on the 26th of the same month that announcement appeared in the form of an advertisement in the newspapers. There was an authority from the directors to the solicitors to send and circulate the letter, in order to obtain the shares. It appears that Mr. Hook, one of the solicitors, being, I suppose, a friend of Dr. Elliott, and thinking that this was, or likely to be, a very profitable thing, sent him very early a copy of it—one of those circulars—and announced to him what the advantages would be, pointing out of course that it was a very great advantage, because the parties taking shares were taking the chance of gain, with an indemnity, or what necessarily amounted to an indemnity, against loss,—against loss at least if the Act of Parliament were not obtained. And then he adds: "I shall have much pleasure in allotting you 100 shares, and some friends of yours the same number, each to a limited extent; but as our deed must be executed in the course of the ensuing week, I should like to receive your list by Monday." That was exactly in conformity with the directions which had been given by the resolution of the meeting. In endeavouring to circulate that intelligence as effectually as possible, the solicitor sends the letter to Dr. Elliott, and, in truth, substantially desires him to circulate it amongst others. That this letter had never been sent to Mr. Mowatt would be a point that it would be impossible seriously to argue. The object was that that intelligence should be circulated among persons who were likely to purchase shares; and it is sent with that express object to Dr. Elliott, in order that he might shew it, the expression is, "to his friends." Now Mr. Mowatt being one of his friends, it was shown to him on the 26th, and, being called upon to act immediately, he instantly goes, and, as he states, not only with the semblance of truth, but demonstrably what must be the truth, fresh from the reading of that letter, and subscribes for a larger number of shares than by the terms of the letter he is allowed; for the letter mentions "100 shares," or "shares to a limited extent," and not an unlimited number. On the faith of that letter he executed the deed on the 29th Jan. and Dr. Elliott executed it on the 2nd Feb. The company were still unable to dispose of their shares: and then a day afterwards, on the 4th Feb., Mr. Hook, the solicitor, evidently acting on the authority given to him, and discharging the duty which that authority imposed upon him, of endeavouring to dispose of shares on the footing of that letter, sees Mr. Mowatt, has a conversation with him, and, without perhaps urging, rather pressed him to take more shares. To this Mr. Mowatt says: "You must write me a letter; I must have a letter from the committee itself, saying these are the terms upon which I am to take the shares." Mr. Hook rather remonstrates against that; he says: "I do not think the committee is sitting; but it does not signify." Nor did it. The committee had authorised him to send a printed letter to those persons; he goes back, and, finding the committee had broken up and was no longer sitting, he sends a letter to Mr. Mowatt urging him to take the shares, and inclosing him a printed copy of the letter. Upon the faith of that Mr. Mowatt signs the deed, and in both cases pays his deposit according to the terms of the instrument. In what relation did Mr. Mowatt, when he executed that deed, stand as between himself and those who had given him that which I call a guarantee? It is useless to speculate what would be his obligation as to other persons; whether, under any possible circumstances, he would be liable to creditors, or how he would be liable to other parties. The question here is—the whole body being brought before the court, including those who had agreed to indemnify Mr. Mowatt, and those who had not,—it being needful to raise money for the purposes of what I may call the common concern, who are the parties primarily liable to pay that demand? Can there be the least doubt, as between Mr. Mowatt and Lord Albert Conyngham and the two other gentlemen who caused the letter to be sent to him, on the faith of which he took the shares and signed the deed, that, even if Mr. Mowatt is liable to other of the contributories, they are liable to indemnify him? It is impossible to reason upon it. The statement of the proposition makes it as clear as any reasoning could. The persons primarily liable are those who induced Mr. Mowatt to subscribe the deed, upon the assurance that, if he did so, he should be indemnified. Some argument was pressed that he signed the deed after he had entered into the agreement. When there is an agreement, and, in order to carry it into effect, the party executes the deed, the deed, no doubt, is that which is primâ facie to be taken as speaking the intention of the parties; but that was never what was meant here. It never was meant that the deed should be an embodiment of the agreement; on the contrary, the agreement, the guarantee, was something entirely collateral to the deed. "If you will execute the deed, then we will indemnify you." He did execute the deed, and now they say, "We are not the persons to indemnify you." I think they entirely fail in that argument. With respect to Gay's case, which it is alleged is the authority on which they have been acting, the distinction is manifest. In Gay's case there was, in the first place, no express agreement to indemnify; but, perhaps, there was something that amounted to the same thing. The directors there had deposited with them, by the great body of the shareholders, sums of money to be applied to the purposes of the inchoate concern. That fund had not been exhausted, or, if properly applied, would not have been exhausted. Then the affair was wound-up; and it was said, and truly said, "The first fund applicable to the payment of these outstanding demands, applicable to the payment of the winding-up, including the costs, is the fund made by the contributories, placed in the hands of the managing directors." It would have been hard to have called upon those who were not liable till that fund had been exhausted. So far from Gay's case having decided the contrary of that, the court, consisting of Lord Justice Knight Bruce and myself, felt and admitted the force of that reasoning; but in the course of the argument it was said that, although we were called upon to exercise a sort of administrative duty, we must take some practical step for getting back the money; it was able to make a call first on seven persons, most of whom have gone abroad, and all of them totally insolvent. There was no use in going through that ceremony,—and, feeling that, we directed an affidavit to be made on the subject. That affidavit was made, and satisfied us that there was no reasonable chance of recovering anything from any of the persons primarily liable. The directors had, I do not say fraudulently, but imprudently, wasted the whole of the fund, and there was no chance of recovering it. Now the money was to be raised: and all the contributories were liable; the proportions in which they were liable were all ascertained. If it should turn out that any of those primarily liable are solvent, there would be a remedy against them. Now in this case the fund must be raised—nobody suggests insolvency on the part of Lord Albert Conyngham, now Lord Londesborough, or on the part of the two other gentlemen. They are the persons primarily liable, and therefore that decision in Gay's case seems to me to have no practical application to this. It appears to me the call, as far as Mr. Mowatt and Dr. Elliott are concerned, must be discharged, and the proper directions given for that purpose.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—I assume in favour of the respondents, that the costs and expenses incurred by the official manager, of which the main object of the call is to procure payment to him, were properly incurred, and that they ought to be repaid to him, and must be so. But the question is, how they are to be repaid. I assume also in favour of the respondents, but without deciding, that in a certain order and in a certain sense the appellants before us are liable to him for those costs and expenses. The question is, in what order and in what manner. I agree also that generally, where a man has two debtors of whom, as between themselves, one is bound to indemnify the other, the creditor may proceed against both or either, and leave them to settle the matter between themselves. This, however, is not exactly that case. It is a question under the Acts of Parliament called the Winding-up Acts, and the Master has before him the official manager and all the contributories. The contributories stand, as between themselves, in distinct classes, as some of them at least allege; one class, in the present instance, may be considered as represented by the appellants; the other class may, for the present purpose, be considered as represented by Lord Londesborough, Mr. Beauclerk, and Mr. Gore; and as between the two classes it is asserted by the appellants that the other class ought to bear everything, and to indemnify them from all the consequences of having become associated with this company or undertaking. Have they given evidence of that before the Master? In my opinion strong primâ facie evidence; and such evidence as in my judgment to make it a proper course of proceeding, fully to investigate the matter and to adjudicate between the classes as to which in that stage of the matter, the stage of a call, ought first or alone to be made liable; whether first or alone is for the present purpose immaterial. That matter does not appear to me to have received sufficient investigation. It would be premature—it would be impossible, I think, now to decide that, as between the two classes, whether the one was liable conclusively before the other. If the matter were to rest here I should have no hesitation what answer to give to the question upon the evidence before us. The course taken must be, I think, to remit the whole case to the Master, in order that he may investigate the claims of these appellants more fully than he has done, either to be discharged wholly, or not to be charged until persons of undoubted solvency have been well ascertained to be or not to be liable in preference to them as between themselves. The truth I believe to be that these appellants, rightly or erroneously, I say not which, have been so possessed with the notion that they were in no order, in no rank, in no sense, in no event liable, that the other view of the case has not been presented with the force and clearness with which otherwise it might have been presented either to the Master or to the V. C. I am of opinion that the case is not at present in such a state as that, without a probable or certain failure of justice, the call, as it is, can be acted upon against these appellants.

Lord Justice TURNER.—I agree entirely in the conclusions that have been expressed in this case. This is a call for the purpose of recovering debts which are alleged to be due from the company, and for recovering costs said to have been incurred for the benefit of the common fund belonging to the company. It is not pretended, and has not been urged, that as to creditors Mr. Mowatt is under any liability; and as the case stands as to costs, I am clear upon the evidence as it stands, that, as between Mr. Mowatt and the directors of this company, the directors are primarily liable. There are two views which strike my mind upon that point. The one is that, on the terms of the agreement which is entered into between these parties, and upon which Mr. Mowatt signed the deed, the directors agreed that if the Act of Parliament did not pass they would repay the whole amount of the deposit, which, in truth, is an agreement that they will not charge the shareholders who signed upon the faith of that letter any deduction in respect of the costs which might be incurred. The other whether, supposing Mr. Mowatt to have been sued upon a covenant contained in that deed in respect of the costs incurred by the directors, it would not be a perfectly clear case for a court of equity to restrain the proceedings in that action upon the contract entered into with Mr. Mowatt, and upon the faith of which he had signed. I think, therefore, it is perfectly clear that, as between Mr. Mowatt and the directors of this company, the directors are primarily liable in respect of these costs; I am speaking, of course upon the evidence as it stands before us at the present time. Now these calls must be made according to the Act of Parliament, according to the liabilities of the parties at law and in equity. Now it is said that there may be other parties in respect of whom Mr. Mowatt may be under some liability to contribute. I am not satisfied, upon the evidence as it stands, that there are any such parties. But, assuming that there are, still, upon the evidence as it stands, there is a primary liability of the directors. The case stands thus: there are parties primarily liable and parties secondarily liable; and the question is, in what mode the call ought to be made, in a case where there are parties primarily liable, and as to whom there is no doubt of the power of recovering calls, and the parties secondarily liable. Nothing would be more inconvenient in carrying out the provisions of the Act of Parliament than to call upon parties who are secondarily liable, to pay at a time when there are parties who are primarily liable; because the consequence of that would be, that in further working out the provisions of the Act of parliament, it would be necessary that further calls should be made for the purpose of indemnifying the parties upon whom the first call had been made, against the payments which they had been compelled to make in the place of the parties primarily liable to that first call. I think, therefore, resort ought not to be had, in working out this Act of Parliament, to parties who are secondarily liable only, unless it is clear that there is a difficulty in recovering the calls against the parties primarily liable.

THORNTON v. COURT.

Vendor and purchaser—Covenant for quiet enjoyment—Compensation for breach of, in equity.

A. purchased property which was conveyed to him in fee, with a covenant only for quiet enjoyment, by B. the vendor. Within a month A. mortgaged the property to C. to secure a sum of money and interest, but was afterwards, after an action of ejectment, evicted by D., who claimed by a title paramount to A. and B. A. defended the action without consulting B., and incurred costs thereby. A. then brought an action against B. upon his covenant; but was stopped by a plea that at the date of the eviction the legal estate in the premises was not in A., but C. B. afterwards paid off the mortgage, C. the mortgagee handing him over the mortgage deed, and signing an acknowledgment by indorsement thereon, of the receipt of the mortgage money and interest from the defendant B., and that the same was in full satisfaction and discharge of the mortgage debt, and of all right of action or demand on the part of the mortgagee against B. under the covenant for quiet enjoyment. A bill having been filed by A. against B., praying that A. might be declared entitled to the benefit of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and for a reference to the Master to assess the damage sustained by A. the plaintiff, in consequence of the breach of such covenant:

Held, reversing the decision of the court below, that A. had clearly a right to have the damages assessed; and leave was accordingly given to him to bring an action upon the covenant within a time mentioned in the order, B. being at the same time restrained from setting up, in defence to the action, the mortgage deed or the indorsement thereon.

This was an appeal from the decision of the M. R. who dismissed the plaintiff's bill, which was filed in March 1851 under the following circumstances:—On the 9th April 1842 the plaintiff purchased certain freeholds for 180*l.* from the defendant, who conveyed the same to the plaintiff by an indenture, in which the only covenant was that for quiet enjoyment by the plaintiff and his heirs. On April 25 the plaintiff mortgaged the premises to Bolshaw, to secure 200*l.* and interest. In July 1846 Lord Delamere, who claimed by a title paramount to the defendant and plaintiff, commenced an action of ejectment against the plaintiff, which was defended by the plaintiff without consulting Court, being tried in April 1847, and a verdict delivered for Lord Delamere, who signed judgment, and taxed the costs therein at 145*l.* and evicted the present plaintiff. Shortly afterwards 59*l.* 8*s.*, part of the costs of Lord Delamere, were levied of the goods and chattels of the present plaintiff, the defendant in the action. In June 1847 Thornton commenced an action against Court to recover damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment; and Court thereupon put in a plea that, at the time of the eviction, Thornton had conveyed the legal estate in the premises to Bolshaw, and had not any estate or interest in such premises remaining in him. This plea prevented Thornton from proceeding with his action on the covenant. In the year 1848 Court paid Bolshaw the money due to him on the mortgage, and Bolshaw at the same time handed over the mortgage deed to Court, having previously signed a memorandum indorsed thereon, dated Oct. 7, 1847, by which he acknowledged the receipt of the mortgage money and interest from Court, and that the same was in full satisfaction and discharge of the mortgage debt and interest, and all right of action or demand which Bolshaw might have against Court under the covenant contained in the deed of sale and conveyance to Thornton.

COURT OF APPEAL.

The bill prayed that the plaintiff might be declared entitled to the benefit of a covenant for quiet enjoyment as against the defendant; for a reference to the Master to assess the damage sustained by the plaintiff, or to which he was liable by reason of a breach of covenant; and for payment by the defendant to the plaintiff of such sum as the Master might award in respect of compensation for such damage, after deducting therefrom what the Master should find to have been properly paid by the defendant, in satisfaction of the mortgage to Bolshaw.

Roundell Palmer and Nicholson, for the plaintiff, in support of the appeal contended that the defendant ought not to be allowed by his own wrongful act, viz., by the payment of the mortgage debt, and by taking the receipt in full for all demands under the covenant, to be enabled to take away the remedy of the plaintiff under the covenant for quiet enjoyment. At law it was true the remedy had been either entirely taken away, or was altogether inadequate; the plaintiff was, therefore, compelled to come to this court in order that he might obtain a remedy, viz., compensation by way of damages for the breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment: (Ranelaugh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 189; Smith v. Compton, 3 B. & Ad. 404.)

Lloyd and Trevlis, for the defendant, contended that upon a purely legal covenant there could not be a legal and equitable breach; that the bill was founded upon the assumption of the existence of both; that it was a mere attempt to obtain damages in equity, which, although at one time it seemed to have been considered to fall within the province of this court, yet the cases of Denton v. Stuart, 17 Ves. 276, n., and Greenaway v. Adams, 12 Ves. 395, which countenance the doctrine, have been disapproved of, or at any rate not followed in subsequent cases: (Todd v. Gee, 17 Ves. 273; Sainsbury v. Jones, 2 Beav. 462; 5 Myl. & Cr. 1.) At all events, as the plaintiff did not in any way consult the defendant in the action, which he was unsuccessful in defending, he ought not, at any rate as against the defendant, to be allowed the costs of his defence. Dryden v. Frost, 3 Myl. & Cr. 670; Williams v. Burrell, 1 C. B. 402; Lord Portarlington v. Graham, 5 Sim. 416; and Gillett v. Rippon, Moo. & M. 406, were cited and commented on.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—The defendant in this case entered into a covenant for the peaceable enjoyment by the plaintiff of an estate which the defendant sold to him. The plaintiff, having paid his purchase money, entered into possession accordingly. The plaintiff then mortgages his property, once or twice, as he was entitled to do, so parting with the legal estate, and with it the legal right to bring an action for damages; but he became entitled to redeem the property, and to reinstate himself in the fulness of his original right. In this state of things an adverse or paramount title is asserted, and the plaintiff, being in possession, defends himself at law unsuccessfully. The paramount claim, which was adverse to all the plaintiff's rights, succeeds, and the plaintiff is evicted. No man can doubt that, in that state of circumstances, the plaintiff has a right to recover some damages, some substantial damages, from the covenantor whose covenant has thus been broken. The defendant, the covenantor, being aware of this, applies to the mortgagee, in whom was the legal estate, as I have said—a legal estate carrying with it, of course, the whole right to sue on the covenant—and pays him off, acquiring thereby the rights that the mortgagee had, and takes at the same time an acknowledgment from the mortgagee that the payment is in full of all demands upon the covenant, thereby creating, according to my present opinion—though it is not very material whether he did or did not—according to my present opinion a case of accord and satisfaction, rendering it impossible for him ever to be sued on the covenant. The plaintiff, therefore, is left entirely without remedy in a court of law by the act of the defendant, and he comes to this court asking (whether in a perfect form or not is a matter unimportant) for an assessment of damages either here or in a court of law, which he would have plainly had a right to have assessed in a court of law, but for the right acquired by the defendant. I confess, if that be, as I believe it is, the true state of things, there appears to be only one course to be taken. There is a right in the mortgagee, or the person to whom the mortgage has been transferred, to payment of every shilling of his advance, with interest, and there must also be assured to the plaintiff a right to ascertain the amount of damages to which he is entitled at law. The amount of damages cannot, I think—and that seems to be the opinion of my learned brother also—be ascertained by us without the consent of both parties to the litigation. Perhaps, even if both parties consented, we might decline to take upon ourselves such a jurisdiction; but I am rather disposed to think that, upon the request of both parties, we might take upon ourselves the burden of so doing. Unless they do so, there must be an action to ascertain the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff.

Lord Justice TURNER.—In Oct. 1847, the defendant pays off Bolshaw, in whom the legal estate of the premises had become vested under a mortgage from the plaintiff in 1842, and takes from him an acknowledgment that the sum so paid is in satisfaction of all damages incurred under the covenant. The first observation is, had Bolshaw any right, as between him and the plaintiff, so to deal with the plaintiff's rights under the covenant? I am of opinion he had not. Bolshaw, as mortgagee, was charged with this duty—on payment of the mortgage money by the plaintiff, he was bound to reconvey to the plaintiff, giving the plaintiff the benefit of the covenant vested in the plaintiff. Therefore the act of Bolshaw, thus acknowledging satisfaction on the covenant, was, in effect, a breach of his duty towards the plaintiff; and, in point of fact, the transfer of the mortgage was a sale by Bolshaw to Court of the benefit of the covenant, which he was not authorised to make, and which was therefore not binding upon the plaintiff. Then, it was said that, to support a case of fraud, fraud between Bolshaw and Court should have been alleged and proved. But, in truth, it is apparent that Bolshaw, in transferring the mortgage to Court, exceeded his authority; and it is quite sufficient to have made out that he acted in excess of his authority. It is said, also, that the plaintiff should not have defended the action without first applying to Bolshaw. The answer to that is, that the defendant dealt with Bolshaw in October, and it does not lie in the mouth of the defendant to say that the plaintiff should have applied to Bolshaw, inasmuch as the defendant knew he was dealing with Bolshaw as mortgagee, and should himself have given notice to the plaintiff of his intention to deal with the mortgagee as he did. It was then said, that no damages can be recovered; but it is impossible not to see that damage has been sustained in respect of the covenant; and the question here is, whether the plaintiff is or not entitled to an action-at-law, and to all that is necessary to secure a trial of the question of damages. I concur with my learned brother in thinking that he is.

The order made was the following: The plaintiff, by his counsel, undertaking to bring, in his own name, such action-at-law as he shall be advised on the covenants in the pleadings mentioned, and to deliver the declaration in such action within three weeks from the date of this decree, and to proceed to the trial of the said action at Chester with due diligence, it is ordered that the defendant be restrained from setting up, in his defence to such action, by pleading, or in evidence, or otherwise, the deed or deeds of mortgage executed by the plaintiff, or the memorandum indorsed on the mortgage deed of 25th April, 1842, in the pleadings mentioned; and it is ordered that execution in the said action do not issue without the leave of this court. Reserve further directions and costs till after the trial of the said action. Liberty to apply.

RODGERS v. NOWILL.

Trade marks—Breach of injunction—Motion to commit—Acquiescence.

A defendant settling up, on a motion to commit him for breach of an injunction restraining the use of a trade mark, the defence of acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs, must show that the acquiescence is such as to amount to a licence almost entitling the party complained of to file a bill.

This case came on by way of appeal from the decision of Stuart, V. C. refusing to commit William Rodgers, one of the defendants, for an alleged breach of an injunction granted in the cause, forbidding the use by the defendants, on cutlery manufactured and sold by them, of the trade mark commonly used by the plaintiffs on cutlery manufactured by themselves. The motion now renewed before their Lordships was to commit William Rodgers for breach of the perpetual injunction granted by Wigram, V. C. restraining him from using the mark "V. (crown) R., J. Rodgers and Sons" upon pen-knives, pocket-knives, and other articles of cutlery, and any other mark or marks so contrived as, by colourable imitation or otherwise, to represent that the pen-knives, &c. manufactured or sold by the defendants John Nowill and William Rodgers were the same as the pen-knives, &c. manufactured by the plaintiffs; and that William Rodgers might pay the costs of the application. The injunction, the infringement of which was complained of, was granted in the year 1844, and the case is reported in 6 Hare, 325, where the facts are very fully set forth. It appeared, by affidavits made on behalf of the plaintiff, that the defendant William Rodgers had been in the habit, since the decree, of making and selling cutlery, stamped with the trade mark the use of which had been prohibited by the injunction; but underneath the words "J. Rodgers and Sons" there was stamped, a merely colourable addition of the words "celebrated cutlery;" that the prohibited trade mark was generally known as the trade mark of the plaintiffs, and that the words "celebrated cutlery" would in general be supposed to mean the cutlery of the celebrated Rodgers, viz. the plaintiffs.

On the part of the defendants it was sworn in the affidavits that he had been about five years in partnership with his father, John Rodgers, and his brother, George, as manufacturers of cutlery; and that the goods of the plaintiffs were distinguished from theirs by the addition to the said trade mark, on the opposite side of the blade, of a star and cross—a mark which had been granted to the defendants by the corporation of cutlers in Sheffield—and by their address added; that the defendants had been for five years manufacturing the goods with the mark in question, without the star and cross; and that there had been several firms of Rodgers who stamped that name on their cutlery.

The defendant W. Rodgers swore that he had not disobeyed the injunction; that he had carried on business with his father and brother for five years, under the name of "John Rodgers and Sons," and that his firm had used the stamps "V. (crown) R., J. Rodgers and Sons," and "V. (crown) R., John Rodgers and Sons," with or without some addition; but that they had never used the distinguishing marks of the firm of Joseph Rodgers and Sons; and that William Rodgers had never, since the injunction was granted in the year 1847, manufactured or sold goods alone on his own account. Upon the case being heard before Stuart, V. C. his Honour was of opinion that, although the defendant had by his conduct acted in violation of the letter of the decree granting the perpetual injunction, yet, considering all the circumstances, and particularly the acquiescence by the plaintiffs for so many years, and their own low estimation of the value of the right protected, and that they had not proceeded against the defendant's alleged partners, that the motion to commit ought to be refused; but, as the defendant's conduct was improper, without costs.

Malins and Shee, in support of the appeal, contended that the defendant had been clearly guilty of a contempt of court, and that the trade mark which the defendants now used was substantially the same as that of the plaintiff, the difference being merely colourable.

Lord Justice TURNER referred to Croft v. Day, 6 Beav. 66, 418.

Bacon and Osborne, for the defendants.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—I think this as clear a case of a contempt of an injunction as ever was brought before the court. The injunction granted in terms forbids the use of the mark "V. R." on each side of a crown, and the words "J. Rodgers and Sons." That very mark, accompanied by those very words, has been, since the injunction, used by the defendants, which was restrained by the injunction. With regard to the additional words sometimes or frequently used (it is indifferent which), "celebrated cutlery," instead of varying the case, or making it better, they make it, in my opinion, if possible, worse. Now, if there had been the great delay on the part of the plaintiffs, after being aware, as it is suggested, of the fact, unless it amounted to a licence, I know not that it would make the breach of the injunction better. But upon the evidence, I do not believe that they have been aware of it. I do not believe that, if they had been aware of it, they would not have proceeded sooner, as they have proceeded now. Upon the evidence, I have no doubt whatever that this mark and these letters have been used for the purpose of increasing the sale of the defendants' cutlery, by enabling them or assisting them to pass it off as the cutlery of the plaintiffs. I am of opinion, therefore, that unless a mark can be now suggested to be used in future, which we shall think reasonable, there must be an order for committal.

Lord Justice TURNER.—The case appears to me to be quite as clear as it appears to my learned brother. The injunction granted is to restrain the defendants from using a particular mark, or any other mark or marks so contrived or expressed as, by colourable imitation or otherwise, to represent that the pen-knives, pocket-knives, or other articles of cutlery manufactured and sold by the defendants, are the same as the pen-knives, pocket-knives, or other articles of cutlery manufactured by the plaintiffs. Now, it is first said, on the part of the defendants, that the plaintiffs have abandoned the mark "J. Rodgers and Sons," and have used a different mark; but, upon the evidence in this case, I entertain no doubt whatever that the plaintiffs have not abandoned the mark "J. Rodgers and Sons:" for it stands thus: On the one side the affidavit says that the mark "J. Rodgers and Sons" has been since the injunction extensively used, or usually used (I am not certain of the terms), by the plaintiffs; and on the other side, we have only the affidavits of two workmen, one of whom says he made pen-knives for the plaintiffs for a period, I think, of four years, and has been since working for his own benefit for the period of four years more; and that he made those pen-knives, and that he never made any for the plaintiffs with the mark "J. Rodgers and Sons:" which is perfectly consistent with the other people having made them for the plaintiffs with the same mark, "J. Rodgers and Sons." Another witness says, "I manufactured and worked for the plaintiffs: I never made, and I never saw made, for the plaintiffs;" not that he never saw penknives made or manufactured by the plaintiffs with that mark upon them; but that he never saw them actually made. That is the expression contained in the affidavit; and therefore, on the balance of the evidence in this case, I entertain no doubt that the plaintiffs have used the mark "J. Rodgers and Sons," and that there has been no abandonment of it. Then, on the question of acquiescence, I take it that where, in a case of this description, there has been an injunction granted by this court, acquiescence, to be admitted as a de-

Vendor and purchaser—Judgments—Satisfied terms.

A., against whom two judgments were registered, mortgaged to B. with power of sale B. contracted to sell to C. The five years from the date of the original registration were allowed to expire without a re-registration. About two years afterwards, and before the contract with C. was completed, the judgments were re-registered, and they were held void as against B. and C.

A satisfied term was, prior to 31st Dec. 1845, assigned in trust for a mortgagee to secure his mortgage debt, and subject thereto in trust to attend the inheritance. In 1846 the mortgagee, under a power of sale in his mortgage deed, contracted to sell the property.

Semble, that, under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, the term would be a protection to the purchaser, without any further assignment or declaration.

This suit, which was instituted for the purpose of compelling specific performance of a contract to purchase real estate, now came on upon further directions. The plaintiff was a mortgagee, with power of sale under a mortgage dated the 30th Jan. 1844. The contract for purchase was made on the 10th Dec. 1846, under certain conditions of sale, under which a sale by auction had previously been attempted without success. One of the conditions provided for compensation if any mistake or omission should be discovered in the description of the property. The purchase-money was 1150*l.*, and the property was described as a dwelling-house and outbuildings, with land adjoining, containing 24A. 0R. 27P., more or less, being freehold, except about twenty-six perches of copyhold. The purchaser was let into possession on the 25th Dec. 1846, but did not pay the purchase-money; and he refused to complete the contract, as there were two judgments, registered on the 6th May and the 25th Nov. 1843, against the mortgagor. The mortgagee, however, had no notice of these judgments, and by the deed of the 30th Jan. 1844, a satisfied term of 1000 years, created in 1818, in the freehold portion of the property, was assigned to a trustee for the mortgagee, for the better securing the mortgage debt and interest, and subject thereto, in trust to attend the inheritance. The suit was instituted in 1848, and the bill was amended in that year; on the 24th May 1850 specific performance was decreed, and it was referred to the Master to inquire as to the title, having regard to the terms of the contract. The Master made his report on the 24th May 1852, that a good title was shown on the 7th May 1852 to all the estate except the copyhold portion, comprising about 3A. 29P. To this report no exceptions were filed. On the 9th Nov. 1850 the two judgments were re-registered, and notice of them given to the defendant.

Malins and Hallett, for the plaintiff.

H. Stevens (with whom was Bacon), for the defendant, objected that the judgments were a charge as against the mortgagee, and all persons claiming under him by conveyance executed during the time the judgment stood on the register, as the registration under the 2 Vict. c. 11 bound all persons purchasing within five years after such registration, although the judgment might not be re-registered immediately after the expiration of the five years. The re-registration revived the judgment as against persons purchasing during the previous registration. The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112 extinguished terms satisfied and attendant on the 31st Dec. 1845, but stated that they should afford the same protection as they would have afforded if they had continued to subsist, but had not been assigned, &c. (See Sugd. V. & P. 777, 11th edit.) The term, therefore, could be no protection against these judgments. The copyhold portion, the title to which was defective, was essential to the enjoyment of the freehold portion, and the condition as to compensation was applicable to description only, and not to a defective title.

Malins, in reply, referred to Seconus v. Morrell, 1 Bea. 251; and Long v. Collier, 4 Russ. 269, on the subject of the costs of the suit.

The Vice-Chancellor said that he had no doubt the title was good, he being of opinion in favour of the plaintiff on all the points raised. The objection as to the copyholds was a subject for compensation. Although the language of the 2 Vict. c. 11 was vague, his Honour thought it would be highly dangerous to accede to the argument urged on behalf of the defendant; and to mark his sense of the construction of the Act, although he would give the defendant the costs up to the amendment of the bill, he should give the plaintiff the costs of the suit subsequent to that date.

Re Osbaldiston, Osbaldiston v. Crowther.

Practice—Appointment of guardian ad litem to a person of unsound mind, not found so by inquisition, to appear upon summons at chambers.

Roberts applied for the appointment of a guardian ad litem to Benjamin Crowther, who was a person of unsound mind, but not found so by inquisition. Proceedings had been taken by summons before the V. C. at chambers against B. Crowther and his wife for the administration of the estate of Mr. Osbaldiston, of whose will Mrs. Crowther was the executrix. The wife had appeared separately, and it was proposed to appoint Mr. Chas. Crowther, the defendant's brother, his guardian. Affidavits as to B. Crowther's state of mind, and as to his brother being a proper person to act as guardian, had been filed.

The Vice-Chancellor made the order.

Bague v. Dumergue.

Will—Construction— Annuity paid out of stock—Loss on the conversion of Four per cents. into Three-and-a-half and Three-and-a-quarter per cents.

A testator, by his will, directed a sum to be invested in stock which would produce a stated amount per annum, and gave that annuity to A. B.; and, subject to the annuity, he gave the capital to C. D. There were other bequests in the will, some contingent and some vested. He directed that if, before the expiration of the trusts, the funds should be paid off or reduced so that any deficiency or loss arose, the persons interested should bear the loss rateably out of the interests on becoming entitled thereto upon the contingencies thereupon expressed. Money was invested in Four per cents. for securing the annuity, and that Stock was successively reduced to Three-and-a-Half and to Three-and-a-Quarter per cent. and there was a deficiency.

Held, that the annuitant must bear the loss, and that it could not be made up out of the capital

This was a suit instituted for the appointment of new trustees of the will of John Andrè, and also under the will of Frances Andrè. The present matter came on upon a motion for a decree declaring the plaintiff entitled to have the half-yearly payments of a certain annuity of 125*l.* made up from time to time out of so much of the capital of a sum of 3125*l.* as the dividends thereof should be insufficient to pay. It appeared that John Andrè, by his will, among other things, directed his wife, whom he appointed his sole executrix, within twelve months after his death, to invest the principal sum of 5100*l.* in such of the public stocks as she should think proper, in the names of herself and Charles Dumergue, upon trust as to the dividends for herself for life; and after her death, the testator directed Charles Dumergue to stand possessed of the capital upon trust, as to so much as cost 1000*l.* at the time of investment, to transfer the same to Louis Calcas, if he should be then living, and should have then, or should afterwards attain, the age of twenty-one years. The remainder of the same fund was similarly disposed of, and it was provided that such part as should not absolutely vest under such trusts should fall into his residuary estate. The testator then directed his wife also to lay out and invest in such of the public stocks or funds as she should think proper, in the names of the same trustees, so much other part of his property as by the dividends or interest would raise the sum of 125*l.* per annum, and directed the trustees to stand possessed of the same as to the dividends, to pay the same from time to time to the proper hands of Susannah Yarrow, for her own use, and without power of anticipation, and directed the trustees to pay a due proportion of the said annuity up to her death. The testator directed the annuity to be forfeited in case of sale or charge, and on her death, or a forfeiture by her, the capital was to form part of his residuary estate. The testator then declared as follows:—"And I do hereby declare that if it shall happen that the stock or fund, stocks or funds, in or upon which both or either of the said trust moneys shall be invested pursuant to the directions contained in this my will, shall afterwards, and before the trusts, ends, interests, and purposes hereinbefore declared as to the same respectively shall be lawfully performed and executed, be paid off or reduced, by which any loss or deficiency may arise, then that the person or persons respectively who shall or may be interested therein shall rateably bear and sustain such loss or deficiency out of their respective interest aforesaid, upon their becoming entitled thereto upon the contingencies hereinbefore expressed and declared." After the testator's death, the widow and Mr. Dumergue invested the 5100*l.* in the Four per cent. Bank Annuities, and for the purpose of meeting the annuity, they invested cash in the purchase of 3125*l.* like stock. Susannah Yarrow married Mr. Bague, and the suit was instituted by them for the appointment of new trustees. Mrs. Andrè by her will bequeathed the 3,125*l.* Four per cents. to a Miss Parish, subject to the life annuity of Mrs. Bague, and she bequeathed her residuary estate to Mrs. Bague. The Four per cents. were successively reduced to Three-and-a-Half and Three-and-a-Quarter per cents. so as not to leave sufficient to pay the 125*l.* out of the dividends; and the motion now made on behalf of the plaintiff was for a decree as before mentioned.

Rolt and Eddis, for the plaintiff.—Where the gift is of an annuity, the legatee of it is entitled to be paid in full; and as the dividends are not now sufficient, the annuitant is entitled to have the deficiency made up by successive sales of the capital for the purpose. Independently of this, the testator has himself contemplated the case which has arisen; and as the gift even of this fund depends upon the expiration or forfeiture of the annuity, there is sufficient contingency within the words used by him in his will, and the loss is to fall upon the party who will take the fund. The expression "rateably" applies to the loss, if any, on the sum of 1000*l.* and other sums, part of the 5100*l.*, and cannot apply to the annuity; for, if the loss be charged on that, it must fall wholly upon it, which the testator could not intend.

Webb, for Miss Parish, the legatee of the 3,125*l.* subject to the annuity, argued that the loss must either fall upon the annuitant out of the dividends, or, if not, must be made good out of the residuary estate of Mr. Andrè; and as that estate formed the residuary estate of Mrs. Andrè, which she had bequeathed to Mr. Bague, the loss under any circumstances would come out of her property.

C. M. Roupell, and Taylor, for the other defendants.

The following cases were cited:—May v. Bennett, 8 Russ. 370; Davies v. Wattier, 1 Sim. & Str. 468: Kendal v. Russell, 3 Sim. 424; and The Commissioners of Charitable Bequests v. St. Lawrence, 3 Jo. & Lat. 560.

Rolt, in reply.

Feb. 16.—The Vice-Chancellor.—This case comes on as a motion for a decree, the object of the suit being the appointment of new trustees under the will of John Andrè, and under that of his wife Frances Andrè, and to have a declaration of the rights of the plaintiff, who claims to have the deficiency in the income of 125*l.* which she is entitled to under John Andrè's will made up out of the capital stock set apart to secure the annuity. The case does not much depend on authorities. The interest of the plaintiff is mentioned by the testator in his will sometimes as annuity, and at other times as income; but I do not place much reliance on that. The plaintiff relies on the peculiar phraseology of the will, which, as I have said, speaks sometimes of "annuity" and sometimes of "income." The capital or interest may either be reduced by the change in the stocks, and then the testator said the persons should rateably bear the loss out of their respective interests; and then follows the words which were commented on in the argument. "upon their becoming entitled thereto on the contingencies hereinbefore expressed." But it is too much to say that the remaindermen are to lose what is lost by the annuitant. The tenant for life does not become entitled on a contingency; that creates one obscurity. But there is an equal difficulty in giving those words the construction contended for by the plaintiff, because the parties who are to bear the loss are to bear it rateably, and the widow is entitled to the fund solely, and therefore the word "rateably" creates another difficulty. It appears to me a most forced construction, when the testator has said that all should bear the loss equally, to say that one shall bear the whole loss. I shall therefore decide against the relief asked by the plaintiff, and the only decree made will be for the appointment of new trustees.

Bull and another v. Chapman and another.

Railway company—Pleading—Joint-Stock Companies Registration Act.

Action for plans, sections, &c. with common counts. Plea, upon the Joint-Stock Companies Registration Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 23), that the defendants entered into the contract, as promoters of a company, with plaintiffs, as promoters of a company; that such companies were not duly registered under the Act, and that the services, &c. for which the action was brought were not necessary to the establishing the company. Demurrer thereto, on the ground that it amounted to the general issue.

Held, that the plea was good; where the thing is positively forbidden by an Act of Parliament (as in this case it is), the plea setting out the circumstances specially does not amount to the general issue.

Action for goods sold, services rendered, money paid, and account stated.

Plea—That the plaintiffs were promoters of the Plymouth and North Cornwall Railway Company, and defendants members of the managing committee of a provisionally-registered company called the Cornwall and Devon Central Railway Company; and at the time of the making of the contract and promise in the plea and last count mentioned, each of the said companies was a joint-stock company within the meaning of the Joint-Stock Companies Registration Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 110), that a contract was entered into between the said parties as such promoters for the performance of services by the plaintiffs for the defendants on behalf of the company, which said services and the payment of reward were not, nor was any part thereof, necessarily required for the constituting the said companies or either of them (bringing the case within the provisions of the Act), and alleging that the work was done by the plaintiffs for the defendants in their character of promoters. An account stated also in the same character, and averring that neither of the said companies was completely registered as required by the Act, or incorporated or authorised to sue in the name of any officer; that the goods sold were not necessary for the establishing of the company, of all which the plaintiffs had notice at the time of making the said contract, doing the said work, providing the said materials, selling and delivering the said plans, &c., paying the said money, and so stating the said accounts, contrary to the statute.

Demurrer thereto, on the ground that it amounted to the general issue, and that the effect of the statute is merely to prevent an act of the promoters binding all the subscribers.

Quain appeared for the plaintiff in support of the demurrer, and referred to the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 23; Rayner v. Wright, 3 Q. B. 922; James v. Donovan, 4 Q. B.; Jenkins v. Hutchinson, 18 L. J. 271; and Lewis v. Nicholson, 21 L. J. 311, Q. B.

Rock. Clarke, contrà, referred to the preamble of the Act, the 3rd section, the 5th provision of the 4th, and the 23rd and 24th sections. 5 C. B. 271, and 11 Vesey, jun. 642, were also cited.

Cur. adv. vult.

Feb. 12.—PARKE, B. delivered judgment.—This was an action brought by Messrs. Ball and Moore against Messrs. Chapman and Williams; the plaintiffs being promoters of an undertaking called the Plymouth and North Cornwall Railway Company, and the defendants members of the managing committee of, and interested in, a provisionally-registered company, called the Cornwall and Devon Central Railway Company, also provisionally registered. There are two counts in the declaration to which this plea demurred to does not apply. The third count is a count—"Whereas the defendants were indebted to the plaintiffs in 3000*l.* for certain plans, sections, and books of reference, then sold and delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendants at their request, and for certain plans, sections, and books of reference, then deposited by the plaintiffs with the defendants at their request, and by them appropriated and used, and for work then done, and materials for the same provided by the plaintiffs for the defendants at their request." Then there is a plea to the last count—"That at the time of the making of the contract and promise in this plea and in the said last count mentioned, each of the said companies was a joint-stock company within the true intent and meaning of the said Act of Parliament for the registration, incorporation, and regulation of joint stock companies (that is, the Act 7 & 8 Vict. chap. 110), and not being a banking company," and so bringing the case within the provisions of that Act. It was a joint-stock company, consisting of more than twenty-five members, bringing it clearly within the provisions of the Act of Parliament. "And the defendants further say, that after the 1s. day of Nov. 1844, and before the commencement of this suit, a contract was made and entered into between the plaintiffs, then being the promoters of the said first-mentioned company, as such promoters of the said first-mentioned company, on behalf of the same company of the one part, and the promoters, of whom the defendants then were two, of the said secondly-mentioned company of the other part, whereby the plaintiffs, as such promoters as last aforesaid of the said firstly-mentioned company, in consideration of certain reward to be therefore paid to them by the said promoters for the said secondly-mentioned company, as such promoters, for and on behalf of the said secondly-mentioned company undertook and agreed that they, the plaintiffs, and the said first-mentioned company, should and would perform certain services for the said secondly-mentioned company, which said services, and the said payment of which said reward, were not, nor was any part thereof, necessarily required for the constituting or establishing of the said companies, or either of them." And then it alleged that the work was done by the plaintiffs for the defendants in their character of promoters; an account stated also in the same character; and then it goes on to aver that "neither of the companies was completely registered as required by the same Act of Parliament, or incorporated by statute or charter, or authorised by statute or letters patent to sue and be sued in the name of any officer or person; and that the said plans, sections, and books of reference, at the time of the making of the said contract, and at the time of the said sale and delivery, depositing, appropriating, and using of the said plans, sections, and books of reference, were stores not necessarily required for the establishing of the said company, of all which premises the plaintiffs had notice at the time of the said making of the said contract and promise in this plea and in the said last count above mentioned, and at the time of the said doing the said work, and providing the said materials, and so selling and delivering, depositing, appropriating, and using the said plans, sections, and books of reference, and so paying the said money, and so stating the said accounts, contrary to the statute." Then there is a demurrer to that plea, and the demurrer is that this plea amounts to the general issue, and that the effect of the statute is merely to prevent the act of the promoters binding all the subscribers. Now this plea would amount to the general issue, because it would simply mean that they had no authority to bind their principal to the contract alleged in the last count; but if the act is positively forbidden by the Act of Parliament, it does not amount to the general issue: it is a voidable contract, and bad; but it is a voidable contract, as being illegal according to the terms of the Act of Parliament. Now on reference to the Act of Parliament 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, and construing it according to the ordinary meaning of the language used, we are of opinion that the act is itself forbidden and made illegal, not saying in so many words "they shall not bind their principals," but the act is forbidden. By the 23rd section the projectors or promoters of a company have the right to use the terms and name of the company registered provisionally, to open subscription lists, to allot shares, and perform such other acts only as are necessary to constitute the company, or obtaining letters patent, charter, or Act of Parliament: they are not to make sales, nor to enter into any contracts for any service, or for the execution of any work; that is positively forbidden by the Act of Parliament; and, being positively forbidden by the Act, we think it was an illegal act. And we think the ordinary construction is to be put on the Act, that the act was illegal, and consequently the objection fails.

Judgment for the defendant.

CLAY v. CROWE.

Bill of exchange—Negotiable and due—Lost bill.

If a negotiable bill or promissory note be lost at the time a party to it is called on to pay, the loss constitutes a good defence; otherwise, if the bill or note be not in its original state negotiable.

The loss of the bill not arrived at maturity is immaterial if found before it is due.

Action for goods sold.

Plea.—As to part, that defendant accepted and gave a bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiff on defendant, payable to the plaintiff's order at five months after date; that plaintiff lost the bill, and ceased to have any power over it; and the defendant had not found it, nor possessed any power or control over it.

Demurrer to the plea.—It does not show the bill to have been negotiable, nor say that it was indorsed; nor does it state that, at the time of the loss, it was an overdue instrument.

Atherton, Q. C. in support of the demurrer.

Macnamara, in support of the plea.

Raynes v. Crowe, 1 Ex. 167; Hansard v. Robinson, 7 B. & C. 90; Woodford v. Whitely, M. & Malk. 517; Price v. Price, 16 M. & W. 232; and Byles on Bills, were referred to. Cur. adv. vult.

Feb. 12.—PARKE, B. delivered judgment.—This action was brought by the plaintiff for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff, the declaration being in the new form for goods bargained, sold, and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant. Then, "for a second plea, as to the said 42*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*, parcel of the sum demanded, the defendant says that before action the plaintiff, by his bill of exchange directed to the defendant, required the defendant to pay to the plaintiff's order 12*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* five months after date. And the defendant accepted and delivered to the plaintiff, who took and received such bill for and on account of the said sum of 42*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*, parcel &c. And the plaintiff afterwards lost such bill out of his possession, and from thence hitherto the same has remained so lost. And the plaintiff has been unable to produce it, and ceased to have any power or control over it. And the defendant has never since such loss found such bill, nor known where it was to be found, nor had any power or control over it." The plaintiff says the second plea is bad in substance. We are of opinion that the plea in this case is bad in substance. The law upon the subject of lost bills may be considered to be settled by the decided cases to be this:—If a negotiable bill or note (that is, a bill payable in its original state, "to bearer or order") be lost at the time a party to it is called on to pay, the loss constitutes a good defence; otherwise, if it be not in its original state a negotiable bill or note, as where it is payable to the payee only. The former of these propositions is supported by the well-considered judgment of the K. B. (Hansard v. Robinson, 7 B. & C. 90), which does not confine the necessity of the production of the bill or note by the plaintiff to cases where it is payable to bearer originally or becomes so by indorsement in blank, as indeed the bill in that case in point of fact did. And Lord Tenterden, in giving the judgment of the court, lays down the position generally, that the law merchant requires the production of the instrument before the party to it can be called on to pay. This case was followed by Raynes v. Crowe, 1 Exch. 167. The case of Wain v. Bailey, 10 A. & E. 616, however, decides that this doctrine applies only to negotiable bills. The loss of a note or bill payable to the plaintiff only is no answer to an action by him. The bill given in the present case was a negotiable bill, and therefore its loss at maturity or afterwards, when the plaintiff should sue upon it, would have been an answer to an action at his suit on the bill, and probably to this action, on the consideration for which the bill was given; but the loss of the bill not arrived at maturity is immaterial: the bill may be found before it is due: and the intermediate loss is of not the least consequence. This plea must be taken most strictly against the defendant, if we assume the bill to be still running, which we ought to do, the loss of it in no way affects the plaintiff's right to sue. For these reasons, in our opinion, judgment should be for the plaintiff. Judgment for plaintiff.

Marriage settlement—Appointment—Revocation—New appointment.

A power with or without revocation and new appointment was given by a marriage settlement to the intended husband and wife to jointly appoint for the benefit of their child or children, and in default of joint appointment, the survivor to appoint by deed or will. A joint appointment was subsequently made by deed, which contained a power of joint revocation and new joint appointment. That appointment was afterwards jointly revoked, and no other made by them. The wife died before the husband, and the husband by will appointed to his son.

Held, that the power was well exercised by the husband as the survivor, and his appointment to the son good, under the original marriage settlement. The joint revocation of the joint appointment restored the powers of the original settlement.

The facts and arguments sufficiently appear in the judgment of the court.

Watters appeared for the plaintiff and relied upon Ward v. Lenthall, 1 Siderfin, 343. Moody v. King, 2 Bing. 447; 1 Sugden on Powers (6th edit.) 460, 480; Fearne on Contingent Remainders (9th edit.) 42, where the cases are collected; Bunney v. Philcock, 5 Mvl. & C. 72; and Penny v. Turner, 2 Phill. 492.

Willes, contrà, for the defendant. Cur. adv. vult.

Feb. 12.—ALDERSON, B. delivered judgment.—This was a special verdict, stating that the defendant, under a contract made with Montague and others, had delivered to his solicitor on the 30th Sept. 1843 an abstract of his title to certain lands and premises. The question is whether the defendant could, supposing the facts stated in the abstract to be true, make a good title to these premises. The title depended on a settlement made on the 28th and 29th May 1810 by lease and release. It appeared that the premises in question were at the time limited to Frances Elizabeth Reeve, widow, for her life, with remainder in fee to Mary Frances Reeve, spinster, and by the settlement before mentioned, which was made on the marriage of Mary Frances Reeve and Henry Kater, settled to the use of Henry Kater for life without impeachment of waste, remainder to the use of Mary Frances Reeve for life in like manner, with remainder "to the use of all or any one or more of the children of the marriage, either exclusively or in such parts, shares, or proportions, and for such estate or estates, interest or interests, and with such limitations and remainders over and charged or chargeable with the payment of such yearly or other sum or sums of money, such limitations or remainders over and charges nevertheless to be for the benefit of some or one of the same children, and at such age or ages, time or times, and in such manner and form, as they the said Henry Kater and Mary Frances Kater should from time to time, by any deed or deeds, writing or writings, with or without power of revocation and new appointment, to be by them respectively sealed and delivered in the presence of, and to be attested by, two or more credible witnesses, direct, limit, and appoint, and in default of such joint direction, limitation, or appointment, or in case any such should be made which should not be a complete disposition of the said hereditaments thereby granted and released, or intended so to be, then as the survivor of them, the said Henry Kater and Mary Frances Kater should by any such deed or deeds, writing or writings to be executed as aforesaid, or by his or her last will and testament in writing, or by any codicil thereto to be by him or her signed and published in the presence of three witnesses, should direct, limit, and appoint." The settlement then proceeded, and in default of such appointment, jointly or severally, to limit the hereditaments in a way which, under the circumstances of this case, would give a title to the elder brother of the present defendant. It is not material to state the limitations more at length, because nothing turns upon them. There were two children of this marriage, Henry Herman Kater, and Edward Kater the defendant. The abstract then proceeded to state that by deed, dated the 15th Oct. 1832, properly executed, Henry Kater and Mary Frances Kater, after reciting that they had resolved to exercise the several powers given to or vested in them by virtue of the settlement, did, in the exercise and execution of the powers and authorities reserved to them by the settlement, and of every other power and authority therein in that behalf enabling, direct, limit, and appoint the premises, subject to their own life estates, to Edward Kater the defendant in fee. This deed contains a power of joint revocation of the uses therein limited, and a power of joint appointment of the whole or any part of the hereditaments to new uses; and with like powers of revocation and new appointment reserved to Henry Kater and Mary Frances Kater as they might think proper, subject, however, to the same restrictions as were contained in the original settlement in favour of the children of the marriage. The abstract then set out another deed dated 4th Feb. 1835, by which Henry Kater and Mary Frances Kater jointly revoked the uses contained in the deed dated 15th Oct. 1832, but made no new appointment at all. On 19th Feb. 1835 Mrs. Kater died, and upon 24th May, 1839 Henry Kater, the survivor, duly made his will and published it in the presence of three witnesses, and, after limiting the powers reserved to him by the deed of settlement of 28th and 29th May 1810, did, in execution of the powers vested in him, limit, direct, and appoint the hereditaments in question to Edward Kater the defendant in fee. Henry Kater died, and his will was proved on 12th May, 1835. The question now arises upon these facts, whether Edward Kater the defendant has the fee simple of these hereditaments vested in him? if he has, the judgment should be given for the defendant; if not, it should be given for the plaintiff. and this question depends on the validity of the appointment made by Henry Kater's will. After much consideration, we have arrived at the conclusion that the appointment was valid, and the defendant is entitled to our judgment. It was contended by the counsel for the plaintiff that, by the execution of the power jointly by Mr. and Mrs. Kater, the whole power was executed, and that any valid limitation afterwards must arise out of the exercise of those powers which they chose to reserve to themselves in that deed; and that, as they had not exercised them except by revoking the appointment, the original power was exhausted and gone altogether, and no power remained in the survivor to appoint at all: and for this purpose the leading case of Ward v. Lenthal, 1 Sid. 313, and 2 Keb. 269, was cited. In that case a man who levied a fine to new uses, with power of revocation and limitation to new uses, by a second deed revoked the same and limited to new uses, but therein reserved to himself only a power to revoke; by a third indenture he revoked the uses of the second indenture and limited new uses. The court there resolved, where powers of revocation and new appointments are given, the donee may revoke and limit to new uses, and all the estates shall be raised out of the first seisin. But if in any indenture by which he thus declares new uses he reserves the power to revoke, and does not reserve expressly a power to limit new uses, he can only revoke, and cannot limit new uses by virtue of the estate first raised. Lord St. Leonards, in observing on this case, says: "This seems to depend upon the ground of the decision in Hele v. Bond, the principle of which is, that the instrument for exercising the power must expressly reserve the very power intended to be retained. But, we think, after much consideration, this case does not govern the present question. There the uses originally limited by the settlement were revoked by the power, and the new uses appointed in the exercise of the power, but with only a power of revocation reserved: and it is unnecessary to say what would have been the effect if the second deed had been simply revoked. Possibly, the original revoked uses might have been revived: but this was not done, for the deed of revocation appointed new uses, showing clearly that the revocation was not for the purpose of reviving the old uses and new uses named, because there was no power reserved by the second deed for that purpose. But that is not the case here. Here, by the settlement, the power of appointment is given to the husband and wife jointly, to limit the estates amongst the children; they are not to revoke any of the uses of the settlement at all, nor have they done so: having made this joint appointment, they have revoked it simply. We think that in so doing they restored the original settlement entirely, and we found it thus stated by Lord St. Leonards in his Treatise on Powers, vol. I. 459, citing as his authority with approbation Mr. Preston's very learned book on Abstracts, p. 277, that "when a man has a power of appointment, and he exercises that power with the addition of a power of revocation, this power of revocation is annexed to the uses introduced into the appointment; and by revoking the uses contained in the deed of appointment, there will be a revival of the original uses, and amongst them of the power of appointment." The effect of the revocation will be to revive the original power, so that it may be exercised again and again. Lord St. Leonards afterwards states (and we cannot do better than quote his very words): "If the original power be a general primary one, the estate by settlement only in default and until its execution (which is the case here), a new appointment, with power of revocation only, and a subsequent exercise of that power would, it is apprehended, restore the original settlement, and with it the general power of appointment, which would effectuate the intention. For in such a case the original power of appointment in its creation overrides all the uses, and comes in lieu of the fee. It cannot be treated as a mere power to defeat a settlement, for it is in itself the immediate and leading object of the settlement." We think this distinction between this case and that of Ward v. Lenthal decides the question in favour of the defendant. By the execution of the joint power the estate was limited to the defendant in fee; the revocation of that appointment, also jointly made, revived the original power of joint appointment, and with it the perfect power of appointment by the survivor in case of default. The case then stands exactly thus: as if the first joint appointment had never been made; then, if so, the subsequent non-exercise of that existing joint power of appointment was clearly a default in the exercise of such joint power, and in that event, by the very words of the settlement, the power came to the survivor, which power Mr. Kater, the survivor, has duly exercised in this case. The learned counsel for the plaintiff made another point, that, inasmuch as in the first joint appointment the husband and wife did not expressly reserve to themselves any power of appointment to the survivor, they had shown their intention of limiting the future appointment to themselves jointly, and so they had finally put an end to the power of appointing by the survivor; but even if it had been to be so construed as to show such an intention on their part (which we doubt), we still think that the settlement gave them the power to do this, and that this point therefore fails also. We are glad to be able to come to the conclusion that the appointment by the survivor is valid; for this fully effectuates the very clear primary intention of the parties in the settlement. We think, therefore, the judgment must be for the defendant.

Judgment for the defendant.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS COURT.

Reported by DAVID CAIO MACRAE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Monday, Feb. 21.

JOHN HENRY CROMWELL RUSSELL.

Fraudulent settlement—Making away with property.

A settlement made thirteen years after marriage, and three days before the trial of actions brought to recover moneys due, is to be deemed fraudulent against creditors: especially where the consideration, purporting to come from the insolvent's father-in-law (the trustee), appears not to have been bona fide paid, nor intended to be, and the property so placed in settlement was in value two or three times the amount of the debts.

This insolvent, an attorney, in 1846 left England to avoid judgments obtained against him by several gentlemen, who had advanced 200*l.* each for the purposes of a railway scheme, of which insolvent was projector and solicitor, and they were provisional committeemen. They said their advances were made upon the insolvent's security, while the latter insisted it was a speculation on their part, and that they looked to the success of the railway for repayment. Three days before the trial of the actions the insolvent executed a post nuptial settlement upon his wife of his reversionary interest in one-third of an estate called the Cheshunt-park estate, a property which had been bestowed by Charles II. at the period of the Restoration upon the Duke of Albemarle and his heirs for ever, but which by intermarriage has, singular to say, fallen into the possession of the insolvent's family, who are lineal descendants of Oliver Cromwell. The insolvent had been, until 1831, heir in tail to the whole estate; but in that year he executed a deed divesting himself of two-thirds, and restricted himself to one-third, the subject of the post-nuptial settlement. Under this last-mentioned settlement the insolvent's interest was sold to his father for 1550*l.*, of which 1000*l.* were invested in the funds in the name of trustees, and proceedings in Chancery had been set on foot by one of the creditors, and the question was still undecided.

Mr. Commissioner LAW now delivered the adjudication of the Court.—The complaint in this case is, that Mr. Russell, owing five sums of about 200*l.* each, for which he had given to each party his written acknowledgment, and promised to give security on his estate in Hertfordshire, being sued for the money, and defending the actions, did, just before they came into court, make over his property to his father-in-law in trust: that property exceeding the amount of his debts by many thousand pounds. He immediately went abroad, and remained out of reach of his creditors for about six years. Coming to England in 1852, they succeeded in arresting him. Mr. Russell wishes it to be understood that the claims of these parties were unjust claims; and on that ground, as well as on the duty of making a settlement, he would justify the placing his property and himself out of their reach. Now, as the questions between the parties were decided by a jury, I must consider that these are legal debts, which the defendant was bound to satisfy if he could. But I will state the circumstances on which the debts arose, so far as they are in evidence before me. A certain railway scheme was set on foot in the summer of 1845. Mr. Russell was to be the solicitor. Of those who have appeared in this court, the most active among the instigators of the enterprise seems to have been Mr. Thomas Tapping, one of the plaintiffs. Mr. Russell was evidently the manager. He still holds the books. Mr. Tapping induced others to become provisional committeemen, by what he had to say on the responsibility of Mr. Russell the insolvent. Mr. Tapping was sworn, and in this has received no contradiction, that he was asked by Mr. Russell to influence his, Mr. Tapping's father, to be on the committee; and that he objected, until the insolvent should get his own father and his relation Mr. Hudleston to belong to it; that the insolvent showed him letters from those two parties, by which they agreed to be on the committee; and that he then assented for his father. Another fact is sworn to, and not contradicted: that, when the five parties, now complaining, had advanced their moneys, a notice appeared in the Times, from Mr. Russell, sen. and Mr. Hudleston, declaring that they had nothing to do with this company. In the meantime, it had become expedient to find some money; a sum of 1000*l.* was particularly wanted to pay for the surveys which had been going on; and the five plaintiffs were induced to advance to Mr. Russell about 200*l.* each, for him to discharge those claims. Mr. Thomas Tapping aided in inducing the others so to come forward. The insolvent gave to each his I. O. U. for the money so advanced. But his statement is, that they were not to look to him for repayment, but to the funds of the company, when the subscriptions should come in; and that he gave the I. O. U.'s only to secure them against a misapplication on his part of that money, which he was immediately to pay over to the engineers. On the other hand, Mr. Thomas Tapping swears that insolvent promised to give security on his interest in the Cheshunt Park estate—a promise which he afterwards declined to fulfil. Mr. William Tapping spoke positively to the insolvent's having promised a security on the estate; and said that, when afterwards it was claimed, he avoided the question. Mr. Levinge also asked the insolvent for a better security on the part of Mr. Swift, one of the parties making the advance. Mr. Goldsmith does not speak to an express promise, but swears to hearing this property mentioned, and that insolvent was tenant in tail. He states, too, that it was on account of the money being required to be laid down that very day to which he refers, that a judgment was not given at the time, but only the I. O. U.'s. Also, he says that, on seeing the remuneration advertised by Mr. Russell, sen. and Mr. Hudleston, he appealed to the insolvent, and asked how he meant to meet the claim, but could get no answer. Such is the evidence now in this court; and, as Mr. Russell defended the actions, and the claims were confirmed by verdicts, I certainly cannot relieve him from the responsibility of removing an ample property from the access of those claims, in order to defeat the creditors. The only witness called on this subject by the insolvent is a Mr. Stock, who attended a meeting, where he declined to advance his money. He says that his impression was that the insolvent was to be a temporary security to satisfy the minds of the lenders; and does not think that the subject was mooted of his being responsible. He states, however, that his own reason for not advancing any money was that he was not satisfied with Mr. Russell's security. This witness, at the most, only proves that he, who never became a party to the transaction, did not hear what those who were parties have sworn to. On this point, touching the intended responsibility of parties, as on some more important points in the case, one cannot help observing that Mr. Russell, sen. has never been brought forward. On July 15 the excuse was made for his not attending, that he had been taken ill with a feverish attack the day before. Neither he nor Mr. Hudleston have ever been brought forward to explain what was said concerning them, the court is not to suppose that any statement of theirs would vary the case. It is true that the plaintiffs were very quick in pressing their demands; but circumstances seem to show that they were warranted in the suspicions on which they took such prompt measures to enforce the undertakings given to them. The debts then are to be treated as having received legal proof and ratification. They are such as a man, having the means, was bound to pay; and I must listen to the complaints of those who show that those means did exist, and do exist, to an amount more than is necessary for their satisfaction. The property of the insolvent was a certain landed estate in reversion. I shall not here refer to the inquiries which have been made into the title, which had been in some measure complicated by family settlements. There has been much reluctance to give an intelligible account of these things; and at this moment there is a deficiency of such information as is usually expected by the court. I will advert to the evidence of value; a subject on which Mr. Russell, sen., the tenant in possession, could have given useful evidence. The insolvent's attention was called to the question of value on the 15th July: he then stated that, when he and Mr. Levealey sold his interest to his father (after the trial of the causes), Mr. Hoggart valued the estate. On the 5th Jan. there was further inquiry: and Mr. Russell spoke doubtfully of the dates of prior valuations. On the 1st Feb. he said, "I can't find the originals. I have found a copy; but have forgotten to bring it. My wife sent it me from Liège a week ago." On the 8th Feb., after some remonstrance, a copy of the valuation of 1842 was produced; also one of the 8th Jan. 1846, which is the period of most importance in this matter Mr. Hoggart then valued the insolvent's interest at 5500*l.* or more. At that same time, as is admitted, a valuation was obtained from Mr. Morgan. This is not shown. The insolvent says, when asked for it, "My father has it; I have no copy." He certainly has shown no disposition to give the best information to the court and creditors; and we must presume the value to be rather over than under the minimum of Mr. Hoggart, 5500*l.* The circumstances of putting away this property remain to be considered. Why was it done? How was it done? And what is the justification offered? The insolvent had been married nearly fourteen years, and no settlement ever made. No one then can be so blind as not to see that the immediate motive was to defeat the claims of these creditors. But the insolvent urges that, though a settlement had hitherto been neglected, he was in duty bound to make it; and that there was also a consideration at the time, coming from his wife's father, which further justified the transaction. The way in which it was done was this; the insolvent conveyed to his wife's father Mr. Lievesley as trustee on an expressed consideration of 500*l.*; then Mr. Lievesley, with the husband and wife, conveyed to the insolvent's father, Mr Russell, for a price of 4350*l.*, and at the same time Mr. Russell conveyed, by way of mortgage, to the family solicitor, who was trustee for the younger children, and the money came from a fund of that trust. Of this sum of 4350*l.*, 4000*l.* was invested in the funds in the name of Mr. Lievesley and another. I will now refer to the evidence of the insolvent on the subject of the settlement. He states that in 1831 his intended marriage was put off on the subject of settlement; that in 1832, just before it took place, he asked Mr. Lievesley whether he would settle as he promised before, and that he declined. Accordingly, there was a marriage without settlement. The next mention of a settlement in Mr. Russell's evidence is after the lapse of more than thirteen years. He says, "In 1845 I found I must sell my interest. I could not. In September 1845 Mr. Lievesley said, 'Before you sell your reversion, you must make a settlement.' He said he would leave my wife 500*l.* at his death, and I agreed to make a settlement. This was early in Nov. He was to pay me 500*l.* at once, on my settling. I gave my father the option of purchasing. He proposed terms to which I did not accede. At the end of Nov. I gave instructions to prepare the settlement, and it was executed on the 13th Dec." This was a conveyance of the whole interest to Lievesley, as trustee. Now we know that the actions were commenced on the 6th Nov., and tried on the 16th Dec., and on this case, so standing on the insolvent's evidence, I should feel myself bound to say that the transaction was a fraud upon creditors. Here is a man who had been married nearly fourteen years, and who, to avoid paying debts of 1000*l.* with costs (he provided for other current debts), makes a family settlement of a property worth between 5000*l.* and 6000*l.*, perhaps more, receiving a consideration from the wife's father of 500*l.* I cannot believe that such a transaction would be allowed to stand. But there are further circumstances which claim to be noticed. Grave doubt has been suggested whether this alleged consideration of 500*l.* was paid. It is urged by the opposing creditors that it was a mere fiction; and, as Mr. Russell proposes by his schedule to swear to the receipt of the money and the specific appropriation of it, I cannot decline the consideration of the evidence which bears on the subject. It is a fact admitted on all sides that, whereas 4350*l.* was brought forward as the purchase-money payable by Mr. Russell, sch., 4000*l.* was invested, some in January, some in April, and that 350*l.* remained. It is admitted on all sides that in 1846, some time after the insolvent had left England, money of his was in Mr. Lievesley's hands for payment of debts. Now observe the two opposite stories. The insolvent's story is that he received that 500*l.* from Mr. Lievesley, and that that very sum, all but 116*l.* 14*s.* 11*d.*, was applied to his debts, as specified in the schedule. As to the 350*l.* he says he never knew that that sum or any balance remained uninvested, till four years afterwards; not till 1850, some time after Mr. Lievesley's death. The case on the other is, that that 500*l.* was never paid at all, and that Mr. Lievesley, by the insolvent's desire, kept the 350*l.* to pay certain debts, when the 4000*l.* was invested. The witness here in favour of the latter statement is the widow and executrix of Mr. Lievesley. She was his second wife, not the mother of Mrs. Russell. Since her husband's death in 1849, she has lent the insolvent 50*l.*, and being entered for that in the schedule, she had notice of the hearing. But she finds herself charged as executrix with large sums, and denies her liability. If her husband retained that 350*l.* to his own use, she is chargeable with it as his representative. And the insolvent charges her with 116*l.* 14*s.* 11*d.* as owing to himself for that portion of the supposed 500*l.* which is said not to have been applied to debts. She says that she knew of no money left by the insolvent in her husband's hands in Jan. 1846 for payment of debts. She remembers the settlement; and remembers hearing that the 500*l.* was mentioned in it. But she declares that it was a mere nominal thing. She brings here her husband's account-books and bankers' books. The bankers' book, Roharts and Co., shows a draft for 500*l.* in favour of Mr. Russell on the 8th Jan. 1846. She says she heard of this on her husband's coming home with Mr. Russell with a bag of gold, 500*l.*; that her husband the next day, in going to his office, gave the gold to Cubitt's cashier, getting a cheque for it, which he paid into the bankers'. This, too, appears in the pass-book on the 12th. She says she understood, at the time, that the settlement was made to meet the exigencies in which the insolvent was then placed; that the 500*l.* was but nominal, mere words; and that the object was to settle the estate on Mrs. Russell. That Mr. Lievesley had not that sum to give—that, if he had given a shilling, she would have heard of it—that large sums were in his name at the bankers', he being secretary to the Foundling Hospital—and that at that time the balance on his private account at the bankers' was hardly 100*l.* Mr. Russell admits that he got the cheque cashed in sovereigns; and says he did so, because he intended to take them to Boulogne: but that he found them too heavy to take abroad; and also remembered that he had debts to pay, which he had not considered before—and that for this purpose he took the money back to Mr. Lievesley. On these discrepancies, one may observe that, if it be true, as said by Mrs. Lievesley, that her husband had not the 500*l.* of his own to give, the restoration of it, shown by the bankers' book, is quite consistent with her story, which is not in itself an improbable one,—and I think that Mr. Russell, if he had felt that her story was false, would, with the knowledge he must have of Mr. Lievesley's circumstances, have endeavoured, by an examination of the account-books and bankers' books which she brought, find the means of detecting such a misrepresentation. He certainly showed no desire to go farther into that evidence. And now as to the 350*l.*, the residue of the 1350*l.* which certainly came to Mr. Lievesley's hands, Mrs. Lievesley states that she finds from her husband's papers that a sum of about 300*l.* was left in his hands to pay debts; but that this was not till the purchase-money was received. It was in April that this sum remained in his hands uninvested. She says that Lievesley also received a sum of 20*l.* from Briscoe, and afterwards 12*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* from Mr. Goddard. She shows an account of payments of 326*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.*, and thinks that insolvent had the difference. She says also that in 1847 Lievesley received on insolvent's account a sum of 35*l.* from Mr. Austin, and she tells us the specific appropriation of it in six payments. There is produced also a little book of Lievesley, who was always on friendly terms with insolvent, where there is this entry in Lievesley's writing:—"What is the amount of your debts? Name them. Pressing and not pressing. The 4000*l.* is in trust, and cannot be divested. The 350*l.* I consider to be at your disposal. Dispose of 300*l.*" This minute most clearly points to the sum of 350*l.*, which was the balance remaining from the 1350*l.*; and it is not well reconcileable with the notion that Lievesley should keep back this money without the insolvent knowing anything about it; especially when we remember the correspondence which is admitted to have been going on between them during Mr. Russell's absence from England. Both sums could not be wanted; for the insolvent's case is that those debts were under 500*l.* While thus I see no probability in the assertion that he was for four years altogether ignorant of this 350*l.*, I also think the other statement very improbable, that he never sought or received from Mr. Lievesley an account of the money which he paid for him. He makes out now himself a list of payments to the amount of 383*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.*, and says that he charges 116*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.* (which would make up 500*l.*) as what ought to be returned to him. I do not see how any such list was arrived at, if Mr. Lievesley failed to render any account—indeed the statement rather imports that there must have been such account, for the expenditure concludes with this item—"Retained by Mr. Lievesley for parcels, postages, &c., 3*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.*" The list also gives the dates of payments, which must either be founded on the receipts given by the parties, or on an account from him who made the payments. Neither has been exhibited. There is one piece of evidence which tends to throw further doubt on the representation concerning the 500*l.* and payments made with it. There is a letter written to Mr. Lievesley by Mrs. Russell from Florence, under her husband's direction on 3rd Feb. 1847, in which Mr. Lievesley is requested to make a particular application of a sum of 35*l.* which is to be paid to him, on Mr. Russell's account, by Mr. Austin. The sums to be paid with it are expressed, and these same payments appear in the insolvent's statement of the application of the 500*l.* as made more than a year before that letter was written. The post-mark, as well as the writing within, gives the date of the letter. On a view of all circumstances brought before me, I find myself constrained to say, that I do not believe that sum of 500*l.* ever to have been applied to the benefit of the insolvent; but that the money was handed over only to be returned: a fictitious process, to deceive the consciences of those who were engaged in a business not fit for the broad daylight of truth. It remains to notice the trust which was made of the 4000*l.* when put into the Funds. It was placed there, part in January, part in April, 1846, in the names of Mr. Lievesley and Mr. Schomberg, who had acted professionally in drawing the settlement. This gentleman objected to the use of his name in the transaction, and refused to sign the declaration of trust. Mr. Lievesley, while he lived, received the dividends. On his death in 1849 Mr. Schomberg still refused to act; and with great propriety he refused even to transfer the stock to other persons. His resolution on the subject is expressed in a letter written the 22nd Nov. 1849, after Mr. Lievesley's death; and in March 1850 he writes to the insolvent thus:—"The fairest and most honourable course is to come to an arrangement with your creditors, and disclose all." A letter has been produced, written about the same period, from Mrs. Russell, by her husband's direction, to Mrs. Lievesley, saying this:—"Mr. Schomberg wants that we should apply to Chancery to remove him. But then the deed would be brought forward; and then our opponents would pick a hole, and well work old Mr. Russell. No, no; for God's sake never let them moot the question of the validity of your deed." At last new trustees were appointed by the Court of Chancery on the petition of the insolvent and his wife; those trustees being some client of Mr. Crouch and the clerk of Mr. Crouch, who has from the first been the insolvent's solicitor in all matters here spoken of, and has of course received considerable sums, which certainly might have been better spent. These are the facts of the case. A property, of the value, probably, of nearly or quite 6000*l.*, has been put aside in the way I have described, in order to defeat creditors of a comparatively small amount. And, inasmuch as this property can hardly now be considered as beyond the control of the insolvent, it has been suggested, and not unreasonably, that it is a case in which the court should pronounce no discharge at all. The judgments of this court range from an immediate discharge to a discharge in three years: and there is always the power to dismiss a petition, which gives the petitioner no discharge at all. When all property has irremediably vanished, as may be in the most vicious case, the adverse judgment of the court operates as a personal penalty. When property still exists, as here, an adverse judgment operates to drive the wrongdoer to surrender that which he cannot justly retain. The case before me is of this class. The means of paying all debts still exist; those means are probably somewhat diminished by the obstinate efforts which have been made in resistance of legal claim, and the debts to be paid have been somewhat increased by the same cause. But means exist in that shape which a family compact has given to them; and if I do not employ the strongest measure of all for driving the debtor to satisfaction or reasonable compromise of his debts, I am called upon still to deal seriously with the case, so as to induce some fair arrangement, and discourage a course which the law can never sanction, which daily aggravates the amount of those demands, and wastes, upon the agents for resisting them, a substance that might be better employed. If Mr. Russell does not so procure his discharge in a speedier manner, this court will discharge him in twenty-six calendar months from the present order.

BANKRUPTCY.

BRISTOL DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Mr Commissioner STEPHEN.)

Dec. 1852.

Re PHILIP JONES.

Order to redeem mortgage, out of moneys in hands of the Accountant in Bankruptcy.

The bankrupt previous to the adjudication was possessed of the equity of redemption in 100 shares in the Newport Dock Company, which he had assigned by way of mortgage to Mr. George Taylor of London, for securing the repayment of 1400*l.* and interest; and this amount, with arrear of interest, still remained due on security of the shares. The assignees had effected a sale of the shares at a price considerably above the amount due upon them on mortgage. The assets realised from the bankrupt's estate had been large, and there was a considerable sum to the credit of the estate in the hands of the Accountant in Bankruptcy.

W. Bevan, for the assignees, applied to the Court upon an affidavit stating these facts, for an order on the official assignee to obtain from the Accountant in Bankruptcy 1400*l.* out of the moneys in his hands belonging to the bankrupt's estate, and thereout to pay the principal and interest due on the dock shares to Mr. Taylor, and enable the assignees to complete the sale of the shares, and transfer them to the purchaser; and that the Court would confirm the sale.

The COURT made the order as asked, the proceeds of the sale to be paid to the official assignee.

Ordered accordingly.

Re ENGLISH AND SONS.

Absconding bankrupts—Expenses of proceedings to obtain their capture—Reward.

Where bankrupts do not surrender, and abscond, the Court will sanction and order allowance to be made to the assignees for expenses incurred by them in offering a reward, and endeavouring to effect the bankrupt's capture.

The bankrupts had been auctioneers and land agents at Bath, in extensive business; they had been adjudged bankrupts under a petition filed in this court, but had never surrendered, and absconded, taking with them considerable property and effects; and were charged with various frauds, including forgeries and other criminal offences. The assignees, in conjunction with some of the largest creditors, had used every exertion and caused diligent search to be made for the bankrupts, and had offered a reward of 100*l.* for their apprehension. Hitherto they had eluded discovery, and were supposed to have gone abroad. There were assets in the estate, and the assignees, in the proceedings they had adopted to apprehend the bankrupts and bring them before the court, had incurred expenses which would not come under the head of general allowances to them in passing their accounts; and the order of the court became necessary that they might be reimbursed what they had thus properly expended.

W. Bevan, for the assignees, applied to the court for a direction to the registrar to allow the expenses to the assignees on passing their accounts before him, to be vouched and taxed in the usual manner. A similar order had been made by Mr. Commissioner Hill in this court in Re William Wood, 19 L. T. Rep. 275. Ordered accordingly.

Re HENRY HASTINGS.

Previous bankruptcy—Not keeping cash-book.

Where creditors do not take upon themselves to oppose the allowance of a bankrupt's certificate, it must be presumed they are not dissatisfied with the bankrupt's conduct as a trader, and the Court will not place itself in the position of an opposing creditor. Therefore, where it appears the bankrupt had availed himself of the Bankrupt Laws, and had been bankrupt, and had his certificate suspended for two years for fraudulently contracting debts under a previous bankruptcy, the Court, in the absence of opposition, will not take this circumstance into consideration on the question of certificate.

But where no cash-book has been kept, this will be a ground for judicial notice by the Court, whether there be opposition or not; and, according to the universal practice in this court, the certificate will be suspended on this ground, and protection refused.

The bankrupt applied for his certificate: he was not opposed. It appeared from the files of the court that he had previously been bankrupt, and upon that occasion his certificate had been postponed for two years, on the ground of fraudulently contracting debts. There were now little or no assets, and the bankrupt had kept no cash-book, which was the only complaint reported by the official assignee.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN observed, that, in the absence of opposition, it must be presumed the creditors did not object to the bankrupt's conduct as a trader, and it was not a duty cast on the court to place itself in the position of an opposing creditor. This person had been bankrupt before, and had upon that occasion suffered the penalty of two years' suspension of his certificate for the offence of fraudulently contracting debts; but that would not now be considered by the court in granting the certificate. But the bankrupt had kept no cash-book; and of this the court, according to its universal practice, would take judicial notice, whether there be opposition or not, and suspend the certificate, for a short period, on this ground alone.

Certificate of second-class, suspended for three months; no protection.

Bribery—Proof of corrupt intention.

Elector had promised to vote for candidate A., but afterwards, having asked and been promised a situation by candidate B. (the sitting member), broke his promise to candidate A. and voted for the sitting member, but nothing was said by the latter about the vote, and no express bargain was made that the situation was to be given as a condition of the vote; and the sitting member having expressly sworn that he had no corrupt intention in procuring the situation.

Semble, it would require stronger proof of a corrupt intention to fix the sitting member with bribery.

This was a petition against Sir H. F. Smith, the sitting member, on the ground of bribery. A great variety of witnesses were called to prove acts of bribery; the sitting member also was called, who in general negatived the promises imputed to him by the other witnesses, and disavowed any intention of corrupting the voters. The general complexion of the cases was the following:—The voter had originally promised his vote for candidate A. Subsequently the sitting member, previous to the election, called on the voter, and either spontaneously, or in answer to a question, informed the latter that he (the sitting member) had influence with the Admiralty or the Government. A situation was forthwith asked, and promised to be given at some early period; but nothing passed between the parties as to the vote, and no express bargain was made that the situation was to be given in consideration of the vote. It generally happened that the voter either broke his promise to candidate A., to whom it had first been made, or did not vote at all, or voted for the sitting member. It appeared that situations had been obtained, through the sitting member, by the voters or their relations, either before or after the election. The above facts being assumed, the Committee directed one counsel of a side to argue the law which was applicable to such facts, with a view to assist the Committee in coming to a conclusion.

Kinglake, Serjt. for the petitioner.—Bribery has been described as an illegal influence of some kind acting on the voter's mind at the time of voting. This illegal influence may be produced by a gift, or a promise of money or reward, or a situation, or other valuable consideration. The question, whether the voter had antecedently promised to vote, does not at all arise; for bribery by one of the modes or inducements mentioned may well take place either before or after the promise of a vote. Further, the intention of the candidate has nothing to do with the question whether there was bribery or not; for, if the corrupt act was done, the law will conclusively fix upon the candidate the corrupt intention. The correlative proposition is also true, that the intention of the voter is immaterial in order to constitute the offence, provided only the act be done. It may be conceded that the mere giving of money, or the mere promise of a situation, or other valuable consideration, does not in itself constitute bribery, for there may be certain relations existing between the parties of prior origin, out of which the promise arises; but if it be once found that the giving of the situation has a reference to the vote, then the law attaches to the transaction the denomination of bribery. When the reward is given antecedently to the vote, no question can arise; but the difficulty is when the reward is given after the vote, for we must put the facts together and infer from them what was their mutual connexion. The sole inquiry, however, then is, not what was the intention of the parties, but whether the bribery was committed; for the law holds a man to have intended the consequences of his own acts. (The following cases and statutes were referred to:—Allen v. Hearne, 1 T. R. 56; Henslow v. Fawcett, 4 Nev. & M. 585; Harding v. Stokes, 2 M. & W. 233; 2 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 7; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 102, s. 20; Taylor on Evid. 71.)

Wrangham, Serjt. contrà.—This is not a question of law at all, but solely one of fact. It is said the Committee have nothing to do with the intention of the sitting member; but it is that alone with which the Committee have to do. The mere act of getting a situation for a voter is not in itself a criminal act; it may or may not become so according to circumstances. It is said the situation must have reference to the vote in order to constitute bribery; but if there is any meaning in this phrase, it is that the situation must be given with intent to influence the vote. The connection between the vote and the situation must be such as to bring the case within the statute; in other words, the promise of the candidate must have been with a view to corrupt the vote of the elector. Now that question is for the Committee, and them alone, to determine; and they can only satisfy themselves on the point by looking at all the circumstances, and by construing an act (which, taken by itself, is simply indifferent) with reference to the context. It is for the Committee to say whether the promise of a place, or the procuring of a place after the promise of a vote, was an innocent act or not, under the whole circumstances. A material distinction must be drawn between the case where a vote is promised after the place is promised, and the case where a vote is promised before the place, because when the vote is promised before the place the candidate then knows that nothing he can do can alter the vote, it being already beyond his influence. Besides, there can be no contract at all, corrupt or otherwise, in such a case. Then the motive of the candidate must be considered; for how can a candidate do an act to corrupt, or procure the vote of the voter, unless he intended to corrupt? No doubt, if the bare facts be proved, there may be a primâ facie case; but the presumption may be rebutted by a variety of circumstances. Thus if it were shown that there was no necessity for the member to resort to corrupt means, inasmuch as a majority of the voters were clearly in his favour from the beginning, coupled with the fact of the member himself distinctly swearing that to corrupt the voter was never in his contemplation, as is the case here, the presumption would be rebutted. Therefore the petitioners must say not only that the Committee may come to the conclusion that bribery here was practised, but that they can come to no other conclusion. Now in no case was a sitting member ever found guilty of bribery without proof of some corrupt contract between him and the voter. (2 Douglas, 400. Clerk on Elect. C. 99.) It was said the Committee have no option but to find that the sitting member was guilty of bribery, because the law says he must clearly have intended the consequences of his own acts. But that rule has its exceptions, and applies only to cases where the act is in itself illegal. (Taylor on Evid. 72.) Here the act of procuring a place for a voter is an innocent act in itself, and only becomes criminal according to circumstances. Here the intent is of the essence of the offence; and the intent must be as clearly proved as if the Committee were a jury sitting to try an indictment against the sitting member for having procured a place for a voter with intent to corrupt the voter.

Kinglake, Serjt. replied.—It is not at all necessary to prove a corrupt intention in the sitting member. The moment you have a given state of facts, the law says that bribery exists, and no jury could avoid coming to the conclusion which the law presumes. What we say is, that if it be shown that after the vote was given, a reward or place was given to the voter, and there are no circumstances shown by which you can explain the sequence of the two facts, such as relationship, long and intimate acquaintanceship, &c. except by viewing the latter in reference to some understanding which had preceded, then that is a corrupt contract, and it would be no answer to say: "I had no corrupt intention; my purpose was quite innocent." It is said your mind must be satisfied in the same degree, as if you had been trying the sitting member on an indictment; but that is not so: (Rogers on Elect. C. 259.) It was said there was no contract here at all, and that, to make it so, the reward ought to have been offered as a condition at the time of the vote being promised. But that is not the law: (Allen v. Fawcett, supra; Clerk on Elect. C. 108.) If you are satisfied that at the time of coming to the poll an influence was acting on the mind of the voter, in respect of some reward to be afterwards given, that would be sufficient to fix the parties with bribery. It is said intention is of the essence of this offence. There was, no doubt, a well-known class of offences, such as assault with intent to maim, &c. where the intent is everything; but this is not such an offence, and the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 24, does not anywhere mention the intent as at all material. The reason is obvious; for when the facts, first of the vote given at the poll in a certain manner, and then of the reward or place following that vote, are proved, the mutual nonconnection of the two facts not being explained, the law itself draws the inference that bribery existed; for by law no candidate must at the time of an election administer a reward to a voter. The best evidence of the intent of the candidate is the act itself. Cur. adv. vult.

The CHAIRMAN.—The committee have come to the following resolutions:—"That Sir J. F. Smith (the sitting member) is not duly elected a burgess to serve in the present Parliament for the burgh of Chatham. That the last election is a void election. That it was proved to the committee that Joseph Greathead, an elector at Chatham, had been bribed by a situation as letter-carrier in the General Post-office obtained for his son Charles Greathead, by or through the influence of Sir J. F. Smith."

WIGTON, 1853.

Wednesday, March 9, et seq.

(Chairman—WILLIAM MILES, Esq.)

The petition contained allegations that the sitting member, Sir John M'Taggart, and his agents, had been guilty of bribery and treating, and also prayed for a scrutiny.

Evidence, hearsay—Declaration of bribed voter.

A witness cannot be examined as to the declaration of a voter, who it is alleged had been bribed, unless it be shown that it is impossible to call the voter himself.

The subject-matter of a conversation which took place in the presence of a voter who it is alleged was bribed, and in which many persons participated, received in evidence, although the sitting member was not present on the occasion.

Where a bribed voter equivocates as to a statement which it is alleged he had made, but does not directly deny having made it, a person who overheard the conversation may, notwithstanding the rule first above laid down, be examined as to the particulars.

The counsel for the petitioner, for the purpose of proving that an elector named Watts, whose name appeared on the poll-books as one who had voted for the sitting member, had been bribed by him, asked a witness if Watts had had any conversation with the witness about the election. The witness answered that after the election Watts spoke to him about it. Counsel then asked, "Did Watts tell you why he voted for Sir John M'Taggart?"

Rowe, Q. C. (with whom was Power) objected that this question could not be put. The effect of this question would be to affect the sitting member, who is the only person concerned, with a statement made by a third person in his absence. In a scrutiny a statement made by the voter, or by another in his hearing, is admissible, because in that case the voter is a party. But where it is a case of bribery the same principle which makes it admissible in a scrutiny operates to exclude it; and in the Ipswich case, Knapp. & Omb. 387, the Committee rejected an admission by a person bribed. In Clerk on Elect. C. 110, this distinction is taken, where it is laid down that in cases of bribery the declarations of voters are not admissible. It is the declaration of one not a party, and not made under the obligation of an oath. It is a well-established principle that hearsay evidence of this description cannot be received; and the reason assigned by Mr. Justice Buller is that "if the first speech were without oath, another oath that there was such speech makes it no more than a mere speaking, and so of no value in a court of justice": (Bull. N. P. 294, C.) This evidence is open to the further objection that it is not the best evidence. The best evidence here is that of the voter himself, who must know why he voted as he did. This evidence would be rejected in any trial, whether civil or criminal He also referred to Taylor Ev. 363.

James, Q. C. (with him Slade, Q. C. and Merewether) contrà. — The question may be put. No analogy exists between this inquiry and the proceedings in civil or criminal trials. Here the question is complex; it consists of two distinct parts, upon which the Committee have separately to report. The Committee have first to find whether A., B. and C. have been bribed at the election; and, secondly, whether they have been bribed by the sitting member. This is expressly required by stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 57, which enacts that the Committee in their report "shall separately and distinctly report upon the fact or facts of bribery which shall have been proved before them; and also whether or not it shall have been proved that such bribery was committed with the knowledge and consent of any sitting member or candidate at the election." It is to the first branch of this inquiry that the question is directed; and it is admissible for the purpose of enabling the Committee to make their report upon that branch. Secondly, hearsay evidence in cases of bribery is made admissible by the enactment in the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 57, that "the Committee shall receive evidence on the whole matter wherein it is alleged that bribery has been committed." Thirdly, it is the uniform practice in Committees to receive such evidence. In the Sudbury case, Barr. & Aust. 215, the Committee determined, after full argument, that evidence of a conversation among voters might be received although neither the sitting member against whom it was adduced, nor any agent of his, was present at the time. In the Second Nottingham case, Barr. & Arn. 195, and in the Horsham case, 1848, cited in Clerk Elect. C. 110, the same point was determined. Mr. Bouverie, acting as chairman in the Bridgnorth case, 1853, 20 L. T. Rep. 295, admitted in evidence the declaration of a voter. And declarations of voters have been received in the Canterbury case, 1853, and in the Blackburn case, 1853

Rowe, Q.C. in reply.—The rule excluding this evidence is admitted. There is nothing in the statute to alter the rule: the Committee are to receive evidence "on the whole matter."—that means nothing more than evidence which lawfully may be received. They are to report separately on cases of bribery; the sitting member is not the less affected by it, or less a party to the inquiry, on that account. In the Horsham case the declaration accompanied an act. In the Nottingham case the statement of the voters was received on the ground that the subject-matter related to a corrupt transaction with an agent of the sitting member.

The CHAIRMAN.—"It is unanimously decided by the Committee that hearsay evidence ought not to be admitted, proof not having been given before the committee of the impossibility of producing the person to whom such hearsay evidence applies."

Watts himself (the elector who had conversed with the witness) was afterwards called and interrogated as to the particulars of the conversation.

For the purpose of proving that another voter, named Adamson, had been bribed, the counsel for the petitioner asked a witness as to a statement made by Adamson in a certain shop, in which he was buying cloth, and in which he stated many persons were present, and some "banter" was going on. This question was objected to as falling within the rule which the Committee had laid down in the case of Watts; and the objection was allowed by the Committee Adamson himself was thereupon called. Upon examination by the counsel for the petitioner, he was asked what the "banter" was about.

Kinglake, Serjt.—The question cannot be put. The member was absent, and the conversation does not form part of any particular corrupt transaction.

The CHAIRMAN.—This may be connected with the transaction. We think the question may be put.

Adamson, upon being pressed by the counsel for the petitioner as to whether he had not said on the occasion in question, "that he felt bound to vote for the sitting member," avoided directly answering the question, but would not swear but that he might have said so. Another of the persons who were present when the alleged statement was made was then called, and, on examination, being asked whether he had heard Adamson make any statement on that occasion, the question was objected to by Kinglake, Serjt.—This is a declaration by the person bribed in the absence of the sitting member. It infringes the rule laid down by the Committee in the case of Watts.

Slade, Q. C., contrà.—The determination of the Committee in the case of Watts would rather make this evidence admissible. Although it is only under exceptional circumstances that a party is allowed to contradict his own witness, yet, if his recollection be faint and uncertain, he may confirm and strengthen it by the testimony of others. For this purpose the witness may be examined as to the particulars of the conversation.

Kinglake, Serjt. in reply.—This is to contradict, not to confirm, Adamson's evidence.

The CHAIRMAN.—Adamson makes a statement of something which he does not deny might have occurred. The examination may be continued.

At this stage of the proceedings the petition was withdrawn. Sitting member declared duly elected.

NEW WINDSOR, 1853.

Saturday, March 12, et seq.

(Chairman—J. M. GASKELL, Esq.)

The petition contained charges of bribery and treating against the sitting member and his agents.

Evidence, hearsay—Declaration of voter alleged to have been bribed.

Evidence of a statement made by a voter alleged to have been bribed, in the absence of the sitting member, rejected.

The same objection to the admissibility of statements by voters was made in this case, and on the same grounds as already stated in Bridgnorth, 1853, 20 L. T. Rep. 295; and Wigton, 1853, supra.

Wrangham, Serjt., Merewether, and Farrer, for the sitting member.

E. James, Q. C., Kinglake, Serjt. and Power, for the petitioner.

CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are of opinion that the question cannot be put.

[NOTE.—Hearsay evidence.—As the question of the admissibility of the statements made by voters as to their voting in the absence of the sitting member is one which arises in most of these inquiries, it is desirable to state the result of the decisions of the Committees up to the present time. We have already reported two cases fully in which contrary conclusions were come to: (see Bridgnorth, 1853, 20 L. T. Rep. 295; and Wigton, 1853, supra.) As it would be useless to report future cases, where the arguments must necessarily be the same, it may suffice to record in this place the result, from which it will be seen how expedient it is, that some uniform rule should be adopted and adhered to.

The Committees in the Bridgnorth, supra, the Canterbury case, 1853, the Cambridge case, 1853, the Derby case, 1853, and the Blackburn case, 1853, have admitted the hearsay evidence referred to.

The Committees in the Guildford case, 1853, the Wigton case, 1853, supra, the Lancaster case, 1853 (20 L. T. Rep. 315), and the New Windsor case, 1853, have rejected such evidence.]

Evidence—Direction to a house of treating.

A direction given to a voter as to his going to a certain place, by a person employed to superintend "roughs" and "boardmen" at the election, admitted in evidence to show that at the place he was sent to treating was going on.

A person named Wickens, who was employed during the election by the sitting member, to see that the "roughs" and "boardmen" performed their duty, and to protect the person of voters, and who, it appeared, as well as the "roughs," attended at the doors of the committee rooms to exclude those who were not friends of the sitting member, was examined. The counsel for the sitting member asked the witness if he said anything to White, a voter, while he was going to the poll.

Wrangham, Serjt. objected that the question could not be put. The witness was not an agent of the sitting member; this is a mere conversation between a voter and a third person; and the Committee have already decided that that is not evidence. White is not on the list of persons bribed.

The CHAIRMAN.—What is the object of the question?

James, Q.C. contrà.—Wickens being a person having authority to direct voters, says something to a voter about his conduct. The object is to show that he sent a voter to a particular house where treating was going on. The question does not trench on the rule laid down by the Committee; this not being a conversation with a voter, but a direction in pursuance of an authority.

Wrangham, Serjt.—Wickens was not commissioned to hold any conversation with voters. If what he said to the voter is received, the voter's reply must also be received.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Committee are unanimously of opinion that the question may be put.

The witness having stated what he said to the voter, he was asked what the voter replied.

The CHAIRMAN.—That cannot be put.

Power.—The answer is part of the res gestæ.

The CHAIRMAN.—But does not come within our decision.

HUDDERSFIELD, 1853.

Saturday, March 5, et seq.

(Chairman—The Right Hon. S. H. WALPOLE.)

The petition in this case contained charges of bribery and treating against the sitting member and his agents.

The committee agreed upon the usual preliminary resolutions, and amongst others, upon the following—"That no witness shall be examined who shall have been in the room during any part of the proceedings."

Non-professional agent—Petitioner appearing as agent—Exclusion of witnesses from committee-room.

Where the name of a person, not a professional agent, and of another who was one of several petitioners, appeared on the petition as agents for the petitioners, their names were ordered to be struck out.

Persons who might be called as witnesses allowed to remain in the room, upon the undertaking of the party at whose request leave was obtained, not to call them as witnesses, and not to object should the other side call them.

Pickering (with whom were Alexander, Q. C., Kinglake, Serjt. and Piggott) for the sitting member, previous to the commencement of the proceedings, objected that the name of a person, who was neither a parliamentary agent nor a solicitor, was placed on the petition along with three other names, as one of the agents of the petitioners. It may be necessary for the sitting member to call this person, who is named Heaps, and is an ironmonger in Huddersfield, as a witness. It is also objectionable to retain on the petition the name of another person who appears as agent. This person is named Jones, and he is one of the petitioners. The presence of those persons during the proceedings will preclude their being called as witnesses; and their apparent character as agents prevents the sitting member requiring that they should be excluded from the room.

James, Q. C. (with whom were Wilkins, Serjt. and Wells), for the petitioners.—The local knowledge of Heaps is useful, to assist counsel in conducting the case for the petitioners. He should be allowed to remain in the room for this purpose, and I pledge myself not to call him as a witness. Jones, who is one of the petitioners, should also be allowed to remain on the same undertaking being given.

Pickering.—It will be open for the sitting member to call them.

James, Q. C.—Unless you pledge yourself to call them, it is not fair to require that they should leave the room.

Pickering.—They are hostile witnesses, and I will not pledge myself to call them. But, as they are not agents, they should not remain as agents.

CHAIRMAN.—Supposing they are struck out as agents; then, if they remain, their presence will preclude their being called as witnesses; but if the petitioners will undertake not to make the objection should they be called by the sitting member, then they may remain. In that case the sitting member would only have to object should the petitioners call them, and their testimony would be excluded.

Counsel acting on this suggestion, the names objected to were struck from the petition as agents.

WATERFORD COUNTY, 1853.

Reported by W. P. HALE, Esq Barrister-at-Law.

Friday, March 4, et seq.

(Chairman—Hon. W. O. STANLEY.)

Irish register—Loss of qualification by eviction—Evidence.

The Committee will not receive evidence of the loss of qualification on the part of a voter between the time of making out the lists from which the register is formed, and the time of polling; but will consider the register, as framed under the Irish Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, conclusive as regards the voter's right to vote.

Calcraft, Q.C. (with him Hadaldston, C. Shaw, and W. P. Hale), for the petitioners, in his opening referred particularly to the class of votes given at the last election, against which it was objected "that since the time had expired for making out the list of voters from which the register was formed, and prior to the time of polling, the voter had lost, parted with, or been evicted from their qualification either wholly or in part," and submitted that according to the law as defined by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, and the 59th sect. of the Irish Reform Act, 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, the register was really conclusive before an Election Committee with regard to all time prior to the making out of the list from which the register is formed, but that the Committee have full power to inquire into all alterations of qualification which may have occurred since that time, and prior to voting. It is clear, from sects. 1 & 3 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, taken along with sect. 85 which connects the conclusiveness of the register with the time of polling, and also from the proviso of sect. 104, that the Committee have power to go into this class of objections. But the power for which we contend is derivable also from an old provision of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, s. 59, which after declaring, that any person disqualified from voting, who shall presume to vote, shall be liable to a penalty of 100*l.*, and the vote shall be liable to be struck off by a Committee of the House of Commons. Is it a well-known principle of law that a clause, if not afterwards directly repented, can only be held to be repealed by the subsequent passing of directly contradictory enactments. Now the powers contained in 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, s. 59, are perfectly compatible with the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, s. 104, and the powers conferred by the former statute are retained by the latter: nay, it is impossible to construe either Act properly without conferring on the Committee the powers we now ask them to exercise with regard to the register.

On the vote of Denis Ahearn being proposed to be gone into on behalf of the petitioner,

F. Meagher (with whom Keogh, Serjt.), for the sitting member, objected.—It is said a scrutiny existed at the time of polling as to the passing of the present Act; but that was abolished by the Irish Reform Act, sect. 54. The entire question, however, here is, what is the meaning of the term "legal incapacity" in 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, s. 104? Unless it is synonymous with disqualification, the argument on the other side is worth nothing; and the term is used in a different sense in the early portion of the Act, where it means a purely personal matter affecting an individual. The first section confers a qualification for voting on every male person of full age not subject to any legal incapacity, in addition to those now entitled to vote in respect of any qualification not requiring occupation; and the 3rd section is said to be prohibitory of all other persons voting at any election. The truth is that up to this Act there existed a 10*l.* franchise, which, both with freeholders and leaseholders, required occupation. There was also a 20*l.* and a 50*l.* franchise, neither of which required occupation. The 1st section therefore of this Act preserves the 20*l.* and 50*l.* non-occupation franchises; whilst the 3rd section destroys the 10*l.* franchise—not being a disqualifying section with regard to the 1st section, but with regard to the old 10*l.* occupation franchise, for which is substituted a franchise founded on a 12*l.* annual voting. The 59th clause of the Irish Reform Act, quoted on the other side, does but beg the question, which is, "Is or is not the voter disqualified under the circumstances?" The object of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69 was to simplify elections, by ascertaining the state of the franchise on a fixed day, and that franchise, when so ascertained, was to last for one year; in any other case the old powers of the assistant barrister to put a name on the register, if claimed at any one of his quarterly courts, would properly have been retained; and it would be unjust that a man should only have the power of registration once a year, unless he was to have the franchise, when registered, certainly for the year. The right of voting in this instance clearly depends on the possession of the qualification on the 15th Nov., the day before the lists closed, otherwise the barrister might have entertained the objection at any one of his courts; but the period for inquiry into this is by sect. 55 limited to six months previous to the day of registration or revision. The object of the Act is shown to be what has been above mentioned from other sections—sects. 15, 16, and 17—which furnish a perfect machinery for making the register. The register then is purged, and shows the persons possessing the right of voting, excluding those who have lost it; and sects. 18, 63, 85, and 86, make it quite clear that the franchise conferred by this Act is a continuous franchise for the year. If this be not so, we have an enactment making the register final at an election, but not final on an appeal from that election; whereas all rights which can exist in an appeal are also held necessarily to exist in the inferior court. But, after all, the question must be decided on the interpretation of sect. 104, which enacts that the legal incapacity, to have any effect, must exist at the time of the election, not only have existed between the time of making out the lists and that of the election. The reason of this is that a temporary incapacity to vote may arise from the tenure of office and such like; but it would be manifestly unfair to deprive a man of the franchise for good because he had become legally incapable for a time. The use of the term, as before shown, cannot be reconciled with such a construction in the first section; and what is the meaning of the term in one section must be taken to apply to it in others. The fact also of the third question, which was permitted by the Reform Act, as to the qualification at the time of voting being the same as that possessed at the time of the registration, having been abolished by this Act, is clear proof that the franchise was intended to be continuous; for we cannot suppose the Legislature to have intended to reserve for the expensive process of a petition the very powers of objection which it destroyed at the time of election, and to have intended the question then to be raised which ought not previously be raised.

Calvert, contrà.—We admit we are come to the question what is "legal incapacity," and what is the import of the term in the 104th section. The conclusion the other side have come to is at variance with the English and Irish Act. The question of continued residence is, in the English, expressly excepted from the conclusive character of the register under 6 Vict. c. 18, s. 79. Under the words "legal incapacity created by statute," English Committees have gone into the question of residence, which clearly means residence at the time of voting, and this only is in the jurisdiction of the House of Commons, and the want of it is a legal incapacity, not in the terms of sect. 1, but of sect. 104. The question arises, how far the register is conclusive; and the other side have explained the machinery for making the register; but is this the conclusive register? If so, what becomes of the 104th section? But the argument, if good for anything, must go thus far, and the vice of the argument is that it proves too much. The 20th section of the Irish Reform Act declared that the voter at the poll should swear that he had the same qualification then as that for which he was registered. Hence the Act made the register only conclusive, subject to the provisions of the statute; and one clause of this Act must be construed by another—that is, the register here is the register for the year, save so far as the other clauses of the Act prevent its being conclusive. The language of the 1st section points out, first, the conditions for voting; secondly, the conditions for registration—that is, if the man has the qualification he shall be entitled to vote. The revising barrister has power to inquire into the qualification up to the time of closing the lists; but, subsequent to that period, the inquiry must vest in some other tribunal, which is a Committee of the House of Commons. As to the 10*l.* franchise mentioned on the other side, there is not a word in the Act respecting such occupying voters, and the argument attempted to be raised confines words which are general in their meaning, and imports words not expressed, while it passes over others which are expressed. If the Committee have doubts as to their powers of inquiry under the last Irish Act, they are still bound to go into the objection under the old clause of the Irish Reform Act. [The CHAIRMAN.—Why was the oath and the third question destroyed?] Because the tribunal which carried on the scrutiny was destroyed, and the oath was therefore abolished as well. If the register, by sect. 85, is entirely conclusive, from sects. 87 and 104 it goes too far; and by sect. 104 the Committee may inquire into questions of disqualification raised and determined before the revising barrister, questions of legal incapacity arising by statute, and those of legal incapacity of any other kind. Under the last head would come questions of lunacy, minority, and such like; but those arising from offices, as mentioned on the other side, are created by statute. The sitting member, in his objections, calls this loss of qualification a legal incapacity, and the term exactly suits the requirements of the 3rd section. The revising barrister may go into questions of legal incapacity, though only empowered to inquire into qualification by the Act, but, for the purposes of this Act, legal incapacity comes under the qualification provisions; and legal incapacity by statute arises from not complying with the requisitions of the 1st section, one of which is occupation at the time of polling.

Meagher, in reply.—The 3rd clause of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, if a disqualifying clause at all, must be so at the time of the election; but in such a case we find it expressly provided that the register at that time is conclusive evidence of the parties' right to vote. The fact of one party having used the term "legal incapacity" in their objections cannot possibly determine the construction of an Act of Parliament which is to govern other cases, and must be construed by itself.

Cur. adv. vult.

CHAIRMAN.—"The Committee have resolved, that they will not go into evidence in support of the objection to this class of voters."

Petition thereupon abandoned.

COURT PAPERS.

THE PATENT LAW AMENDMENT NEW RULES AND REGULATIONS.—The first set of rules and regulations under the new Act for the passing of letters patent for inventions, and which come into operation on the 1st October, have just been issued under the authority of the Lord Chancellor, Master of the Rolls, and Attorney and Solicitor Generals, the four commissioners under the Act. They set forth for the information of inventors and patentees, that a commodious office is forthwith intended to be provided by the Crown as the Great Seal Patent Office, and that the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury have appointed such office as the office also for the purposes of the new Act. All petitions for the grant of letters patent, and all declarations and provisional specifications, are to be left at the commissioners' office, written on paper of twelve inches in length by eight and a half inches in breadth, on each side of each page, in order that they may be bound in the books to be kept in the office. Every provisional protection of an invention allowed by the law officer is to be forthwith advertised in the London Gazette, setting forth the name and address of the petitioner, the title of his invention, and date of application. Every invention protected by reason of the deposit of a complete specification, is also to be similarly advertised, and that a complete specification has been deposited. Where a petitioner applying for letters patent after provisional protection, or after deposit of a complete specification, gives notice at the office of his intention to proceed, he is to advertise in like manner, and any persons having an interest in opposing such application are to be at liberty to leave particulars of their objection to the application at the office of the commissioners within twenty-one days after. The charge for office or other copies of documents is to be at the rate of 2d. for every ninety words. Fees of 2*l.* 12s. 6d. to the law officer, of 12s. 6d. to his clerk, and 5s. to his clerk for summons, are to be paid in each of the following cases: by a person opposing a grant of letters patent; by a petitioner on the hearing of the case of opposition; by the petitioner for the hearing previous to the fiat of the law officer allowing a disclaimer on memorandum of alteration in letters patent and specification; by the person opposing the allowance of such disclaimer on the hearing; and of 3*l.* 3s. to the law officer, and 12s. 6d. to his clerk, by the petitioner for the fiat, allowing disclaimer or alteration. All specifications in pursurnce of the conditions of letters patent, and all complete specifications accompanying petitions and declarations before grant of letters patent, are to be filled in the Great Seal Patent Office, written on sheets of parchment 18 inches by 12, with a margin of 1½ inch, but the drawings, if any, may be made on larger sheets of parchment.

NECROLOGY

OF LEGISLATORS, MAGISTRATES, AND LAWYERS.

JOHN CAMDEN NEILD, ESQ.

A FEW days ago died in Chelsea, Mr. John Camden Neild, of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, aged 72 years. He was possessed of an immense fortune, but was of very eccentric and penurious habits. At the death of his father, thirty years since, he came into possession of about 250,000*l.* which sum had not been touched up to the period of his death. The deceased was never known to wear a great coat. He usually dressed in a blue coat, with metal buttons, which he prohibited being brushed, as it would take off the nap and deteriorate its value. He held considerable landed property in Kent and in Bucks, and was always happy to receive an invitation from his tenantry to visit them, which he occasionally did, often remaining a month at a time, as he was thus enabled to add to his savings. His appearance and manners led strangers to imagine that he was in the lowest verge of penury, and their compassion was excited in his behalf, an instance of which may be mentioned. Just before the introduction of the railway system of travelling, the deceased had been on a visit to some of his estates, and was returning to London, when the coach stopped at Farningham. With the exception of our miser the passengers all retired to the inn. Missing their coach companion, and recollecting his decayed appearance, they conceived he was in distressed circumstances, and accordingly a sum was subscribed, and a bumping glass of brandy and water kindly sent out to the "poor" gentleman, which he thankfully accepted. Many instances of a similar character might be related. A few days before his death the deceased told one of his executors that he had made a most singular will, but as the property was his own he had done as he pleased with it. The executors are the Keeper of the Privy Purse for the time being (Dr. Tattan) and Mr. J. Stevens, of Willesborough. After bequeathing a few very trifling legacies, the deceased has left the whole of his immense fortune to "Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, begging her Majesty's most gracious acceptance of the same, for her sole use and benefit, and of her heirs," &c. The property is estimated at upwards of 500,000*l.* For some years past Mr. Neild has scarcely allowed himself the common necessaries and comforts of life, and has left a poor old housekeeper, who was with him for more than twenty-six years, without the smallest provision or acknowledgment for her protracted and far from agreeable or remunerative services.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received

FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:

"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan. 10, 1852.

"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it largely, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.

"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."

N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.

The GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES, 19, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

SHOOTING SEASON.—B. COGSWELL, Gun, Rifle, and Pistol Maker, of 224, Strand, near Temple bar (Established 1776), begs to inform gentlemen his Stock for the Season comprises a large variety of best Guns by the following eminent makers: Purdey, Lancaster, William Moore, Charles Moore, Forsyth, Manton, Boss, Westley Richards, and many others. A pair of very best Guns, by John Manton, in case complete. Joyces and Clays' Sporting Ammunition. Sykes' Shooting Apparatus of every description.

A large Stock of Second-hand Guns, well adapted for keepers, from five guins as each.

A liberal allowance in cash or exchange for superior work of every description.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 194, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr. W. TINDEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 312, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever. Fitting with so much ease and closeness, it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WILTE, 229, Piccadilly.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1*l.* 1s. sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly-invented preserving Spectacles, suitable and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S. and B. HOUGHTON, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

HOBSON, Brothers, tailors, established 1796, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new PATTERNS in AUTUMN TROUSERS are now most complete; among which will be found some very choice French elastic buckskin for riding-trousers from 23s. to 28s. per pair; also the new Melton mixed cloths for shooting-jackets, 25s.; the Australian lambskin, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 13s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, Brothers, 4, Finsbury-place South, and 57, Lombard-street, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.—Used in the Royal Laundry and Wotherspoon's Steam-made Confections. Sold by all grocers and druggists.

Glasgow—R. WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, Dunlop-street.

London—WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, King William-street, City.

ANOTHER CURE of FOUR YEARS' ASTHMA by Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.—MATILDA SHAW, of Harrington, has been severely afflicted with Asthma for four years, so that she could only lie in one position in bed; after taking three boxes of Dr. Locock's Wafers, she is so far cured as to be able to lie in any posture without pain or inconvenience, and can walk any reasonable pace or distance, and carry a load into the bargain. Her testimony is, that for the relief and cure of asthma the Wafers are invaluable. Witness, E. SQUIRE, Bookseller, Louth February 28, 1852.—To singers and public speakers they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice. Price 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. and 11s. per box. Sold by all druggists.

Also, Dr. LOCOCK'S ANTIBILIOUS WAFERS, a mild and gentle Aperient Medicine, having a most agreeable taste.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility by the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850 price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.
Copyright Amendment Act.	Statute Law Improvement Act.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S offices, in search of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts two-fold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and conch funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 1l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for the gentry. Assistants' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's 6l. 6s. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; Hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-field: Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—FURNITURE and every description of property carefully PACKED, Removed, and Warehoused in extensive fire-proof well-ventilated Warehouses, at charges below any similar establishment. It is the most extensive depository of the kind, and the best adapted to its purpose. Estimates given free of cost. Separate rooms if desired. Every information and ample references on application to Mr. HARRIS'S, at the Chancery-lane Receipt Repository, adjoining Cubitt's Pimlico-pier. Water-side Manufacturing Premises and Cellars to be Let.

THE ONLY STOVE WITHOUT A FLUE, for which her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent have been granted. Plain, from 12s. to 25s.; Ornamented, from 31s. 6d. to Six Guineas.

Prospectuses, with drawings and report, forwarded free.
STANDS FOR STOVES, 2s. 6d. 3s. and 3s. EACH.
CAUTION.—An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor, in the case of Nash v. Carman, restraining the defendant from making or selling any colourable imitation of the plaintiff's Stove or fuel, the public is respectfully informed, that the original "Joyce's Patent Stove without a Flue, and the prepared Fuel," can only be obtained from SWAN NASH, or his authorised Agents Every genuine Stove has the name and address of the proprietor on a brass plate, "SWAN NASH, No. 253, Oxford-street."

Joyce's Patent for Warming Halls, Passages, Greenhouses, Water Closets, Shops, Store-rooms, and all places requiring artificial warmth.

PATENT PREPARED FUEL for the Stoves, 2s. 6d. per bushel, only genuine with the proprietor's name and seal on the sack.

S. NASH, 253, Oxford-street, and 119, Newgate-street

SHOOTING SEASON, 1852.—F. JOYCE'S Anti-corrosive PERCUSSION CAPS.—Sportsmen are respectfully informed that these Primers, which have stood the test of thirty years' trial, and used exclusively by the first Shots in the kingdom, are still manufactured on scientific principles, and with the best composition and machinery, no expense being spared to render them worthy of the distinguished patronage they have so long received; may be obtained as usual of all respectable Gunmakers in the United Kingdom. To prevent accident and disappointment to purchasers, from the use of spurious imitations, they are requested to observe the name and address of "F. JOYCE, ORIGINAL INVENTOR and SOLE MANUFACTURER," on each sealed packet, without which they are not genuine. This precaution is rendered necessary, by some unprincipled individuals having imitated the labels and wrappers. JOYCE'S Improved Wire Cartridges and chemically-prepared Waddings of a superior description.—Wholesale Warehouse, 97, Upper Thames-street, London

EPSOM, SURREY.—Freehold Villas and Building Ground, near the Railway Station.

MR. ORPWOOD will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 29, at TWELVE, in Six Lots, the following important FREEHOLD PROPERTY, delightfully situate fifteen miles from London, in the proverbially healthful town of Epsom, a short distance from its far-famed race-course, viz. three genteel, semi-detached, twelve roomed villa residences, respectably tenanted, and producing 120l. per annum. Also, valuable building land, directly opposite the railway terminus. Viewable by tenant's permission, and particulars obtainable at the Railway Tavern, Epsom; and in London of Messrs. C. and G. H. CLARK, Solicitors, 28, Finsbury-place; the Auctioneer, Mr. ORPWOOD, Artillery-place, Finsbury-square; and at the Auction Mart.

DENBIGHSHIRE and SHROPSHIRE.—Valuable Freehold Estates.—By Mr. R. W. JOHNSON, on FRIDAY, the 15th of OCTOBER next, at Three o'clock in the afternoon, at the WYNNSTAY ARMS HOTEL, WREXHAM, in the county of Denby (unless previously disposed of by private contract, of which due notice will be given), either together or separately, and subject to conditions to be then produced.

THE highly valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, called "Pen y Lan," situate three miles from the Ruabon Station on the Shrewsbury and Chester Railway, comprising an excellent mansion-house, with offices of every description, lodge entrance, gardens, pleasure grounds, woods and plantations, forming fine covers for game; together with 1033 acres of good meadow, arable, and pasture LAND, be the same more or less, and divided into several convenient farms. According to the reports of eminent mining engineers, there are very valuable beds of coal and other minerals under this estate.

Also, an excellent FARM, called "Flamog and Cadeidw," situate in the parishes of Ellesmere and St. Martin, Shropshire, and contiguous to the first-named estate, between which the river Dee flows, and affords good fishing. It comprises a good farm-house, and outbuildings of every description (the latter of which have lately been entirely rebuilt), and 168 acres, more or less, of meadow, arable, pasture, and wood LAND, belonging thereto. The land on both sides of the river, including the extensive covers, is celebrated for the variety of game.—The estates may be viewed by permission of the tenants; and particulars may be had, in London, on application to DANIEL SMITH ROCKETT, Esq. Solicitor, 60, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and WILLIAM JONES, Esq. Solicitor, 3, Serjeants'-inn, Temple; and, in the country, of RICHARD BOWERMAN, Esq. Solicitor, Uffculm, Devonshire; of the Auctioneer; at the Wynnstay Arms Hotel, Wrexham; and of Messrs. JONES and RYMER, Solicitors, Wrexham.

DEVONSHIRE, near SOUTH MOLTON.—Valuable Freehold Estate.

MR. W. H. HEWITT will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER the 14th, 1852, at Twelve o'clock, in one lot, all that highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, and celebrated Grazing, Dairy, and Sheep Farm, called KITCOT Barton, situate in the parish of Romansleigh, near South Molton, in the county of Devon; consisting of a convenient farm-house, with a most complete range of outbuildings and farm appendages, all in thorough repair, and about 394 acres of valuable water meadow, and rich pasture, arable, and orchard land, all within a ring fence. This estate is distant about sixteen miles from Tiverton; five miles from South Molton, on the new turnpike road; and about the same distance from the Collaton Station, on the North Devon Railway. It is in the midst of a fine sporting country and beautiful scenery, and is approached in every direction by good roads. The attention of capitalists is directed to this property, which presents a rare opportunity either for occupation or investment, and is also well adapted for the erection of a country-seat.—Full printed particulars, with lithographic plans, may be had twenty one days before the day of sale, at the Fortescue Arms, Barnstable; the Three Cups Hotel, Tiverton; the George Hotel, at South Molton; at the Auction Mart; also of the Auctioneer, at his Offices, 11, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, London; at Butler's Reading-room, Shaftesbury; and at the Office of J. FARLEY RUTTER, Solicitor, Shaftesbury.

STOCKLAND, near HONITON.—TO be SOLD by PUBLIC AUCTION, by

MR. RICHARD WARR, at the CHARD ARMS HOTEL, in CHARD, on THURSDAY, the 7th day of OCTOBER next, at Eight o'clock in the afternoon, a compact and desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, comprising a Farm House, with convenient Outbuildings; and about 168a. 2r. 20p. of productive orchard, meadow, pasture, arable, and woodland; situate in the said parish of Stockland, and now in the occupation of Mr. Henry Virgin, as tenant. The estate is equi-distant from the important market towns of Chard and Honiton; is situated in a most picturesque and attractive neighbourhood, and abounds with game.—For a view of the premises, application may be made to the Tenant, and for further particulars, to Messrs. SLADE and VIRING, Solicitors, Yeovil.

CHANCERY-LANE.—TO BE LET, the UPPER PART of a respectable HOUSE, consisting of lofty sitting-room, kitchen, and scullery, on the first floor, three or four bed-rooms, water-closet, and other conveniences. Rent 40l. per annum.

Apply to Mr. REID, 5, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane.

LEEDS BOROUGH SESSIONS.—Notice is hereby given, that the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the Borough of Leeds, in the County of York, will be holden before Thomas Flower Ellis, esquire, Recorder of the said Borough, at the Court House, in Leeds aforesaid, on Wednesday, the Twenty-seventh day of October next, at Twelve of the clock at Noon; at which time and place all persons summoned as Grand Jurors; and also all Prosecutors, Witnesses, Persons bound by Recognisances, Police Officers, and Constables, are required to attend.

And Notice is hereby also given, that all Persons summoned to the said Court of Quarter Sessions as Petty Jurors, are required to give their attendance at the place aforesaid, at Half-past Twelve of the clock at Noon of the said Twenty-seventh day of October next.

And Notice is hereby also given, that all Appeals will be tried and all Proceedings under the Highway Acts will be heard at the opening of the Court, on the First Day of the said Sessions, and that the List of such Appeals will be called over by the Clerk of the Peace, at Half-past Twelve of the clock at Noon; and that all Appeals which the parties shall not then appear, by themselves or Counsel, will be struck out. And that all such Appeals and proceedings as aforesaid as shall not be disposed of on the First Day of the said Sessions will be taken as soon as the Criminal Business of the said Sessions shall be concluded.

And notice is hereby also given, that all Appeals to be entered for trial at these Sessions must be entered with the Clerk of the Peace before the opening of the Court on the first day of the said Sessions, unless the contrary shall be allowed by the Court on motion by counsel, or in case of absence of counsel by attorney, on special grounds stated and duly verified.

And notice is hereby also given, that all Appellants against Orders of Removal to which the statute 11th and 12th Victoria, chap. 31, is applicable, are required at the time of entering the appeal with the Clerk of the Peace to file with him a copy of the order of removal, of the notice of chargeability, of the statement of the grounds of removal, and of the grounds of appeal.

By order,
JAMES RICHARDSON, Clerk of the Peace for the said Borough of Leeds.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEES.—Amongst the first duties of the new House of Commons will be that of appointing its various officers. We are not about to speculate upon the way in which this routine business will be got through, but we cannot refrain from an observation upon one appointment which the initiated say, "looms in the future." We refer to the anticipated election of the Right Hon. M. T. Baines to the post left vacant by Mr. Bernal. Mr. Baines has, indeed, been named for a higher office, and there are many well-qualified judges who believe him destined yet to fill the office of Speaker; but meanwhile his name is mentioned in connection with the chairmanship, to which we unfeignedly hope he will be elected. Mr. Baines's qualifications are in all respects such as would guarantee an efficient public service. In everything relating to precedents and questions of form, he is up to the mark; whilst the urbanity of his manners, and his general ability, are all that could be desired. We hope that the mention of Mr. Baines's name is something more than an on dit; or, if at present nothing more, we shall count ourselves as only discharging a public obligation by seriously recommending an appointment that could not fail to give perfect satisfaction to all parties.

On Thursday week, Richard Sill, the attorney, was brought up for judgment. He has been endeavouring since his conviction to prove by affidavits that he is innocent; but has not yet succeeded. He made a long speech on Thursday, asserting that when a motion should be made to strike him off the rolls, he should have an opportunity of proving that he had been convicted wrongly. The Recorder said he fully concurred in the verdict of the jury; and sentenced Sill to be imprisoned for two years, with hard labour.

N.B. This work is designed to describe minutely the Practice of Advocacy, and for Attorneys as well as for the Bar.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by these protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly-written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication: and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest rate possible. Decayed teeth rendered useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner.—hair never comes loose, is Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair: improved clothes-brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet-Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.

AT METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.

CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder, 2*s.* per box.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1850. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 13s. calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850. price 7s. 6d. and 1851. price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Protection of Lunatics Act, 1853 (Extension of Term).	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.

A pair of very best Guns, by John Manton, in case complete. Joyces and Clays' Sporting Ammunition. Sykes' Shooting Apparatus of every description.

A large Stock of Second-hand Guns, well adapted for keepers, from five guineas each.

A liberal allowance in cash or exchange for superior work of every description.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Manchester Manufactory), 104, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr. W. TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 213, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Suspensories, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

HOBSON, Brothers, tailors, established 1796, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new PATTERNS in AUTUMN TROUSERS are now most complete; among which will be found some very choice French elastic beaverkin for riding-trousers from 22*s.* to 25*s.* per pair; also the new Melton mixed cloths for shooting-jackets, 20*s.*; the Australian lambskin, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 12*s.* Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, Brothers, 4, Finsbury-place South, and 57, Lombard-street, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

BERDOE'S WATERPROOF OVERCOATS and SHOOTING-JACKETS.—A very large stock of superior garments, in every improved material and style, and of every degree of warmth or lightness, guaranteed to resist any amount of rain, kept for selection, at charges reduced to the lowest point consistent with the principle that an article to be really cheap must be good. Every size also of the Waterproof Paletot, the well-known Night Overcoat for all seasons, price 42*s.* Riding and Driving Capes, Leggings, Boys' Overcoats and Capes. Also, Cloaks, Mantles, Rabbs, &c. for ladies, all thoroughly impervious to rain, without obstructing free ventilation, the first objection to all other waterproofs.

W. BERDOE, Tailor and Overcoat Maker, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill (only).

Dated this 22nd day of June, 1852.

HENRY CAREY, Secretary.

These lands will be sold free of quit rent, and subject only to a tithe rent charge of 36l. 13s. 7½d. on the entire of the estate. The estate and demesne of Castlegrove is situate on the mail coach road running from Tuam to Castlebar, and within five miles of the former town. The land is of excellent quality. The demesne contains 207a. 0r. 35p. statute measure, or 197a. 3r. 37p. Irish plantation measure, well laid out, and wooded with old and young plantations, and is an excellent farm either for pasture or tillage. The mansion house was erected within the last twelve years, and is in every respect suitable for a nobleman or gentleman of fortune, and contains every requisite and convenience usual in a modern first-rate residence. The offices are extensive and commodious; there is a good walled-in garden and orchard, and attached to the estate is an extensive tract of bog, which from its situation is very valuable for the purpose of turbary, and also presents every facility for reclamation, being placed upon a bed of limestone gravel. Several families of distinction reside in the neighbourhood, which has been at all times remarkably quiet and peaceable. —For rentals and particulars of sale, apply to Messrs. CARNEW and WHITELOCK, Solicitors, 4, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, London; or WILLIAM DIX and SON, Solicitors having carriage of the order for sale, 35, Gardiner's-place, Dublin.

DEVONSHIRE, near SOUTH MOLTON.—Valuable Freehold Estate.

MR. W. H. HEWITT will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER the 14th, 1852, at Twelve o'clock, in one lot, all that highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, and celebrated Grazing, Dairy, and Sheep Farm, called Kitcott Barton, situate in the parish of Romansleigh, near South Molton, in the county of Devon; consisting of a convenient farm-house, with a most complete range of outbuildings and farm appendages, all in thorough repair, and about 324 acres of valuable water meadow, and rich pasture, arable, and orchard land, all within a ring fence. This estate is distant about sixteen miles from Tiverton; five miles from South Molton, on the new turnpike-road; and about the same distance from the Coliton Station, on the North Devon Railway. It is in the midst of a fine sporting country and beautiful scenery, and is approached in every direction by good roads. The attention of capitalists is directed to this property, which presents a rare opportunity either for occupation or investment, and is also well adapted for the erection of a country-seat.—Full printed particulars, with lithographic plans, may be had twenty-one days before the day of sale, at the Fortescue Arms, Barnstable; the Three Cups Hotel, Tiverton; the George Hotel, at South Molton; at the Auction Mart; also of the Auctioneer, at his Offices, 11, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, London; at Rutter's Reading-room, Shaftesbury; and at the Office of J. FARLEY RUTTER, Solicitor, Shaftesbury.

Freehold Building Land at Staines, Middlesex.

MESSRS. DAVIS and VIGERS are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, at TWELVE for ONE, in lots, four acres of BUILDING FRONTAGE, upon a capital road, near to the town of Staines, and within two minutes' walk of the railway station. A healthy gravel soil and very delightful country, perfectly rural, with good fishing close at hand, and yet within an easy distance from the metropolis. With these attractions and advantages residences in the neighbourhood are much sought for, and command good rents.—Further particulars, with plans of the estate, may be had of Messrs. ABBOT and WHEATLY, Staines, and 23 A, Southampton-buildings, Holborn; at the Mart; and Auctioneers' Offices, 3, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received

FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:

"Office of Works, Woburn-part, Jan. 10, 1852.

"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it lately, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.

"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."

N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE RECENT REFORMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Such, as stated in your leading article (pages 13 and 14) of the 2nd October, may be the "results of the recent Law Reforms"—there may be an increase of business which will produce increased emolument to the attorney. Should this be the case, there will be increased labour and responsibility, and he will require additional assistance which he must remunerate; unless, therefore, the attorney has hitherto been extravagantly paid, there ought to be a correspondent increase in the scale of charges; and as independently of the necessity for alteration in the attorney's charges, created by the changes in the practice above referred to, the system or mode of charging in attorneys' bills has long been felt unsatisfactory both by client and attorney, the present will be an excellent opportunity for effecting the desired improvement, and as your agitating the question in your widely circulated journal will be the means of eliciting opinions upon this important topic, and will assist our law societies, through which the object must be attained, I shall be glad if you can find space for this introductory letter on the subject.

Not only will the recent changes render necessary an alteration in the scale of charges as between attorney and client, but a new arrangement will likewise be required as between attorney and agent; it seems to me quite out of the question that the principle hitherto acted upon can be longer continued; in the olden time, when special originals abounded—when the great majority of actions at Common Law required special bail and justification—when there were half-a-dozen formal counts in every declaration, and upon a marine policy there were as many actions as there were underwriters, and the same could not be consolidated until after declaration filed—at almost every stage of the proceeding a motion of course, and when the end of the action only gave rise to a writ of error, it might be very well for the London agent to do all the work, and to divide the profits with his principal in the country; but that this should have been continued to be done for the last twenty years has been to me at least a matter of surprise. One consequence has been, to throw agency business into a few large offices, the profits being so exceedingly small, that unless there was a great deal of business it was not worth having. A few years ago there were many fire insurance offices; but for the above reason—small profits and large risks—they have fallen away; and though the business of fire insurance has increased a hundredfold, it is all swallowed up by a few leviathan offices.

"The labourer is worthy of his hire:" and as in a country like England, of great wealth and business, there is no more useful or necessary man than the attorney and solicitor, and upon his honour, respectability, and industry the security, comfort, and happiness of all are in no small degree dependent, it is most wise and politic that this labourer should be properly paid; and beyond a fair and reasonable remuneration, and the confidence and good opinion of his clients, no respectable professional man desires anything.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In the Times of Saturday last I observe an advertisement from the Provident Life Office (one of the old ones), containing the following paragraph:

"The next division of profits will take place at the close of this year, 1852, and thenceforth periodically at the end of each five years, instead of seven as heretofore."

Here is another instance of the beneficial effect of new offices, in compelling the old ones to give more liberal terms to the assured.

ARTICLED CLERKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—A few weeks ago, you inserted in your valuable paper a letter of mine, wherein I made a few remarks on the beneficial results that would accrue to the law students generally throughout the kingdom, from the formation of what I termed a "Mutual Corresponding Society." My proposition was, that essays should be written by the various members, and the best of such should be inserted in a magazine published for the purpose. This work should also contain essays on various branches of the law, under the heads Conveyancing, &c. &c. and they should be written in a style void of all the technicalities which so usually embarrass the young clerk on first entering upon his legal studies. Advice on choice of books, &c. should here be introduced, and I have no doubt but that the advantages of such a work would be very great as being rather under the control of articled clerks they would choose only such matter as would really be beneficial to them. They would thus have a periodical which might be truely called The Law Students' Magazine, a desideratum which has hitherto remained unsupplied. I propose that this work should be published quarterly, or otherwise, as might be thought best, and therefore any advice which you can give, as well as the suggestions of other articled clerks, will be thankfully received by

A LAW STUDENT.

PROFESSIONAL PROTECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Professional men are dependent upon health for income. If they become incapacitated by disease or age, they lose their livelihood when they most want help. I have lately discovered a means of protecting myself against this contingency, to which all of us who work with the head are so liable. I learned accidentally that the "Law Property Assurance Office" had introduced such a form of assurance, and on application I found that by paying the trifling sum of only four pounds a year, I could obtain an annuity of 100*l.* a year for the rest of my life, should I at any time become incapacitated for business by disease or old age. I gladly availed myself of the protection thus cheaply bought, and it has been such a source of satisfaction to myself that I cannot refrain from making it known to my brethren in the law, that they may make themselves equally secure against the consequences of age or sickness.

Asking a corner in your excellent journal for this communication,

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

THE DIRECTORS of the GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY are desirous of Lending Parties Assuring in the Office 30,000l. in Loans of 100l. and upwards, on any of the undermentioned securities; viz.—Freeholds, Copyholds, or Leaseholds, Life interests, and Reversions, also on sufficient Personal Security. For further information apply either at the Chief Offices, No. 37, Old Jewry, London; or to any of the Society's Agents in the provinces.

The usual Commission will be allowed on Policies.

THOMAS ALFRED POTT, Secretary.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1786, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 2l. 10s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for autumn trousers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trousers, from 23s. to 28s. per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 13s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 57, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

THE ONLY STOVE WITHOUT A FLUE, for which her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent have been granted. Plain, from 12s. to 25s.; Ornamented, from 31s. 6d. to Six Guineas.

Prospectuses, with drawings and report, forwarded free.

STANDS FOR STOVES, 2s. 6d. 3s. and 5s. EACH.

CAUTION.—An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor, in the case of Nash v. Carmen, restraining the defendant from making or selling any colourable imitation of the plaintiff's Stove or fuel, the public is respectfully informed, that the original "Joyce's Patent Stove without a Flue, and the prepared Fuel," can only be obtained from SWAN NASH, or his authorised Agents. Every genuine Stove has the name and address of the proprietor on a brass plate, "SWAN NASH, No. 253, Oxford-street."

Joyce's Patent for Warming Halls, Passages, Greenhouses, Water Closets, Shops, Store-rooms, and all places requiring artificial warmth.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 194, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.

Terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr. W. TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 312, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received

FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:
"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan. 10, 1852.

"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it largely, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.

"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."

N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for Joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.

VINAIGRE DE BORDEAUX.

"DEAR SIRS, "College of Chemistry, Liverpool.

"The Cask of French Wine Vinegar came safely to hand. I have submitted it to analysis, and find it to be perfectly pure, i. e. it only contains those matters which are in all fermented grape juices. It is very much liked in my house, being a most agreeable acid.

"The reason of my sending to you for Vinegar was on account of the dreadful mixtures sold here under that name. Some of the samples I examined contained sugar, oil of vitriol, and arsenic.

"Yours truly,

Now ready.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852 Edited with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s. calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the Anglish Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Protection of Institutions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by these protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly-written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

DEVONSHIRE, near SOUTH MOLTON.—Valuable Freehold Estate.

MR. W. H. HEWITT will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER the 14th, 1858, at Twelve o'clock, in one lot, all that highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, and celebrated Grazing, Dairy, and Sheep Farm, called Ellcott Barton, situate in the parish of Romansleigh, near South Molton, in the county of Devon; consisting of a convenient farm-house, with a most complete range of outbuildings and farm appendages, all in thorough repair, and about 30 acres of valuable timber, wood, and plantation, arable, and orchard land, all within a ring fence. This estate is distant about sixteen miles from Tiverton; five miles from South Molton, on the new turnpike-road; and about the same distance from the Collaton Station, on the North Devon railway. It is in the midst of a fine sporting country and beautiful scenery, and in open view in every direction by good roads. The attention of capitalists is directed to this property, which presents a rare opportunity either for occupation or investment, and is also well adapted for the erection of a country-seat. Full printed particulars, with lithographic plans, may be had twenty-one days before the day of sale, at the Ferrisons Arms, Barnstaple; the Three Cups Hotel, Tiverton; the George Hotel, at South Molton; of the Auction Mart; also of the Auctioneer, at his Offices, 11, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, London; at Rutter's Reading-rooms, Shaftesbury; and at the Office of J. FARLEY RUTTER, Solicitor, Shaftesbury.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has, in like all the requisites, but at enormously inflated charges. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and two mourning coaches, with drivers, feathers, and every necessary attendant, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate hearse, 2l. 2s. for a gentleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, with feathers and plume, and all needful trimmings, complete for the funeral. Mourning coaches from 4l.; tradesmen's, 2l., 3l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funerals, including the livery decanted and six mourners to any cemetery within ten miles, 2l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, near Bunhill fields Burial-ground. Established in 1842.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—FURNITURE and every description of property carefully PACKED, Removed, and Warehoused in extensive fire-proof well-ventilated Warehouses, at charges below any similar establishment. It is the most extensive depository of the kind, and the best adapted to its purpose. Estimates given free of cost. Separate rooms if desired. Every information and needful assistance on application to Mr. HOWARD, at the Pantechnicon Depository, Hamilton-road, adjoining Caledonian Pentonville-road. Model Steam Manufacturing Premises and Offices to be Let.

Now ready, price 5s. 6d. Part XXV. for September, 1858, of

MR. CROCKFORD begs to inform the Profession, that at the suggestion of many Solicitors he is making arrangements for the most prompt and perfect PRINTING of BILLS and PROCEEDINGS in EQUITY, as required by the new Rules.—The Compositors and Readers in the Printing-office of a Legal Journal being familiarized with the abbreviations used in offices, as well as with legal words and phrases, they will be enabled to print documents from the draft, without requiring a fair copy, and more easily and correctly than it can be done where these advantages are not found. A complete supply of uniform types, paper, and other apparatus, will be kept for the purpose, and arrangements made to secure correctness, speed, and secrecy.
LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Sept. 17, 1852.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY.—Printing, in accordance with the Order issued by the Lord High Chancellor (extensive founts of PICA TYPE (the type specified in the General Order), already cast at a foundry of the first repute, together with the facilities attached to a large established business, offer the greatest expedition and accuracy for the performance of all orders.
VARTY, Law and General Printer, 15—27, Camomile-street, Bishopsgate, London.

LAW PRINTING.—CHARLES SKIPPER and EAST, of 1, St. Dunstan's-hill, City, and 11, Bell-yard, Temple-bar, Printers, Lithographer, and Law Stationers, having completed their arrangements, are prepared to print Bills, Claims, and other Proceedings in Equity, as required by the New Rules. Employing none but efficient persons, the greatest expedition accuracy, and fidelity can be relied on in transacting the business confided to their care. All branches of the Law Stationery business executed.—11, Bell yard, and 1, St. Dunstan's-hill, Oct. 1852.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.—This Society meets at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, every Tuesday Evening, at Seven o'clock, for the Discussion of Legal and Jurisprudential Questions.
The Session of 1852-53 will commence on the 26th inst.
The Secretary will be happy to supply copies of the rules, and any further particulars, to gentlemen desirous of becoming members.

COURT PAPERS.

THE BANKRUPTCY COMMISSIONERS.

THE following circular has been addressed by Lord St. Leonard's to the Bankruptcy Commissioners:—

"The Lord Chancellor wishes to direct the attention of the Commissioners of the Court of Bankruptcy to the provision in the 10th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, which requires the Court to sit daily for the despatch of business. This involves the necessity, on the part of every commissioner, of residence within a convenient distance of the court; and the Lord Chancellor trusts that every commissioner will comply with this condition.

"The Lord Chancellor also wishes to draw the attention of the commissioners to the power given by the 11th section to the Lord Chancellor, whenever it shall appear to him to be expedient, to order any commissioner to hold sittings at such places within the district as the Lord Chancellor may think fit. This is a power which cannot be exercised without the aid of the commissioners themselves; the Lord Chancellor desires, therefore, that whenever a commissioner is of opinion that unnecessary delay, expense, or inconvenience will be sustained by creditors unless sittings are held at some other than the usual place within the district, such commissioner will apply to the Lord Chancellor for power to hold such sittings; and as it is inexpedient that any such sittings should be held without sufficient cause, the Lord Chancellor directs that every such application shall state the grounds upon which it is made.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I am a solicitor retired from London practice. For several years previously to quitting the Profession, I was the means of effecting various life assurance policies in OLD mutual offices, which bore the reputation of great wealth and safety, thereby supposing that I was rendering a service to my clients. I carefully abstained from recommending any new office until the year 1847, when a policy for 2,000*l.* of fifteen years' standing in a most respectable old office (and one which had been greatly supported by the Legal Profession), became a claim, the life assured having dropped.

I received the 2,000*l.* with a bonus of 227*l.*; but, on calculating the premiums actually paid at three per cent. compound interest, the result was astounding.

Now, Sir, I like to act fairly. It is unjust to attack old or new offices in the aggregate; let each stand or fall on its own merits. Is there any reason why the name of the office in question, and the result of my calculations, should not be made public through your Journal? I wait for a reply.

I have now discovered that the offices to avoid are those with immense capitals and large directories. The former cannot be usefully employed, and the latter are too extravagantly paid to allow of the assured having the advantages offered by other offices equally safe and respectable.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

London, Sept. 5, 1852. INVESTIGATOR.

PROFESSIONAL PROTECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The Profession are indebted to your correspondent for having directed their attention to a subject of so much importance to them as protection against the frequently occurring casualty of disability by sickness or age. Life assurance has not met this want, for that only provides for those who come after us, and the payments fall heavily in the hour of infirmity. A tradesman's business can be carried on by servants if he is incompetent, but our business mainly depends upon our own capacity to conduct it personally. If we are disabled, we lose "the means by which we live." If, Sir, the cheap protection against the danger, to which we are all exposed, as described by your correspondent, is another of the many services which you have rendered to the Profession, accept the thanks of,

Sir, yours, &c. M. A.

London, Oct. 14, 1852.

LANCASHIRE COUNTY CORONERS.—The death of Mr. Gardner, one of the six coroners for the county, causes a vacancy in that office. Although the appointment of each of these officials is for the entire county, each one confines himself within a certain district; thus Mr. W. S. Rutter and Mr. J. F. Dearden officiate in the hundred of Salford, which they apportion between them; Mr. Driffield in the hundred of West Derby; Mr. Hargreaves in the hundred of Blackburn; Mr. Palmer in the hundred of Leyland and the greater portion of Amounderness; and the late Mr. Gardner acted for the hundred of Lonsdale, and for some years past also in a portion of Amounderness. Besides these there are, as at Liverpool, Manchester, Wigan, and other towns, coroners acting within those boroughs only, and a few who act for districts where the lord of the manor has a coroner's jurisdiction. The coronership held by Mr. Gardner is the least lucrative of any of the six, as the number of inquests held, and the amount received by each coroner within the two years ending May 31, 1852, will shew. The amounts paid include mileage:—

Mr. Gardner	£106 1 7	£ 73 16 1
Mr. Palmer	232 3 2	241 1 10
Mr. Hargreaves	398 8 9	288 2 1
Mr. Dearden	637 18 3	574 10 4
Mr. Driffield and Mr. Heyes (his predecessor)	649 5 7	596 2 3
Mr. Rutter	1,148 17 9	1,012 9 2

The appointment rests with the freeholders of the entire county, and the election will be held at Preston.—Preston Chronicle.

"WE congratulate the Public upon the good effects which the liberal commercial policy originated by MILES, of 67, New Bond-street has had, whereby they obtain trowsers from 1,50 different patterns, at Sixteen Shillings per pair, and in the very finest that they would formerly have been charged Two Guineas. This is free-trade with a vengeance."—United Service Gazette.

BARON LIEBIG on PALE ALES.—"If I wished to associate with any individual brewery my remarks on the alleged adulteration of bitter beer with strychnine, it would have been only natural to have mentioned another brewery, in which alone, and not in Mr Allsopp's, I was engaged in investigating the Easton mode of brewing; and it was also in that brewery, and not in Mr Allsopp's, that the Bavarian brewers acquired all the information they obtained at Burton. The admiration I expressed of this beverage, in my letter to Mr. Allsopp, is advertised in such a manner as to lead to the inference that my praise was exclusively confined to Mr Allsopp's beer. This was not the case; my remarks referred to that class of beer

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 181, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.
For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr W. TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment 312, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly.
An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.
Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1796, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2*l.* 2*s.* to 2*l.* 18*s.*; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for autumn trowsers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trowsers, from 22*s.* to 26*s.* per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 13*s.* Patterns forwarded into the country on application.
HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 67, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication: and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

BERDOE'S WATERPROOF OVERCOATS and SHOOTING-JACKETS. A very large stock of superior garments, in every improved material and style, and of every degree of warmth or lightness, guaranteed to resist any amount of rain, kept for selection, at charges reduced to the lowest point consistent with the principle that an article to be really cheap must be good. Every size also of the Waterproof Paltitum, the well-known light Overcoat for all seasons, price 45s. Riding and Driving Capes, Leggings, Boys' Overcoats and Capes. Also, Cloaks, Mantles, Habits, &c. for ladies, all thoroughly impervious to rain, without obstructing free ventilation, the fatal objection to all other waterproofs.
W. BERDOE, Tailor and Overcoat Maker, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill (only).

The important Estate of Gnaton, in the beautiful vicinity of Plymouth, comprising a delightsand spacious modern Mansion, and a rich compact Domain of above 1,100 acres.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON are commissioned to announce that, unless previously disposed of by Private Treaty, they shall SUBMIT the above most desirable and very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, OCT. 28, at Twelve. It is situated near the banks of the River Yealm, about eight miles from Plymouth, and combines, with a first-rate landed investment (the farms being well tenanted) a most desirable and capital residential property. The mansion is modern and handsome, the reception rooms spacious and elegant, and it is replete with every comfort for a good establishment; superior gardens, conservatory, pinery, hot-houses, excellent stabling and other appendages; surrounded by park-like grounds and ornamental plantations. The appropriate furniture may be purchased at a fair valuation, so as to afford very early possession of the mansion and home demesne of about 200 acres, now in hand.—Further particulars may be obtained of E. T. WHITAKER, Esq. Solicitor, 18, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and of Messrs. SMITH and SON, Land Agents, in Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, where a plan of the estate may be seen.

In the Borough of DARTMOUTH, on the British Channel, South Devon.—The Manor of Stoke Fleming, with several beautiful and valuable Freehold Farms, comprising a delightful extent of sea coast, possessing romantic Sites for Building, with beautiful coves and sands for bathing, and particularly choice spots for any one fond of yatching, being close to the harbour; also numerous houses, lans, &c. in the town, commanding great parliamentary influence.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON are instructed by the Proprietor to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, OCT. 28, at Twelve, in Lots (unless previously disposed of by private treaty), several very valuable and highly picturesque FREEHOLD FARMS, comprising together above 600 acres, chiefly within the borough, and adjoining the town of Dartmouth, the greater portion possessing many peculiar advantages and numerous beautiful and well-sheltered sites for building, and unrivalled, perhaps, as to sea views and facilities for bathing and yatching, being at the mouth of the Dart, the magnificent scenery of which attracts yearly visitors from all parts of the world. The manor is co-extensive with the parish of Stoke Fleming, bounded by the sea coast for about two miles, and comprising about 3,000 acres, and is an ancient and well-secured right of free warren, with the right of sporting, with the wastes, commons, wrecks, estrays, &c. The Busford Farms are on the road to Totnes, offering very eligible and improvable investments. The railway to Totnes and Torquay, within about seven miles, it is expected will be extended to Dartmouth.—Particulars and plans may be obtained of Messrs. TATHAM, UPTON, and CO., Solicitors, 24, Lincoln's-inn-fields; of Messrs. TUCKER and Co. Solicitors, Teignmouth, Devon; and of DANIEL SMITH, and SON, Land Agents, in Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, who are fully authorised to treat for the sale.

Freehold Votes for the Counties of Middlesex and Surrey.

MR. FRED. GODWIN will SELL by AUCTION at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, the 28th inst. at Twelve for One, in Lots, FIFTEEN TWENTIETH PARTS of an ORIGINAL SHARE in PUTNEY and FULHAM BRIDGE, conferring votes for the two counties of Middlesex and Surrey. The average production of tolls upon an original share (or a 80th part of the whole bridge), is nearly 120l. per annum, and the necessary working expenses are small. The dividends are paid quarterly, and with the same punctuality as dividends at the Bank of England. The purchase will include the accruing dividends. The purchase and possession of this property by December will entitle the purchaser to claim to be inserted on the register of voters for each county in June next. The vast amount of new and contemplated buildings in the various neighbourheods surrounding the bridge must shortly tend to increase the traffic to a considerable extent, and cannot fail to influence the value of the present security.—For further particulars apply to J. R. WHITFIELD, Esq. Solicitor, 3, Lincoln's-inn-fields; at Garraway's; and of the Auctioneer, 3, Halkin-terrace, Belgrave-square.

For Investment or Occupation.—In Bankruptcy.—Four Houses, Sydney-street, Brompton.

MR. FRED. GODWIN will SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, at One, by order of the Assignees, TWO well-built Eight-room HOUSES, Nos. 43 and 47, Sydney-street, Fulham-road; very improving property, let to highly respectable tenants, at 42l. per annum. Also Nos. 45 and 51, Eight-room Houses, adjoining, with immediate possession. Terms from the freeholder, seventy-three years; ground-rents, 6l. per annum.—May be viewed by permission, and particulars had of H. H. STANSFELD, Esq. 76, Basinghall-street, Official Assignee; of Messrs. DAVOR, No. 10, Billiter-square; and at Mr. GODWIN'S Offices, 3, Halkin-terrace, Belgrave-square.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 Vict. cap. 29), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved style of coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 2½ and 3 guineas. The improved Winter Guinea Trousers are also ready for selection from a choice variety of patterns. In London only of R. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.
94, Regent-street.

TO BE SOLD, a FREEHOLD ESTATE of 180 acres, with Cottage Residence, in Northamptonshire, to pay two and a half per Cent. The owner is willing to take a lease at a rental after that rate for twenty-one years. Tithe free.
Apply to Mr. POWELL, Solicitor, Birmingham.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in CHATHAM-PLACE, Blackfriars, TO LET, to one or two Single Gentlemen, a Sitting and One or Two Bed-rooms.
For Cards to view, &c. apply to Mr. HAMMOND, House Agent, William-street, New Bridge-street.

Policies in this Office are INDISPUTABLE except in cases of FRAUD. "Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which remain in force although the Life assured may go to any part of the World.

Parties assuring within Six Months of their last Birthday are allowed a proportionate diminution in the Premium.

The Tables are especially favorable to young and middle-aged Lives, and the limits allowed to the Assured, without extra charge, are unusually extensive.

Eighty per cent. of the profits are divided at the end of every Five Years among the Assured. At the first division, to the end of 1849, the addition to the amounts assured averaged above Fifty per cent. on the Premiums paid.

LONDON and PROVINCIAL JOINT-STOCK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.
Established 1847.
Offices—17, Gracechurch-street.

The Company effect every description of Life Insurance, both on the participating and non-participating scales.

They also lend money on the security of freehold and long leasehold property, reversions (absolute or contingent), life interests, and incomes legally assignable; and on personal security, accompanied by at least three unquestionable sureties, and a policy or policies of insurance effected with the Company.

If on personal security, the loan is made for periods of from one to five years, repayable by annual, half-yearly, or quarterly instalments.

COPYHOLDERS wishing to enfranchise and to convert their Copyhold into Freehold Property, under the powers given by the Act of Parliament passed last session, may obtain loans for that purpose.

In all cases of Loan the interest is 5 per cent. per annum, and the insurance must be effected for at least double the amount borrowed.

PARLIAMENTARY NOTICES for SURREY.—The SURREY GAZETTE (established 1843). This genuine, not pretended, Surrey County Newspaper, has long been an acknowledged legitimate organ for Parliamentary and other official notices relating to the county. During the present year, the SURREY GAZETTE affords especial facilities to parties having Notices to give, its regular dates of publication during the ensuing month, falling as under:—TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, 9th, 16th, 23rd, and 30th. Thus allowing advertisers the very latest day, complying the three weeks' notice before the expiration of the month, viz. NOVEMBER 16th, 23rd, and 30th.

Accuracy guaranteed. Notices sent to the Head Office, Lewes, returned in "proof" within a few hours. References as to accuracy, punctuality, and despatch, are permitted to some of the most eminent Parliamentary Agents, by whom the SURREY GAZETTE has for years been patronised.

DEBTORS' ARREST.—WARRANT.—Mr. Crockford has prepared the Form of Warrant required under the Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act. This Form has been settled by Mr. KERR, who edited the well-known edition of the Statute, is printed on foolscap, and will be supplied in half quires, or larger quantities.

"The Form of Warrant, given in the Schedule of the Statute, does not prescribe any form of address to the messenger or high bailiff who is to execute it. It does not shew that the signature of the Commissioner or Judge issuing it is to be appended; nor does it contain any statement of the county where it is issued, and where alone the debtor, when arrested, can be imprisoned. These and other omissions the compiler has taken it upon himself to supply." Kerr's Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act, page 74.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY.—Printing, in accordance with the Order issued by the Lord High Chancellor.—Extensive founts of PICA TYPE (the type specified in the General Order), already cast at a foundry of the first repute, together with the facilities attached to a large established business, offer the greatest expedition and accuracy for the performance of all orders.

VARTY, Law and General Printer, 15—27, Camomile-street, Bishopsgate, London.

LAW and EQUITY PRINTING.—R. MOULTON, Law Stationer, No. 18, Chancery-lane, begs to acquaint his friends in the Profession that he has made arrangements with a printer of established character and extensive business by which he will be enabled to print with accuracy and despatch, and in the manner prescribed, such proceedings as the New Orders require to be so done. Every other branch of the Law Stationery business carried on as usual.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY printed by WHITAKER and SULLIVAN, who, having Type and Presses on the Premises, can print with facility Bills and Claims of any length at moderate charge.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROFESSIONAL PROTECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The Profession is certainly much indebted to your correspondent, who signs himself "One, &c." in your number of October 9, for pointing out a mode by which they may be protected against the casualties arising from disability by sickness and old age. It is very valuable if perfect reliance can be placed on the insurance society, that is, if the guarantee for the payment of the insured annuity is sufficient.

What, however, the Profession want is, a society similar, to a certain extent, to what the clerks have established for themselves. I allude to "The United Law-Clerks Society." Our clerks, as well as members of several other professions and callings, are in advance of us in that respect. "The Law Association for the Benefit of Widows and Families of Professional Men," is a good thing, but that is confined to the metropolis and its vicinity. The country solicitors possess nothing of the kind, and many deplorable cases might be mentioned where respectable Professional men have been reduced to great straits, from ill health and old age rendering them incompetent to conduct their business.

If you, Sir, who have already done so much for the Profession, could procure such a society to be set on foot, you would render an inestimable service to the Profession. Surely this ought not to be difficult in so numerous a body.

I am Sir, yours, &c.

Oct. 19, 1852. ANOTHER, &c.

COURTS OF CHANCERY.—Vice-Chancellor Sir Richard Kindersley has given notice of his intention to sit at Radley's Hotel, Southampton, on Tuesday next, to hear motions and other urgent applications. His Honour has already sat twice during the vacation, to forward matters connected with proceedings in the Court of Chancery.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of enquiring the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requisite means, and consequently inflicts two-fold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s., 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

HYDROPATHIC NOTICE.—Dr. CHARLES T. THOMPSON, M.D. M.R.C.S. &c. may be consulted daily at his residence, No. 42, Sussex Gardens, Hyde Park, from TEN a.m. to TWO p.m. by part es wishing to undergo HYDROPATHIC TREATMENT, without going to a Hydropathic Establishment

CARRIAGES.—The WIDOW of DAVID IVALL, in acknowledging the patronage received since his decease, begs to assure the nobility and gentry the business is conducted in the same manner as heretofore, and invites them to inspect the extensive and modern ASSORTMENT of well-manufactured CARRIAGES, which will now be sold, owing to the decline of the season, at a considerable reduction.
At the old-established Manufactory, 158, Tottenham-court-road.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.—Used in the Royal Laundry and Wotherspoon's Steam-made Confections. Sold by all grocers and druggists.
Glasgow—R. WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, Dunlop-street.
London—WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, King William-street, City.

DEED BOXES.
GEORGE HART, 223, STRAND, near Temple-bar, invites attention to his Stock of DEED BOXES, which for quality and price cannot be surpassed. Also to his extensive assortment of LAMPS for GAS, OIL, CAMPHINE, and PALMER'S CANDLES.
DR. ARNOTT'S VENTILATING CHIMNEY VALVES, price from 4s 6d each
GEORGE HART, MANUFACTURING IRONMONGER, Patent Lock smith, Bellhanger, and Gasfitter, 253, STRAND, near Temple-bar.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1795, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 2l. 10s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for winter trousers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trousers, from 25s to 26s. per pair; and the new Australian Jumbuck waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 14s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.
HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 57, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

"WE congratulate the Public upon the good effects which the liberal commercial policy originated by MILES, of 63, New Bond-street, has had, whereby they obtain trousers from 1,000 different patterns, at Sixteen Shillings per pair, and in the very street that they would formerly have been charged Two Guineas. This is free-trade with a vengeance." United Service Gazette.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228 Piccadilly, London.
An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.
Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received
FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:
"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan 10, 1852.
"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it lately, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.
"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."
N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.
The GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES, 18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

THE ONLY STOVE WITHOUT A FLUE, for which her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent have been granted. Plain, from 12s. to 35s.; Ornamented, from 31s. 6d. to Six Guineas.
Pro pectuses, with drawings and report, forwarded free.
STANDS FOR STOVES, 2s. 6d., 3s. and 5s. EACH.
CAUTION.—An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor, in the case of Nash v. Carman, restraining the defendant from making or selling any colourable imitation of the plaintiff's Stove or fuel, the public is respectfully informed, that the original "Joyce's Patent Stove without a Flue, and the prepared Fuel," can only be obtained from SWAN NASH, or his authorised Agents. Every genuine Stove has the name and address of the proprietor on a brass plate, "SWAN NASH, No. 253, Oxford-street."
Joyce's Patent for Warming Halls, Passages, Greenhouses, Water Closets, Shops, Store-rooms, and all places requiring artificial warmth.
PATENT PREPARED FUEL for the Stoves, 2s. 6d. per bushel, only genuine with the proprietor's name and seal on the sack.
S. NASH, 253, Oxford-street, and 110, Newgate-street.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (5 & 7 Vict. cap. 65), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved style of coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, at 3 and 3 guineas.—The improved Winter Guinea Trousers are also ready for selection from a choice variety of patterns. In London only of S. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.
94, Regent-street.

WAREHOUSING FURNITURE and valuable PROPERTY.—Parties Leaving Town and Changing their Residences—Furniture, Plate, Books, and other valuable Property carefully REMOVED and WAREHOUSED at the North London Depository, Gray's-inn-road, King's-cross. Established 1829. Separate lock-up store-rooms. The building is secure from fire and damp, heated by steam-pipes. An inspection is requested. Advances if required.

HEAL and SON'S EIDER DOWN QUILTS are made in three varieties.—The BORDERED QUILT, the PLAIN QUILT, and the DUVET. The Bordered Quilt is in the usual form of bed quilts, and is a most elegant and luxurious article. The Plain Quilt is smaller, and is useful as an extra covering on the bed, or as a wrapper in the carriage, or on the couch. The Duvet is a loose case filled with Eider Down, as in general use on the continent.—Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free by post, on application at HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road.

EUREKA.—In FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are united the best material and first-rate workmanship, together with that special excellence of fit which is their distinguishing characteristic. Their superiority to all others is still maintained; and gentlemen who desire the luxury of a perfect fitting shirt are invited to try them. The prices are, for the first quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.; coloured shirts, for hunting, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices, and instructions for measurement, post-free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free, on receipt of six stamps.
RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry (late 185, Strand).

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shewn in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogised for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S 51, Conduit-street, Regent street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

OUR GUINEA FRENCH LAMP, brass fittings, newest, after-relievo designs, in bronze, with stand, globe, glass, &c. warranted for twelve months. Matchless, try where you will. The brilliancy and economy of the light are unequalled, and the simplicity and durability of the Lamps sold at this house, are now fully established. Finest Paris Oil, 4s. per gallon.
SMITH'S OLD-ESTABLISHED LAMP AND OIL DEPOT, 281, STRAND (exactly opposite Norfolk-street). Lists free by post.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER, The REAL NICKEL SILVER, introduced twenty years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when plated by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is the only and all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

Policies in this Office are INDISPUTABLE except in cases of FRAUD. "Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which remain in force although the Life assured may go to any part of the World.
Parties assuring within Six Months of their last Birthday are allowed a proportionate diminution in the Premium.
The Tables are especially favourable to young and middle aged Lives, and the Limits allowed to the Assured, without extra charge, are unusually extensive.
Eighty per cent. of the profits are divided at the end of every Five Years among the Assured. At the first division, to the end of 1848, the addition to the amount assured averaged above Fifty per cent. on the Premiums paid.

IMPERIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, 1, Old Broad-street, London.
Thomas Newman Hunt, esq. Chairman.
John Horsley Palmer, esq. Deputy-Chairman.
A NEW SCALE OF PREMIUMS on Insurances for the whole term of life has recently been adopted, by which a material reduction has been made at all ages below 80 years.
FOUR-FIFTHS, or 80 per cent. of the Profits, are assigned to Policies every fifth year, and may be applied to increase the sum insured, to an immediate payment in Cash, or to the reduction and ultimate extinction of future premiums.
ONE-THIRD of the Premium on Insurances of 500l. and upwards, for the whole term of life, may remain as a debt upon the policy, to be paid off at convenience, by which means 1,500l. may be insured for the present outlay otherwise required for 1,000l.
LOANS.—The Directors will lend sums of 500l. and upwards on the security of Policies effected with this Company for the whole term of life, when they have acquired an adequate value.
SECURITY.—Those who effect Insurances with this Company are protected by its large Subscribed Capital from the risk incurred by Members of Mutual Societies.
INSURANCES without participation in Profits may be effected at reduced rates.

FORMS of PLEADINGS and PROCEEDINGS framed in accordance with the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Acts, 1852 with copious Notes on the New System of Pleading, and on the Evidence necessary in Personal Actions, and in Ejectment. By R. A. FISHER, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Special Pleader, and Barrister-at-Law.
LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

Now ready,
THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s. calf.
NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.
Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850 price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.
The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1848 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.
The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:

Commons Inclosure Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).
Copyright Amendment Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.
Stock-in-Trade Act.
Application of Highway Rates to Turnpike Roads Act.
Property-Tax Continuance Act.
Act for Re-assembling Parliament.
Wills Act Amendment Act.

PERIODICAL SALE (established in 1843), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Pentines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1853.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the present year, as under:—

Thursday, Nov. 4 | Thursday, Dec. 2.

Mr. Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sales, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Notice of sales should be forwarded to Mr. Marsh a fortnight previous to the above dates. Mr. Marsh requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his sales to forward their address to his offices, where any information respecting the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained. The NEXT SALE will take place on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4.—6, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

PERIODICAL SALE for THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4.—The very valuable Absolute Reversion to the Sum of 4,000l. Consols.

MR. MARSH has received instructions to include in his next Monthly Sale of Reversions, Policies, &c. appointed to take place at the MART, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, at Twelve, a valuable ABSOLUTE REVERSION to the SUM of 4,000l. Consols, standing in the names of executors of the greatest respectability, and receivable on the decease of a lady, aged 84, free of legacy-duty.—Particulars may be obtained at the Mart; and at Mr. Marsh's Offices for the Sale of Reversionary Property, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

PERIODICAL SALE for THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4.—A Policy for the sum of 500l. in the Law Life Assurance Society

MR. MARSH has received instructions from the Executor to include in his next Monthly Sale of Reversions, Policies, &c. appointed to take place at the MART, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, at Twelve, a POLICY of ASSURANCE, for the sum of 500l. effected with the Law Life Assurance Society in August, 1842, on the life of a gentleman now in his 49th year; annual premium, 12l. 3s. 6d. The age is admitted on the Policy, and the bonus declared thereon, amounts to 36l. The next division of profits takes place in 1854.—Particulars may be obtained at the Mart; of G. G. VINCENT, Esq. Solicitor, 8, staple-inn; and at Mr. MARSH'S Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

PERIODICAL SALE for THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4.—Four valuable Policies of Assurance, effected with the United Kingdom Life Assurance Company, Waterloo place, Pall-mall.

MR. MARSH has received instructions from the Executors to include in his next Monthly Sale of Reversions, Policies, &c. appointed to take place at the MART, on THURSDAY, NOV. 4, at Twelve, in lots, a POLICY of ASSURANCE for the sum of 30l. effected with the United Kingdom Life Assurance Company in January, 1838, on the life of a lady of title, now in her sixty-third year; annual premium 12l. 5s.; the age is admitted on the policy, and a sum of 77l. 15s. has been added as bonuses. A Policy of Assurance for the sum of 40l. effected with the United Kingdom Life Assurance Company in December, 1842, on the life of a gentleman, now in his seventieth year, annual premium 25l. 16s. A Policy of Assurance for the sum of 49l. effected with the United Kingdom Life Assurance Company in January, 1844, on the life of a gentleman, now in his fifty-eighth year; annual premium 20l. 12s. 6d. A Policy of Assurance for the sum of 49l. effected with the United Kingdom Life Assurance Company in March, 1845, on the life of a gentleman, now in his forty-fifth year; annual premium 1l. 5s 2d. bonus declared 30l. 18s 1d.—Particulars may be obtained at the Mart; of G. G. VINCENT, Esq. Solicitor, 8, Staple-inn, Holborn; and at Mr. MARSH'S Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

NEAR TO CAMBRIDGE.

MR. MARSH has received instructions from the Trustees and Executors, to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, opposite the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, 4th of NOVEMBER, at Twelve o'clock, the FREEHOLD MANOR of CROWLANDS, in Dry Drayton. Also, the MANOR of COVENTRY, in Dry Drayton. Held under renewable lease from the Bishop of Ely, for two young lives, with Policy of Insurance for 500l. on the life of the survivor. Lot 1. The Freehold Manor of Crowlands, in Dry Drayton, comprising a large extent of valuable Copyhold Land and divers Houses, all subject to arbitrary fines. There are in this manor fifteen heriots of the best chattels, payable on death. The income from fines, quit-rents, and heriots, is on an average of years, 54l. 7s. 2d. per annum, but which will increase with improvements on the copyhold estates. Lot 2. The Leasehold Manor of Coventry, in which the fines are arbitrary (but in which there are not any heriots), comprising also a large extent of valuable Copyhold Land and Buildings, producing an income from fines and quit-rents on an average of years, amounting to 55l. per annum. Further particulars may be had of Messrs. CURTON, Norwich; of THOMAS HUXLEY, Esq. Solicitor, 3, Middle Temple-lane, Temple; of J. R. MANN, Esq. Estate Agent, Cambridge, who, having valued all the Lands and Premises parcel of these Manors, will give every information to intending purchasers; and at Mr. MARSH'S Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

ESSEX.—Valuable Manorial Rights, fines arbitrary within three miles of Kelvedon, a station on the Eastern Counties Railway, an hour and a half's ride from town.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the Executors, to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4th, at Twelve o'clock, the FREEHOLD MANOR of COGGESHALL, otherwise "COGGESHALL HALL;" comprising divers shops, houses, residences, hotel, highly valuable building ground, near the town of Coggeshall, and also immediately joining the station at Kelvedon, and a large quantity of first-rate agricultural and accommodation land, in the towns of Great Coggeshall and Kelvedon, and in the adjoining parishes of Little Coggeshall, Feering, Bradwell, Inworth, and Marks Hall, producing from fines and quit-rents, on an average of the last seven years, 120l. per annum, but which income may be regarded as one gradually and constantly increasing with the improvements on the copyhold estates. There is a large quantity of valuable timber on the copyholds, from which a considerable receipt may be expected. This manor is intermixed with or contiguous to the Western, Du Cane, and Honywood estates, as well as the properties of many smaller wealthy proprietors.—Further particulars may be had on application to THOMAS HUXLEY, Esq. Solicitor, 3, Middle Temple-lane, Temple; to Messrs. CURTON, Norwich; of Mr. SMITH, Estate Agent, Coggeshall, who will give every information as to the Manor to intending purchasers; or to Mr. MARSH, Auctioneer, Surveyor, and Land Agent, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

REVERSIONARY INTEREST.

MR. LEREW will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27th, at Twelve, the REVERSIONARY INTEREST of a married lady to a sixth part of a Freehold Estate, comprising dwelling-house and about thirteen acres of Land in Bedfordshire.—Particulars may be had of Mr. W. H. BYNES, Solicitor, Chancery-lane; at the Mart; and of Mr. LEREW, Cardington-street, Hampstead-road, near the Euston Station.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly-written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

THE LAW RELATING TO MASTER AND SERVANT, comprising Domestic and Menial Servants and Clerks, Husbandmen, and Persons employed in the different Manufactures, and the principal Statutes relating to Workmen, the Settlement of Disputes, Tickets of Work, Limitation of Labour, Payment of Wages, School Attendance of Children, &c. including the NEW FACTORY ACT (12 & 14 Vict. c. 54), with General Observations, all the Cases up to the present time, and a copious Index. By CHARLES J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. boards; 8s. cloth; 9s. 6d. half-calf; 10s. 6d. calf.

"A little work on the Law relating to Master and Servant, by Mr. C. J. B. Hertslet, has just been issued, which will prove valuable to all classes, and is calculated to prevent wrongs and inconveniences which are often inflicted or submitted on each side through ignorance of the actual nature of the responsibilities which exist. The various decisions in connection with the subject appear to have been digested with much care; and the author has collected those statutes which contain general regulations in reference to the contract between the employer and the employed, as well as those relating to particular occupations. By persons engaged in trade and manufactures, with large numbers of clerks and workmen, as well as ordinary servants, such a volume has long been wanted." Times.

MR. CROCKFORD begs to inform the Profession, that at the suggestion of many Solicitors he is making arrangements for the most prompt and perfect PRINTING of BILLS and PROCEEDINGS in EQUITY, as required by the new Rules. The Compositors and Readers in the Printing-office of a Legal Journal being familiarised with the abbreviations used in offices, as well as with legal words and phrases, they will be enabled to print documents from the draft, without requiring a fair copy, and more easily and correctly than it can be done where these advantages are not found. A complete supply of uniform types, paper, and other apparatus, will be kept for the purpose, and arrangements made to ensure correctness, speed, and secrecy.
LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Sept. 17, 1852.

LAW PRINTING.—CHARLES SKIPPER and EAST, of 1, St. Dunstan's-hill, City, and 11, Bell-yard, Temple-bar, Printers, Lithographers, and Law Stationers, having completed their arrangements, are prepared to print Bills, Claims, and other proceedings in Equity, as required by the new rules. Undertaking none but efficient persons, the greatest expedition, accuracy, and fidelity can be relied on in transacting the business confided to their care. All branches of the Law Stationery business executed.—11, Bell-yard, and 1, St. Dunstan's-hill, Oct. 1852.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY.—Printing, in accordance with the Order issued by the Lord High Chancellor.—Extensive founts of PICA TYPE (the type specified in the General Order), already cast at a foundry of the first repute, together with the facilities attached to a large established business, offer the greatest expedition and accuracy for the performance of all orders.
VARTY, Law and General Printer, 15—17, Camomile-street, Bishopsgate, London.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS.—The Times, Daily News, Herald, Chronicle, and other Daily Newspapers sent to any part of town or country, on the day of publication or following day, by E. THE LAW and PRACTICE of BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETIES, Terminating and Permanent, and of FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETIES, with all the Cases decided to this time, Rules, Forms of Mortgages, Pleadings, and other Matters and Instructions. By JOHN THOMPSON, Esq. Barrister-at-law. Price 7s. 6d. boards; 8s. cloth; 9s. 6d. half-calf; 10s. 6d. calf; and 1s. extra for interleaved copies.

"To the statutes and to the decisions (such as they are), including the decisions on those clauses in the Friendly Societies Acts, which, according to the latest authorities, are incorporated in the Building Societies Act, Mr. Thompson's book furnishes a guide, of which there was great need, notwithstanding the existence of a Government officer, appointed for the express purpose of keeping these and similar societies in the legal path."—Jurist.

"In the little book before us, Mr. Thompson has succeeded in fulfilling (which is not often done) the promise of the title-page, and has presented to the public a most complete work upon a most important subject."—Morning Chronicle.

"To the large class of persons interested in building and other societies, this is just the sort of book wanted. The complexities that were believed to exist in connection with transactions of this nature, disappear before the explicit treatment of the subject by the author. His own judicious remarks are superadded explanatory practical statements from the writings and speeches of others. But the work bears the stamp of the highest legal authorities; upwards of one hundred cases and decisions in matters relating to such societies, and having a general bearing, will render the work a valuable auxiliary to shareholders, each of whom should possess a copy."—Globe.

DEBTORS' ARREST. — WARRANT. — Mr.

Crockford has prepared the Form of Warrant required under the Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act. This Form has been settled by Mr. KERR, who edited the well-known edition of the Statute. It is printed on foolscap, and will be supplied in half quires, or in any smaller quantities.

"The Form of Warrant, given in the Schedule of the Statute, does not prescribe any form of address to the messenger or high bailiff who is to execute it. It does not show that the signature of the Commissioner or Judge issuing it is to be appended; nor does it contain any statement of the county where it is issued, and where alone the debtor, when arrested, can be imprisoned. These and other omissions the compiler has taken it upon himself to supply."—Kerr's Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act, page 72.

NEW CHANCERY ACTS.—Code of Practice of the High Court of Chancery. By T. KENNEDY, Esq. a Solicitor of the Court. Vol. II. Part I.

BUTTERWORTHS, 7, Fleet-street.

Price 7s. 6d.

Extract from the Legal Observer of the 17th September, 1853:—

"The notes on the statutes, and the orders of Court, will be found particularly useful. Mr. Kennedy's long experience as a solicitor of the Court, his learning, acuteness, and skill, and his especial study of the subject, render him a safe guide on this important occasion."

Extract from the Daily News of the 15th October, 1853:—

"The work is the compilation of a solicitor, and it has some notes upon the recent Chancery Acts, and upon the last Orders, which will be especially appreciated by the branch of the profession to which the author belongs. The analysis of the Orders and Acts of Parliament at the commencement of the volume is very well and usefully drawn out."

Extract from the Justice of the Peace of the 23rd October, 1853:—

"The publication of this book will be found peculiarly acceptable at the present moment; both country and London practitioners will naturally feel confidence in the guidance of a gentleman who, in addition to having for years bestowed considerable attention on the general subject, has acquired increased familiarity with it, by assisting the Committee of the Incorporated Law Society in preparing their report with respect to many of the reforms carried out by the recent Acts. As Mr. Kennedy sufficies these conditions, and is already favourably known to the profession by his previous labours in the same field, it is evident that his work has many claims to public attention, which his rivals must lack. Besides the general orders, commencing with the 31st January, 1846, and ending with those of the 7th August, 1852, including those under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, commonly called Sir George Turner's Act, he gives the whole of that Act, and the more recent statutes of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, 86, and 87. His annotations on the various sections of these statutes betoken a practical acquaintance with the subject, which cannot fail to make his advice exceedingly useful to those who have now to act upon the hitherto untried rules and principles of the new Acts and Orders."

The volume will be completed without delay, by the addition of the Orders of the 18th October, 1852, and those about to issue, with practical notes and a full index.

ANOTHER TESTIMONIAL this week in favour of DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS, for ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, and COLDS.

From Mr A Scott, 43, Trongate, Glasgow, October 20, 1862.

"I am glad to say that the demand for Dr Locock's Pulmonic Wafers has commenced this season very briskly I believe I keep in stock every cough medicine which has been advertised either in times past or present, but there is not one of them which has gained the same popularity as your Wafers. In severe Coughs, Asthma, and where there is a tendency to Consumption, the working classes and others who cannot well afford it, prefer to pay 2s. 9d for a box of Pulmonic Wafers, to buyes of similar size which can be got for a much smaller sum. I think this is an unmistakeable proof of their efficacy.—A buyer, 43, Trongate, Glasgow"

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose and in a painful state to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

DEBTORS' ARREST.—WARRANT.—Mr. Crockford has prepared the Form of Warrant required under the Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act. This Form has been settled by Mr. KERR, who edited the well-known edition of the Statute, is printed on foolscap, and will be supplied in half quires, or larger quantities.
"The Form of Warrant, given in the Schedule of the Statute, does not prescribe any form of address to the messenger or high bailiff who is to execute it. It does not shew that the signature of the Commissioner or Judge issuing it is to be appended; nor does it contain any statement of the county where it is issued, and where alone the debtor, when arrested, can be imprisoned. These and other omissions the compiler has taken it upon himself to supply."—Kerr's Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act, page 72.
29, Essex-street, Strand.

MR. CROCKFORD begs to inform the Profession, that at the suggestion of many Solicitors he is making arrangements for the most prompt and perfect PRINTING of BILLS and PROCEEDINGS in EQUITY, as required by the new Rules.—The Compositors and Readers in the Printing-office of a Legal Journal being familiarised with the abbreviations used in offices, as well as with legal words and phrases, they will be enabled to print documents from the draft, without requiring a fair copy, and more easily and correctly than it can be done where these advantages are not found. A complete supply of uniform types, paper, and other apparatus, will be kept for the purpose, and arrangements made to secure correctness, speed, and secrecy.
LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Sept. 17, 1852.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY.—Printing, in accordance with the Order issued by the Lord High Chancellor.—Extensive founts of PICA TYPE (the type specified in the General Order), already cast at a foundry of the first repute, together with the facilities attached to a large established business, offer the greatest expedition and accuracy for the performance of all orders.
VARTY, Law and General Printer, 15—17, Camomile-street, Bishopsgate, London.

BILLS and CLAIMS in CHANCERY printed by WHITAKER and SULLIVAN, who, having Type and Presses on the Premises, can print with facility Bills and Claims of any length at moderate charges.
N.B. Special Law Forms under 15 & 16 Vict.
Legal and General Printing Office, 26, Chancery-lane.

LAW.—GREAT SAVING.—Briefs and Abstracts copied at 6*d.* per sheet; draft copies, 1*d.* per folio; Deeds and full-length copies, 1½*d.* per folio. Deeds abstracted at 1*s.* 6*d.* per sheet; Indentures, 2*s.*; Followers, 1*s.* 6*d.*; which includes making up seals, &c.
ROBERT KERR, Chichester-rents, Lincoln's Inn.

SOCIETY for PROMOTING the AMENDMENT of the LAW.—A CONFERENCE will be held at the Society's Rooms, 21, Regent-street, on Tuesday, the 16th of November (Lord BROUGHAM, the President of the Society, in the chair), to consider the propriety of Assimilating the Mercantile Laws of England, Ireland, and Scotland.
Deputations will attend from Dublin, Belfast, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, Hull, Bath, Bristol, Dover, Southampton, and other places.
GEORGE TRIMMER, Clerk.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

LAW APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA.—We announced a short time since that the Chief Justiceship of Bombay, vacant by the retirement of Sir Thomas Erskine Parry, had been filled up by the promotion of Sir William Yardley, late puisne judge at that presidency. We have now to announce that the seat of the latter upon the bench is to be bestowed upon Mr. C. R. Jackson, the present Advocate-General of the East-India Company at Calcutta. These promotions, recommended by the President of the Board of Control, cannot fail to give general satisfaction.

The Right Hon. Sir John Jervis has appointed John Vinall Selby, of Sittingbourne, in the county of Kent, gent. to be one of the perpetual commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Kent.

We have reason to believe that the Lord Lieutenancy of Herefordshire, vacant by the decease of Earl Somers, will be filled by the appointment of Lord Bateman.

SANGUINETTI, 89, REGENT-STREET, begs to announce that he has become SOLE WHOLESALE LICENSEE of the NEW DOUBLE-FACED CLOTH REVERSIBLE GARMENTS, protected by her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent, and for which invention was awarded the Great Exhibition Prize Medal. The overcoats and other garments, constructed with the new patented materials and according to the new patented system, are the most elegant articles for ladies, gentlemen, and juveniles, at the usual prices of ordinary costume. To be had at the only wholesale depôt, 52, Regent-street, London, next door to the County Fire-office. Agents required in several of the principal provincial towns of the United kingdom. Every description of water-proof garments for ladies, gentlemen, and juveniles. A choice assortment in every description of ladies' cloths. The trade supplied.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MELTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while its lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by R. Brown, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the De Guiche Parisian Polish for Dress Boots and Shoes, and Waterproof Varnish for Hunting Boots

MANUFACTORY, 25, BROAD STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE.

Patronized by the Court and Nobility, and to be had at all the principal shops throughout the kingdom.

CAUTION.

TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public, and serious injury to myself.

E. R. Bond, sole Executrix and Widow of the late John Bond, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

HYDROPATHIC NOTICE.—DR. CHARLES T. THOMPSON, M.R.C.S. &c. may be consulted daily at his residence, No. 42, Sussex-gardens, Hyde-park, from Ten a.m. till Two p.m. by parties wishing to undergo Hydropathic treatment at their own homes.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts double profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 1l. 16s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., &c. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground; and at No. 13, North-street, Quadrant, Brighton. Originated in 1842.

HEAL and SON'S EIDER DOWN QUILTS are made in three varieties.—The BORDERED QUILT, the PLAIN QUILT, and the DUVET. The Bordered Quilt is in the usual form of bed quilts, and is a most elegant and luxurious article. The Plain Quilt is smaller, and is useful as an extra covering on the bed, or, as a wrapper in the carriage, or on the couch. The Duvet is a loose case filled with Eider Down, as in general use on the continent.—Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free by post, on application at HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road.

BARON LIEBIG on PALE ALES.—"If I wished to associate with any individual brewery my remarks on the alleged adulteration of bitter beer with strychnine, it would have been only natural to have mentioned another brewery, in which alone, and not in Mr. Allsopp's, I was engaged in investigating the Burton mode of brewing; and it was also in that brewery, and not in Mr. Allsopp's, that the Bavarian brewers acquired all the instructions they obtained at Burton. The admiration I expressed of this beverage, in my letter to Mr. Allsopp, is advertised in such a manner as to lead to the inference that my praise was exclusively confined to Mr. Allsop's beer. This was not the case; my remarks referred to that class of beer.

"Giessen, 26th July, 1858. "JUSTUS LIEBIG."

N.B.—The Baron's original letter is in the hands of Mr. Miller, at the Jerusalem Coffee-house, Cornhill, where it may be seen by any one taking an interest in the matter.

CARRIAGES.—The WIDOW of DAVID EVANS, in acknowledging the patronage received since his decease, begs to assure the nobility and gentry the business is conducted in the same manner as heretofore, and invites them to inspect the extensive and modern ASSORTMENT of well-manufactured CARRIAGES, which will now be sold, owing to the decline of the season, at a considerable reduction.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

96, Minories, London, July 26, 1858.

Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it has undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COURRO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received

FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:

"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan. 10, 1852.

"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it largely, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.

"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."

N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for jointing tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.

EUREKA.—In FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are united the best materials and first-rate workmanship, together with that special excellence of fit which is their distinguishing characteristic. Their superiority to all others is still maintained; and gentlemen who desire the luxury of a perfect fitting shirt are invited to try them. The prices are, for the first quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 33s.; coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices, and instructions for measurement, post-free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free, on receipt of pre-stamp.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry (late 158, Strand).

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shewn in the Great Exhibition, Class 30, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but the everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidentially eulogised for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM RHODES, 51, Coudait-street, Regent-street. N B This work is designed to describe minutely the Practice of Advocacy, and for Attorneys as well as for the Bar.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable ability, but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—Bell's Life.

"Itself a work on our subject is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly-written pages the young student will find reasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by the illustration. It is equally suited to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The commencement presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and some of it is sterling hard Mr Cox is a thorough gentleman."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that few rules of the volume is confined to those who actually engage in some of the duties which it mentions, there is much that will be found to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the literary dress of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The Globe.

"A finely-written treatise."—Sunday Dispatch.

Policies in this Office are INDISPUTABLE except in cases of FRAUD.

"Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which remain in force although the Life assured may go to any part of the World.

Parties assuring within Six Months of their last Birthday are allowed a proportionate diminution in the Premium.

The Tables are especially favourable to young and middle-aged Lives, and the Limits allowed to the Assured, without extra charge, are unusually extensive.

Eighty per cent. of the profits are divided at the end of every Five Years among the Assured. At the first division, to the end of 1849, the addition to the amount assured averaged above Fifty per cent. on the Premiums paid.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

ADVANTAGES OFFERED.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The assured may reside in most parts of the world, without extra charge, and in all parts by payment of a small extra premium.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without intrenching on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefit obtainable from a Mutual Office, with at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital—thus combining in the same office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to £850,000, and the Income exceeds £136,000 per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared; at the last in January 1852, the sum of 121,135l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 24½ to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division, so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June, 1856, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next, will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied at the option of the assured in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced rates, and the Premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other Safe Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are Indisputable except in cases of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life, from 50l. to 10,000l.

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half yearly, or quarterly; but if a payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing a line to

GEORGE H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

The usual Commission allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY. Empowered by special Act of Parliament.

Offices, 3, Old Broad-street, London.

Insurances against railway accidents can now be effected with this Company, not only for single and double journeys, and by the year, as heretofore, but also for terms of years and for life, as follows:—

To insure 1,000l. for a term of five years, premium £3 10 0
" ten " " 6 0 0
To insure 1,000l. for the whole of life, by annual premiums on the following decreasing scale:—
For the first five years, annual premium £1 0 0
" next five " " 0 15 0
" next five " " 0 10 0
" remainder of life " 0 5 0

To insure 100l. for the whole term of life, by single payment, according to age, viz.:—

Above 20 & under 25	Above 25 & under 30	Above 30 & under 35	Above 35 & under 40	Above 40 & under 45	Above 45 & under 50	Above 50 & under 55	Above 55 & under 60	Above 60.
£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
1 1 0	1 0 0	1 0 0	1 0 0	0 18 0	0 16 0	0 15 0	0 13 0	0 12 0

The above premiums include the stamp duty, which is payable to government by the Company.

The total amount insured by any of the above modes will be paid in case of death by railway accident while travelling in any class carriage on any railway in the kingdom, and proportionate compensation in the event of personal injury.

WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

3, Old Broad-street, September 1853.

ANCHOR ASSURANCE COMPANY, 67, Cheapside, London.

For the YOUNGER AGES the Premiums of Life Assurance required by this Company will be found lower than those of most other offices; while the BONUS ADDITIONS that are periodically made to the sums assured from the Company's profits, tend still further to lessen the outlay on account of premium.

Life Annuities are granted by the Company on the most Equitable Terms.

Prospectuses may be had on application.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly-written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

ANOTHER CURE of a SEVEN YEARS' ASTHMA, by
DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.
From Mr. Edwin Squire, bookseller, Corn-market, Louth.
"A lady, whose name and address is below, had been severely afflicted with asthma for seven years until about three months ago, when a friend in Louth recommending Dr. Locock's Wafers, she purchased a box, and although she had not been able to lie down in bed for twelve or fourteen weeks, the first dose enabled her to do so, and take a comfortable night's sleep, and she is effectually cured by five boxes. I furnish the name of the lady, which is Mrs. Martha Raven, St. Laurence, near Ventnor, Isle of Wight.
"(Signed) "EDWIN SQUIRE."
They have a pleasant taste. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d. and 11s. per box. Sold by all druggists. Also,
DR LOCOCK'S ANTIBILIOUS WAFERS.
A mild and gentle Aperient Medicine, having a most agreeable taste, and of great efficacy for regulating the secretions and correcting the action of the Stomach and Liver. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d. and 11s. per box.

BASS'S EAST-INDIA PALE ALE.—The October brewings of this much-esteemed beer are now arriving from Burton, and may be had in casks from 18 gallons upwards. This ale in bottles is in good condition for home use and for shipping. It is sealed and labelled, and each cork is branded, BERRY BROTHERS and Co. a precaution necessary, as much beer is sold for Bass's which is not brewed by them. Barclay's Stout and Porter, the strong and light Burton and Scotch Ales, and Kingdon's Cider, may also be had of BERRY BROTHERS and Co. 3, St. James's-street.

ALLSOP'S PALE or BITTER ALE.—The unanimous opinion of the most eminent scientific and medical men of the day, of BARON LIEBIG, Messrs. GRAHAM, HOFMANN, MURPHATT, WATSON, BUDD, MARSHALL HALL, TRAVERS, FERGUSON, ROWE, VIVIAN, HETGATE, LEMAN, ARNOLD, EVANS, FORMBY, PETRIE, MACROBIE, VOSE, TUPHELL, HUNTER, DAVIES, JONES, SENIOR, MACLAREN, MACAULAY, GRAY, TEEVAN, HILL, HAYWARD, HARRISON, PEPPER, INMAN, Sir CHARLES CLARKE, the SANATORY COMMISSIONER of the Lancet, &c. &c. &c. (many of them, after careful analysis, and all of them after long experience), having been pronounced in favour of the healthful and invigorating qualities, as well as the highly dietetic properties of their Pale and Bitter Ales, Messrs. ALLSOPP and SONS do not feel themselves called upon to go into any further vindication of their justly-popular beverage, from the aspersions of malicious and interested parties, but content themselves by announcing that they have commenced supplies from the Brewing of this Season.
ALLSOPP'S PALE OR BITTER ALE may be obtained in casks of 18 gallons and upwards, from the Brewery, Burton-on-Trent; and from the undermentioned Branch Establishments:—
LONDON, at 61, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.
LIVERPOOL, at COOK-STREET.
MANCHESTER, at DUCIE-PLACE.
DUDLEY, at BURNT TREE.
GLASGOW, at 18, ST. VINCENT STREET.
DUBLIN, at ULSTER CHAMBERS, DAME-STREET.
BIRMINGHAM, at MARKET HALL.
At either of which places a list of respectable parties who supply the beer in bottles (and also in casks, at the same prices as from the Brewery), may at any time be seen.

BARON LIEBIG on PALE ALES.—"If I wished to associate with any individual brewery my remarks on the alleged adulteration of bitter beer with strychnine, it would have been only natural to have mentioned another brewery, in which alone, and not in Mr. Allsopp's, I was engaged in investigating the Burton mode of brewing; and it was also in that brewery, and not in Mr. Allsopp's, that the Bavarian brewers acquired all the instructions they obtained at Burton. The admiration I expressed of this beverage, in my letter to Mr. Allsopp, is advertised in such a manner as to lead to the inference that my praise was exclusively confined to Mr. Allsopp's beer. This was not the case; my remarks referred to that class of beer.
"Giessen, 30th July, 1858. "JUSTUS LIEBIG."
N.B.—The Baron's original letter is in the hands of Mr. Miller, at the Jerusalem Coffee-house, Cornhill, where it may be seen by any one taking an interest in the matter.

GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received
FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD:
"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan. 10, 1852.
"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will eat lead through in two years; we have adopted it largely, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.
"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."
N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.
The GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES, 18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

CAUTION.
TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public, and serious injury to myself.
E. R. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in each, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 80s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.
96, Minories, London, July 26, 1858.
Messrs. Thos. MILNER and SON,
(GENTLEMEN),—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.
"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.
"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,
"COUSED and POTTER."
MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication: and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.
52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair: improved clothes-brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet-Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.
At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.
CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder, 2s. per box.

TO BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, and OTHERS.—FURNISH your OFFICES, Counting-houses and Chambers at PRIEST'S noted Furniture Mart, Nos. 1 and 2, Water-street, corner of Tudor-street, Blackfriars, where may be seen the largest STOCK of New and Second-hand LIBRARY and BOARD ROOM FURNITURE, Offices and Counting-house Fittings, Fire-proof Safes, Deed-Boxes, Iron Doors, &c. in great variety, embracing every article from the Master in Chancery's splendid Table, to the Desk and Stool of the Copying Clerk. PERIODICAL SALE (established in 1843), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1853.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the present year, as under:—

Thursday, December 2.

Mr. Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sales, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Notices of sales should be forwarded to Mr. Marsh a fortnight previous to the above dates. Mr. Marsh requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained. The NEXT SALE will take place on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2.—3, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

NORFOLK.—Highly valuable Manorial Rights, fines arbitrary, between Brandon and Swaffham, the freehold manor of Gooderstone, with Oxburgh.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the executors to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, 2nd of DECEMBER, at Twelve o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the MANOR of GOODERSTONE, comprising nearly the entire village of Gooderstone, inn, mill, residences, shops, cottages, farm buildings, and about 1,000 acres of land, mostly of first-rate quality, and in the best part of the parish. The average lord's income being 200l per annum from fines, and about 14l. for quit-rents; making a total of about 214l. per annum. This manor lies amongst the estates of Sir H. P. Bedingfield, bart.; W. C. Amherst, esq.; — Caldwell, esq.; Lord Walsingham, and other wealthy owners. A very large capital sum, or heavy rent charge, may be gradually realised, under the Copyhold Enfranchisement Acts.—Particulars may be had of Mr. Marsh, Auctioneer and Estate Agent, Charlotte row, Mansion-house, London, or will be forwarded on application.

NEAR to ELY and CAMBRIDGE.—The important and extensive fine arbitrary Freehold Manor of Wicken, an Hour and a Quarter's Ride from London by the Eastern Counties Railway.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the Executors, and in pursuance of the trusts of the will of the late proprietor, to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, at Twelve o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by Private Contract), the MANOR of WICKEN, one of the most extensive in the County of Cambridge, comprising a great number of Houses, and a very large quantity of Copyhold Land, of first-rate quality. The average lord's annual income, from fines and quit-rents, has been about 350l. per annum. There is a valuable right of fishery. The stewardship is of considerable value, there being about 230 copyhold tenements. The manor is intermixed with the estates of Earl Hardwicke and many wealthy small proprietors.—Particulars, with conditions of sale, may be had of Mr. Marsh, Auctioneer and Estate Agent, 3, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, London, or will be forwarded on application.

MANORIAL RIGHTS, ESSEX and SUFFOLK.—Colchester, a small fine arbitrary Manor; also near Ipswich, an extensive fine arbitrary Manor.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the executors to SELL BY AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, at Twelve o'clock, in Two Lots (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract).—Lot 1, the valuable MANOR of BATTLESWICK, comprising a valuable inn, several tenements, and about Forty Acres of highly valuable Building Ground in the business part of the town of Colchester, near the Hythe and River, all subject to arbitrary fines. Lord's average income 12l. a year. (A map of this manor may be seen at Mr. Marsh's offices.) Lot 2, the important MANOR of OFFTON CASTLE, about six miles from Ipswich, and a short distance from Needham Market and Hadleigh, comprising divers houses; and about 900 Acres of Copyhold Land, all fine arbitrary. The lord's average income about 62l. per annum.—Particulars, with conditions, of sale, may be had of Messrs. Cook and Sons, Stratford, St. Mary, and Colchester; and of Mr. Marsh, Auctioneer and Estate Agent, 3, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, London, or will be forwarded on application.

MANOR of RAMPTON LYLES, Cambridgeshire.—To be SOLD by AUCTION, by WENTWORTH and SON, at the LION HOTEL, PETTY-CURY, CAMBRIDGE, on SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, at SIX o'clock in the evening, by direction of the Executors of the late Rev. W. Gee, the valuable Manor, or reputed Manor, of Rampton Lyles, in the county of Cambridge, with the quit rents, customary fines (arbitrary), rights, and privileges. The Manor came into the hands of the late Robert Gee, esq. in the year 1781, and the fines on admission since that time have averaged about 120l. per annum. The quit-rents amount to about 17l. per annum.—Further particulars, with conditions of sale, may be had at the Auction Mart, London, and 28, New Broad-street, City; also of Edward Sheaem, Esq. Solicitor, Stratton, Cornwall; of Messrs. Sumpter and Hyde, Solicitors, Cambridge; and of Wentworth and Son, Auctioneers, Valuers, and Estate Agents, No. 1, Rose-crescent, Cambridge.

A HOUSE and LAND WANTED to PURCHASE.—It must be within a circuit of about fifteen miles from London, or in its environs. The purchase-money from 2,000l. to 15,000l. according to the quantity of land. Freehold would be preferred, but good copyhold not objected to. If the parties wished, the advertiser would also buy the furniture.

Direct, or apply to Mr. King, Park-villa, Upper Avenue-road, St. John's-wood.

97. Bond of indemnity to a tenant paying rent to his landlord, where the title to the property is disputed.
98. Bond by a legatee, on receiving his legacy, to indemnify executors in case of a deficiency of assets.
99. Bond by a tenant for life, who has granted a lease for fourteen years, that in case of his decease during the term, the reversioner shall, upon the lessee's request, either confirm the original lease, or grant him a new lease of the premises, to endure as long as the original term, and under the same rent and covenants.
100. Bond by a purchaser to a vendor of an estate charged with a legacy of 300l payable to a minor on attaining twenty-one, to secure the due payment of such legacy.
101. Bond conditioned for the repayment of the purchase-money, in case one of the vendors, an infant, on attaining twenty-one, should refuse to execute the conveyance.
102. Bond from an executor to indemnify a bond debtor who pays off a bond debt due to the testator, such bond having been lost or mislaid.
103. Bond with two sureties to secure the balance of a banking account.
104. Bond of indemnity to trustees advancing part of trust moneys to husband and wife, which had been limited by marriage settlement, upon trust for the benefit of the husband and wife, and issue of the marriage, with an absolute limitation in favour of the husband upon failure of such issue, no issue having been born, and there being no prospect of any.
105. Form of a post obit bond.
106. Defeasance of a warrant of attorney to accompany the foregoing security.
107. Post obit bond in consideration of the release of a debt.
108. Memorandum of the delivery of a post obit bond, sealed up in an envelope, into the custody of a depositary, to be kept so sealed up during the lifetime of the party upon whose decease it is to become payable, unless sooner redeemed.
109. Covenant from bankers not to sue sureties on their bond to secure the balance of the banking account of the principal, until the latter, or his sureties, shall omit to pay the same after three calendar months' notice.
110. Bond by an intended husband to the trustees of the marriage settlement, to authorise his wife to make a will of all such personal property as shall devolve upon her during the marriage.
111. Bond given by a builder and two sureties for the due performance of a contract to build a dwelling-house according to a specified plan.
112. Bond of resignation of a living.
113. Form of assent by an executor to the bequest of a leasehold estate.
114. Assent to a bequest, and assignment of leasehold property by indenture, by an executor to a legatee, the legatee covenanting to indemnify the former against the rent and covenants of the lease.
115. Miscellaneous forms of recitals, arranged alphabetically.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s. calf.

Note.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850 price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).
Copyright Amendment Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

ADVANTAGES OFFERED.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The assured may reside in most parts of the world, without extra charge, and in all parts by payment of a small extra premium.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without increasing on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will therefore derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital—thus combining in the same office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to £850,000, and the Income exceeds £136,000 per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared; at the last in January 1838, the sum of 121,193*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 24*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division, so that if only one year's Premium be unpaid prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June, 1853, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next, will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied at the option of the assured in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced rates, and the Premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other Sale Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable except in case of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life, from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly; but if a payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of parties desirous to assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing to the Office.

FIRE INSURANCES are also effected by this Company, on the most moderate terms.

AGENTS.

Edinburgh.—M'Intosh and Ducat, W.S. 68, Great King-street; D. S. Peddie, George-street.

Glasgow.—Peter White, 20, Buchanan-street; William Lang, 20, St. Vincent-place; John Carmichael, 5, Dixon-street; William Robertson, Tronvate Branch of the City of Glasgow Bank.

Agents are wanted in those towns where no appointments have been made. Applications to be made to Mr. W. L. NEWMAN, Actuary and Secretary, York.

Agent for London, Mr. THOMAS S. NOBLE, Solicitor, 5, St. John-street Bedford-row.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.—Used in the Royal Laundry and Wotherspoon's Steam-made Confections. Sold by all grocers and druggists.

Glasgow R. WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, Dunlop-street.
London—WOTHERSPOON and Co. 40, King William-street, City.

SPECTACLES and EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of SMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the sight. Barristers and public speakers will find great convenience in the use of Pantoscopic Spectacles, as they enable the wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

Telescopes of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

Opera Glasses, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical, Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as objectionable and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obviously saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S Office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently includes the profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 1*l.* 10*s.* A first-rate funeral, 2*l.* for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 42*s.*; gentlemen's, 3*l.*, 4*l.* and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriages, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*; single horses, 1*l.* 1*s.*; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1*l.* 1*s.* each.—City-road, near Bunhill-fields Burial-ground; and at No. 18, North-street, Quadrant, Brighton. Originated in 1849.

OUR GUINEA FRENCH LAMP, brass fittings, newest, elite-relievo designs, in bronze, with stand, globe, glass, &c. warranted for twelve months. Matchless, try where you will. The brilliancy and economy of the light are unequalled, and the simplicity and durability of the Lamps sold at this house, are now fully established. Finest Paris Oil, 4*s.* per gallon.

SMITH'S OLD-ESTABLISHED LAMP AND OIL DEPOT, 331, STRAND (exactly opposite Norfolk-street). Lists free by post.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1*l.* 10*s.* sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary power, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful power; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly-invented preserving Spectacles, invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—FURNITURE and every description of property carefully PACKED, Removed, and Warehoused in extensive fire-proof well-ventilated Warehouses, at charges below any similar establishment. It is the most extensive depository of the kind, and the best adapted to its purpose. Estimates given free of cost. Separate rooms if desired. Every information and ample references on application to Mr. HARRISON, at the Thames-bank Depository, Rowlandson-road, adjoining Cubitt's Pimlico-pier. Water-side Manufacturing Premises and Cellars to be Let.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MELTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while its lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by E. BROWN, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the De Guisne Parisian Polish for Dress Boots and Shoes, and Waterproof Varnish for Hunting Boots.

MANUFACTORY, 25, BROAD-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE.

Patronized by the Court and Nobility, and to be had at all the principal shops throughout the kingdom.

Now ready,

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1853. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 5*s.* 6*d.* cloth; 11*s.* half-calf; 12*s.* calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850. price 7*s.* 6*d.* and 1851. price 7*s.*

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1853:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.
Copyright Amendment Act.	Militia Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.	Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.	County Courts Improvement Act.
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.	Trustees Act Extension Act.
Hook-in-Trade Act.	Pharmacy Act.
Application of Highway Rates to Turnpike Roads Act.	Corrupt Practices at Elections.
Property-Tax Continuance Act.	Excise Summary Proceedings.
Act for Re-assembling Parliament.	Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues Act.
Will Act Amendment Act.	Metropolitan Sewers Act.
Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages Act.	Naval Prize Officers Act.
Apprehension of Deserters from Foreign Ships Act.	Militia Ballots Suspension Act.
Industrial and Provident Societies Act.	Common Law Procedure Act.
Protestant Dissenters Act.	Secretary of Bankrupts' Office Abolition Act.
Appointment of Overseers Act.	Commons Inclosure Acts Extension Act.
General Board of Health Act (No. 1 and No. 2).	Masters in Chancery Abolition.
Disabilities Repeal Act.	County Rates Act.
Passengers Act Amendment Act.	Patent Law Amendment Act.
	Metropolis Water Supply Act.
	Metropolitan Burials Act.
	Improvement of the Jurisdiction of Equity Act.
	Suitors in Chancery Relief Act.

THE LAW RELATING TO MASTER AND SERVANT, comprising Domestic and Menial Servants and Clerks, Husbandmen, and Persons employed in the different Manufactures, and the principal Statutes relating to Workmen, the Settlement of Disputes, Statute of Work, Limitation of Labour, Payment of Wages, School Attendance of Children, &c. including the NEW FACTORY ACT (15 & 16 Vict. c. 5), with General Observations, all the Cases up to the present time, and a copious Index. By CHARLES J. R. HERTSLET, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Price 7*s.* 6*d.* boards; 8*s.* cloth; 9*s.* 6*d.* half-calf; 10*s.* 6*d.* calf.

"A little work on the Law relative to Master and Servant, by Mr. C. J. R. Hertslet, has just been issued, which will prove valuable to all classes, and is calculated to prevent wrongs and inconveniences which are often inflicted or submitted to on each side through ignorance of the actual nature of the responsibilities which exist. The various decisions in connection with the subject appear to have been digested with much care; and the author has collected those statutes which contain general regulations in reference to the contract between the employer and the employed, as well as those relating to particular occupations. By persons employed in offices and manufactories, with large numbers of clerks and workmen, as well as in ordinary servants, such a volume has long been wanted."—The Times.

London: JOHN CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

AMERICAN CLOCK WAREHOUSE, 545 and 546, NEW OXFORD-STREET, will be found the largest assortment of [illegible] American Clocks, ever imported into this country, by the oldest and most celebrated Manufacturers in the United States. All our clocks are warranted to keep correct time. The prices are—for Thirty-hour Clocks, 14s., 18s., and 22s.; Eight-day Clocks, 22s. and 32s.

Also, the CHILD'S TIME-TELLER, a new American invention for the amusement and instruction of children. It combines the Pony and Carriage, and by the graceful and easy exercise promotes the muscular development of the arms and chest. It is recommended by the medical faculty, and approved by all who have seen it. Together with every variety of American Goods.

Sold wholesale and retail by the Manufacturers and Importers, ROGERS and Co. 545 and 546, New Oxford-street.

PATENT REVERSIBLE OVERCOATS, &c. which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal.—W. BERRIDGE, 23, NEW BOND-STREET, and 69, CORNHILL (only).—ECONOMY, UTILITY, ECONOMY, all unite in commending this invention to general adoption. The Patent Cloth, having two perfect and totally dissimilar faces, can be worn either side outwards, thus each garment being equivalent to two at the cost of one. For Overcoats of every kind, the new Anglaves, and all other CAPES, SHOOTING, and MORNING COATS, this discovery is especially appropriate, also for LADIES' CLOAKS, MANTLES, &c. A variety of the materials and garments kept for selection; also one of the largest stocks in London of superior OVERCOATS of every description. CAPES, SHOOTING-JACKETS, BOYS' OVERCOATS, &c. all guaranteed to resist any amount of rain.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully destroyed in each, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1790, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 3l. 13s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for winter trousers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trousers, from 21s. to 26s. per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 13s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, and 57, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 Vict. cap. 65), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved style of coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 3l. and 3 guineas.—The improved Winter Guinea Trousers are also ready for selection, from a choice variety of patterns. In London only of B. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.

94, Regent-street.

WELLINGTON SURTOUT. F. B. SANGUINETTI begs the notice of his friends and the public in general to the above Surtout, patronised by the Royal Family and principal Nobility, which is now by its style, elegance, and comfort to the wearer, universally acknowledged to be unequalled by any other coat worn. To be had only at his establishment, 62, Regent-street, London. The Best Llama Cloth, 2l. 2s.; the patent Elastic Cloth, 3l. 13s. 6d. Home Agents supplied on the shortest notice. Foreign agents by every mail on the 25th of the month.—52, Regent-street (next door to the County Fire Office).

Also, Sole Wholesale Licenses of the new double-faced CLOTH REVERSIBLE GARMENTS, protected by Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

SCOTT and CO. FIRST CLASS MERCHANT TAILORS (from H. J. and D. Nicoll's), 156, REGENT-STREET (corner of Beak-street), LONDON; and PAVILION HOUSE, BRIGHTON.

INVENTORS of the PALLIAMENT (a great improvement upon the Paletot), the DONCASTER MORNING COAT, and the TALMA, a new equestrian or walking CLOAK-COAT.

All the new styles in Over Coats for the coming season, and the greatest novelties in Anerzas and Scotch Tweeds for Trousers.

SCOTT and CO. 156, REGENT-STREET, LONDON; and PAVILION HOUSE, BRIGHTON.

"WE congratulate the Public upon the good effects which the liberal commercial policy originated by MILES, of 69, New Bond-street has had, whereby they obtain trousers from 1,000 different patterns, at Sixteen Shillings per pair, and in the very street that they would formerly have been charged Two Guineas. This is free-trade with a vengeance."—United Service Gazette.

EUREKA.—In FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are united the best material and first-rate workmanship, together with that peculiar excellence of fit which is their distinguishing characteristic. Their superiority to all others is still maintained; and gentlemen who desire the luxury of a perfect fitting shirt are invited to try them. The prices are, for the first quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 36s.; coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices, and instructions for measurement, post-free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free, on receipt of six stamps.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry (late 128, Strand).

PROFESSIONAL GENTLEMEN and the COMMERCIAL COMMUNITY are strongly recommended to try BLACKWOOD and CO.'S COPYING and other WRITING INKS, contained in the registered sliding conducting bottles, with durable cork. The copying ink combines advantages never before obtained; among others, it will give a clear impression many days after writing, and a duplicate copy if required. Blackwood and Co.'s Ready Reference Files are indispensable to all who value time, method, and neatness in keeping their letters, papers, &c.

Sold by Stirrup and Eade, 6, Dunstan's-hill; Wilson and Son, Cheapside; Wm. Tegg and Co., Queen-street, City; Simms, Bloss, and Co. Cornhill; Bailey, Brothers, Royal Exchange-buildings; W. S. GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.—Many inquiries having been made as to the Durability of this Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in drawing attention to the following letter, received

FROM MR. C. HACKER, SURVEYOR TO THE DUKE OF BEDFORD.

"Office of Works, Woburn-park, Jan. 10, 1852.

"In answer to your inquiries respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for Pump Suctions, I find that the water has not affected it in the least, although it will cost lead through in two years; we have adopted it largely, both on account of being cheaper than lead, much easier fixed, and a more perfect job.

"Yours, &c. C. HACKER."

N.B. The Company's Illustrated Circulars, containing Instructions to Plumbers for joining tubes, lining tanks, &c. will be forwarded on the receipt of three postage stamps.

The GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES, 18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

CAUTION.

TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public, and serious injury to myself.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

95, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

Messrs Thos. Milner and Son.

Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUBRO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

STANDS FOR STOVES, 2s. 6d. 3s. and 3s. 6d. EACH.

CAUTION.—An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor, in the case of Nash v. Carmen, restraining the defendant from making or selling any colourable imitation of the plaintiff's Stove or fuel, the public is respectfully informed, that the original "Joyce's Patent Stove without a Flue, and the prepared Fuel," can only be obtained from SWAN NASH, or his authorised Agents. Every genuine Stove has the name and address of the proprietor on a brass plate, "SWAN NASH, No. 283, Oxford-street."

Joyce's Patent for Warming Halls, Passages, Greenhouses, Water Closets, Shops, Store-rooms, and all places requiring artificial warmth.

N.B. The Soup is sufficiently portable to be sent by any part of the country—3s. 6d. per quart.

BASS'S EAST-INDIA PALE ALE.—The October brewings of this much-esteemed beer are now arriving from Burton, and may be had in prime from 18 gallons upwards. This ale in bottles is in good condition for home use and for shipping. It is sealed and labelled, and each cask is branded, BASS, BEDFORD and Co. a precaution necessary, as much beer brewed for Bass's which is not brewed by them. Hanbury's Stout and Porter, the strong and light Burton and Scotch Ales, and Kingdon's Cider, may also be had of

BERRY BROTHERS and Co. 3, St. James's-street.

MESSRS. ALLSOPP and SONS' PALE or BITTER ALES have been unquestionably vouched by the most eminent scientific and medical men of the day to be a very agreeable and efficient tonic, as a general beverage both for the invalid and the robust; and as tending, from the pure and simple nature of the ingredients employed, the moderate proportion of alcohol present, and the very considerable quantity of carbonic anodyne bitter derived from hops alone which they contain, to preserve the tone and vigour of the stomach, and to accelerate the restoration of that organ when in a state of weakness, debility, or irritability."

In all cases in which Malt Liquors are suitable, none meet the desired effect more certainly, none are prescribed with more confidence by the Faculty. "The careful manner in which the fermentation is conducted, causes them to assimilate to Foreign Wines more than the ordinary ales of this country; and on this account they do not occasion that acidity of stomach created by the less perfectly fermented ales." "These Bitter Beers differ from all other preparations of malt, in containing a smaller amount of extractive matter, thus being less viscid and saccharine, and consequently more easy of digestion. They resemble, indeed, from their lightness, a WINE of MALT rather than an ordinary fermented infusion; and it is very satisfactory to find that a beverage of such general consumption is entirely free from every kind of impurity."

ALLSOPP'S PALE OR BITTER ALE may be obtained in casks of 18 gallons and upwards, from the Brewery, Burton-on-Trent; and from the undermentioned Branch Establishments:—

LONDON, at 61, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.
LIVERPOOL, at COBB-STREET.
MANCHESTER, at DUCIE-PLACE.
DUDLEY, at BURY TYTH.
GLASGOW, at 115, ST. VINCENT-STREET.
DUBLIN, at ULSTER CHAMBERS, DAME-STREET.
BIRMINGHAM, at MARKET HALL.

At either of which places a list of respectable parties who supply the beer in bottles (and also in casks, at the same prices as from the Brewery), may at any time be seen.

BARON LIEBIG ON PALE ALES.

MESSRS. "TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 31, 1851.

The husk, &c. form about one-sixth of the whole nut, so that, by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of cocoa-drinkers to make a trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per pound. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now in drunk at the tables of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

HANDFORD AND DAVIES, 61, HIGH HOLBORN.

BACON'S CENTRAL HOTEL, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.—THOMAS BACON begs respectfully to call the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public to the convenience of the Hotel, situate as it is in the centre of the metropolis, in the immediate vicinity of the courts of law, operas, theatres, &c. and at an easy distance from the railway stations. The above establishment, containing elegant suites of apartments for families, and an excellent coffee-room, with the additional security of a fire-proof staircase, will be found most advantageous to parties visiting London, being quiet, airy, and replete with every comfort. The charges are moderate, and include attendance of every description. A night porter always in readiness for the arrival of trains.

95, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, COVENT-GARDEN.—S. A. BACON begs respectfully to inform his friends, professional gentlemen, their families, and the public, that he has taken the above HOTEL, which, from its central situation and proximity to places of business and amusement, with spacious sitting rooms, quiet and airy bed-rooms on the ground and first floor, combined with strict attention, he trusts will command their kind support and recommendation.

N.B. A fixed charge for servants.

CROWN HOTEL and TAVERN, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, Haymarket.

GEORGE BOTT begs to inform professional and private gentlemen visiting London, that they will find at the above Hotel every comfort and accommodation, with moderate charges. It is most centrally situate, in the immediate neighbourhood of the Houses of Parliament, Courts of Law, Public Offices, Theatres, Parks, and all Places of Public Amusement. The private sitting and bed-rooms are commodious and replete with comfort; the coffee and smoking-room is capacious and well ventilated.

Dinners always ready from One till Seven o'clock.

An excellent assortment of wines and spirits of the first quality.

Omnibuses to all parts every minute, fares, 3d. and 6d.

A night porter always in attendance.

CARRIAGES.—The WIDOW of DAVID IVALL, in acknowledging the patronage received since his decease, begs to assure the nobility and gentry the business is conducted in the same manner as heretofore, and invites them to inspect the extensive and modern ASSORTMENT of well-manufactured CARRIAGES, which will now be sold, owing to the decline of the season, at a considerable reduction.

At the old-established Manufactory, 188, Tottenham-court-road.

PONY PHAETONS, under duty.—A choice of these elegant little Carriages, new and second-hand, of the above description, and at unusually low prices, in consequence of the lateness of the season.—At CATTELL'S (late Holman's), 128, Long-acre. N.B. A second-hand dog-cart, in first-rate order, 25 guineas.

LIGHT BROUGHAMS.—Messrs. THORN beg to solicit an inspection of their improved roomy Carriages, hung on a new principle, whereby ease, lightness, and convenience are secured, and the drumming noise so much complained of entirely removed. Carriages let on hire, with option to purchase, 30, John-street, Oxford-street. N.B. Inventors of the Patent Antinoctive Springs, Carriage Ventilators, and Self-acting Steps; all of which can be fixed to old carriages.

MR. CROCKFORD begs to inform the Profession, that at the suggestion of many Solicitors he is making arrangements for the most prompt and perfect PRINTING of BILLS and PROCEEDINGS in EQUITY, as required by the new Rules.—The Compositors and Readers in the Printing-office of a Legal Journal being familiarized with the abbreviations used in offices, as well as with legal words and phrases, they will be enabled to print documents from the draft, without requiring a fair copy, and more easily and correctly than it can be done where these advantages are not found. A complete supply of uniform types, paper, and other apparatus, will be kept for the purpose, and arrangements made to secure correctness, speed, and secrecy.

"I find your system very satisfactory."
"Satisfactory and advantageous."
"We have found it to work satisfactorily."
"The most satisfactory ever brought under our notice."
"It ought to be widely adopted: it works most admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and has the advantage of being very simple. The more I use it the more am I pleased with it."
"A great advantage."
"Decidedly a great improvement."
"I much approve of your system."
"I testify my entire approbation of your system."
"I take great interest in the successful working of your system."
"I am convinced of the superiority of your system over all others that have come under my notice: it only requires to be known to be appreciated."
"Its best feature next to its soundness is its simplicity."
"We much approve of it, and will recommend it to our friends."
"I am most thoroughly satisfied of its accuracy and value."
"We quite appreciate the system."
"We have derived advantage from its adoption."
"The system is simple and easy."
"We can with confidence recommend it."
"We are much pleased with the system."
"Many of the profession here (Liverpool) have adopted the system."
"After a year and a half's trial, we increasingly appreciate the simplicity and accuracy of the system."
"We have kept our books by this system for two years, and have found it a great saving of time and trouble, and at the same time correct and satisfactory."
An exemplification can be had of the Author, price 2*s.* post-paid, of whom also are to be had, the necessary Account-Books.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Common Law Procedure Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and third, an outline of the action of ejectment as it was and as it is. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.
"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine.
"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.
"The introductory and illustrative portions of the volume before us will be found exceedingly useful under the new and untried Act."—Globe.
The First Edition has now been for ten days out of print. The SECOND EDITION is in the press. It will contain all the cases decided on the Act during Michaelmas Term, the new Tables of Fees, &c. and will be published on the 8th of December.

EDUCATION BY THE SEA-SIDE.—WESTON PARK SCHOOL, WELLINGTON HOUSE, WESTON-SUPER-MARE, SOMERSET.—The Rev. Joseph Hopkins, assisted by the ablest Masters, continues to receive a limited number of Young Gentlemen, for the purpose of imparting to them a Finished, Commercial, Classical, and Mathematical Education.
Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins bestow careful and constant attention on the health and domestic comfort of those who are entrusted to their charge; and watch with prayerful solicitude over their religious as well as their intellectual improvement.
Wellington House, besides being well situated, ventilated, and commodious, is very convenient for sea bathing, offers the advantage of a good play-ground, and is immediately contiguous to the best road for rural walks.
Weston-super-Mare has long been celebrated as a place most favourable to the health and vigour of the young; is accessible from the western, south-western, and midland counties, and the principality of Wales, and Ireland; while it is within a few hours' ride of the metropolis, by the Great Western and Bristol and Exeter Railways.
An Articled Pupil is desired.

IMPERIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
1, Old Broad-street, London.
Thomas Newman Hunt, esq. Chairman.
John Horsley Palmer, esq. Deputy-Chairman.

A NEW SCALE OF PREMIUMS on Insurances for the whole term of life has recently been adopted, by which a material reduction has been made at all ages below 50 years.

FOUR-FIFTHS, or 80 per cent. of the Profits, are assigned to Policies every fifth year, and may be applied to increase the sum insured, to an immediate payment in Cash, or to the reduction and ultimate extinction of future premiums.

ONE-THIRD of the Premium on Insurances of 500*l.* and upwards, for the whole term of life, may remain as a debt upon the policy, to be paid off at convenience, by which means 1,500*l.* may be insured for the present outlay otherwise required for 1,000*l.*

LOANS.—The Directors will lend sums of 50*l.* and upwards on the security of Policies effected with this Company for the whole term of life, when they have acquired an adequate value.

SECURITY.—Those who effect Insurances with this Company are protected by its large Subscribed Capital from the risk incurred by Members of Mutual Societies.

INSURANCES without participation in Profits may be effected at reduced rates.
SAMUEL INGALL, Actuary.

This Society has now been established nearly a century and a half, and is the oldest institution for Life Assurance in existence. Its principles are essentially those of mutual assurance. Being a body corporate, the members are secured against all individual responsibility; while, as there is no proprietary body, every member participates in all the profits of the Society.

Members at the time of admission have the option of two modes of assuring viz.:—On the charter plan, by which the representative of the life assured is entitled, immediately upon the policy becoming a claim, to an addition of such amount as the premiums are found capable of assuring; or on the bonus plan, whereby the profits are added to the policies every seventh year, and may be applied either to the reduction of annual premiums or surrendered for an immediate payment in money.

Assurances are likewise granted without participation of profits at reduced rates of premium, and upon every contingency depending on human life.

Prospectuses and every information may be obtained at the office. HENRY THOS. THOMSON, Registrar.

This Society is established for the purpose of extending to Clergymen and Members of the Universities many important improvements in Life Assurance not afforded by other companies with which they are connected; and in furtherance of this object, a mutually advantageous connection has been effected with the Friend of the Clergy Society; and the Directors of this Society are members also of that important institut on.

The Protective Capital is 250,000*l.* in 50,000 shares of 5*l.* each, which will be allotted to the Clergy and Laity.

The following are among the leading advantages offered to Assurers; and a comparison with the majority of other Assurance Societies will shew that this Office is peculiarly suited to the requirements, not only of the Clergy, but of the Public generally.

1. Policies of Assurance may be transferred from one life to another.

2. Assurances may be effected at moderate rates for Short Terms of Years, for the purpose of Loans and Mortgages, and may be Renewed, if desired, at the end of the term. This is deserving of the attention of Solicitors.

3. Provisions for old age and Annuities are granted on a new and advantageous principle, specially prepared by Arthur Scratchley, esq. M.A., F.R.A.S. the Society's Consulting Actuary.

4. Policies will also be granted for the Assurance of persons against Death, Injury, or Affliction by Accident, or other contingency.

5. Loans are made by this Society upon personal or real security; and advances are made to Assurers, to enable them to meet the expenses of educating their children at the Universities, or to start them in profes ions, &c.

Clergymen and others can also obtain advances to assist them in purchasing Advowsons, or to effect repairs in Parsonage Houses, and other improvements on Church property.

6. Members of this Society, and their relations, who may be holding situations of Trust, can have their integrity guaranteed on a plan of combined Life Assurance and Fidelity Policy, whereby a certain profit is assured to them if they faithfully discharge the duties of their appointment.

Applications for Shares may be made to the Secretary, at the Temporary Offices of the Institution, 18A, Basinghall-street; to the Solicitor; or to Mr. PEARS, Sharebroker, 5, Bartholomew-lane, Bank. STEPHEN J. ALDRICH, Secretary.

ANCHOR ASSURANCE COMPANY,
67, Cheapside, London.

For the YOUNGER AGES the Premiums of Life Assurance required by this Company will be found lower than those of most other offices; while the BONUS ADDITIONS that are periodically made to the sums assured from the Company's profits, tend still further to lessen the outlay on account of premium.

Life Annuities are granted by the Company on the most equitable Terms.

Prospectuses may be had on application.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to, the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

SPECTACLES and EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of SMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the sight. Barristers and public speakers will find great convenience in the use of Pantoscopic Spectacles, as they enable the wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

Telescopes of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

Opera Glasses, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical, Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, COVENT-GARDEN.—S. A. BACON begs respectfully to inform his friends, professional gentlemen, their families, and the public, that he has taken the above HOTEL, which, from its central situation and proximity to places of business and amusement, with spacious sitting rooms, quiet and airy bed-rooms on the ground and first-floor, combined with strict attention, he trusts will command their kind support and recommendation.

N.B. A fixed charge for servants.

LIGHT BROUGHAMS. — Messrs. THORN beg to solicit an inspection of their improved roomy Carriages, hung on a new principle, whereby ease, lightness, and convenience are secured, and the drumming noise so much complained of entirely removed. Carriages let on job, with option to purchase. —10, John-street, Oxford-street. N.B. Inventors of the patent Aquamotive Springs, Carriage Ventilators, and Self-acting Steps; all of which can be fixed to old carriages.

PATENT REVERSIBLE OVERCOATS, &c. which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal W BERIDGE, 86, NEW BOND-STREET, and 69, CORNHILL only!—ROYALTY, UTILITY, ECONOMY, all unite in commending this invention to general adoption. The Patent Cloth, having two perfect and totally dissimilar faces, can be worn either side outwards, thus each garment being equivalent to two at the cost of one. For Overcoats of every kind, the new Anglesea, and all other CAPES, SHOOTING, and MORNING COATS, this discovery is especially appropriate, also for LADIES' CLOAKS, MANTLES, &c. A variety of the materials and garments kept for selection; also one of the largest stocks in London of superior OVERCOATS of every description. CAPES, SHOOTING JACKETS, BOYS' OVERCOATS, &c. all guaranteed to resist any amount of rain.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions. —EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London. —The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in each, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

26, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

Messrs. Thos. MILNER and SON,

GENTLEMEN,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUBRO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

SCARLETT'S MOCK TURTLE SOUP.—SCARLETT and SON respectfully inform the public in general that the MOCK TURTLE made by them, of acknowledged delicious quality and flavour, is by many pronounced equal to the real.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 31, 1851.

The husk, &c. form about one-sixth of the whole nut, so that, by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of cocoa-drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per pound. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drunk at the tables of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. His method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication: and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet street. At home from Ten till Five.

PERIODICAL SALE (established in 1843), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1852.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the present year, as under:—

Thursday, December 2.

Mr. Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sales, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Notices of sales should be forwarded to Mr. Marsh a fortnight previous to the above date. Mr. Marsh requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained. The NEXT SALE will take place on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2.—2, Charlotte-row, Mansion house.

NOTICE of SALE by PRIVATE CONTRACT.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that the MANOR of BATTLESWICK, near COLCHESTER, advertised to be sold by auction at the Mart on Thursday next, Dec. 2, IS DISPOSED OF by private contract.

MR. MARSH begs to inform the numerous applicants, that the MANOR of OFFTON CASTLE, advertised to be sold by auction at the Mart on Thursday next, Dec. 2, IS DISPOSED OF by private contract.

2, Charlotte-row, Mansion House.

NEAR to ELY and CAMBRIDGE.—The important and extensive fine arbitrary Freehold Manor of Wicken, an Hour and a Quarter's Ride from London by the Eastern Counties Railway.

MR. MARSH will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, at Twelve o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by Private Contract), by order of Executors, and in pursuance of the trusts of the will, of the late proprietor, the MANOR of WICKEN, one of the most extensive in the county of Cambridge, comprising a great number of Houses, and a very large quantity of Copyhold Land, of first-rate quality. The average lord's annual income, from fines and quit-rents, has been about £50, per annum. There is a valuable right of fishery. The stewardship is of considerable value, there being about 200 copyhold tenements. The manor is intermixed with the estates of Earl Hardwicke and many wealthy small proprietors.—Full particulars are being prepared, and may shortly be had of Mr. Marsh, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

NORFOLK.—Highly valuable Manorial Rights, fines arbitrary, between Brandon and Swaffham, the freehold manor of Gooderstone with Oxburgh.

MR. MARSH will SELL by AUCTION, by order of the Executors, at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2 at Twelve o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the MANOR of GOODERSTONE, comprising nearly the entire village of Gooderstone, inn, mill, residences, shops, cottages, farm buildings, and about 1,000 acres of land, mostly of first-rate quality, and in the best part of the parish. The average lord's income being about £60 per annum. This manor lies amongst the estates of Sir H. P. Bedingfeld, bart.; W. C. Amherst, esq.; — Caldwell, esq.; Lord Walsingham, and other wealthy owners. A very large capital sum, or heavy rent charge, may be gradually realised, under the Copyhold Enfranchisement Acts.—Particulars are in course of preparation, and may shortly be had of Mr. Marsh, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

A Mortgage Debt for 2,700l. amply secured.

MR. MARSH has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, at Twelve, a valuable MORTGAGE DEBT, now amounting to about 2,700l. amply eventually secured and expected to be realised in about twelve months, bearing interest at 5l. per cent. Further particulars will appear in future advertisements, and in the mean time every information may be obtained of Messrs. Cuddon, Norwich, and at Mr. Marsh's Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

READING, BERKS.—A desirable Freehold Residence, within a mile of the station, suitable either for investment or occupation, with superior professional offices attached.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, at TWELVE (unless previously disposed of by private sale), a substantial brick built FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, most desirably situate in London-street, Reading, a most improving part of the town, well adapted either for a professional or private residence, containing seven bed-rooms, breakfast parlour, well-proportioned dining and drawing rooms, kitchen, scullery, and all requisite domestic offices, a suite of well arranged professional offices, with rooms over, coach-house, stabling, &c. and in the rear a large garden. The premises might, if required, be converted into two residences at a comparatively small outlay. May be viewed by cards, and particulars obtained, at the Bear Hotel, Reading; of Thomas Dean, Esq. Solicitor, 13, St Swithin's-lane; of H. S. Rumpath, Esq. Solicitor, 9, Old Jewry Chambers; at the Mart; and of Mr. Marsh, Auctioneer and Estate Agent, 2 Charlotte row, Mansion-house.

THE COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT.
This day is published, in 12mo, price 10s. cloth,
THE COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT,
with numerous Notes, explanatory of its practical effect as to Process, Practice and Pleading, and an Introduction. By E. MORRIS, Esq. Assistant Master of the Court of Exchequer, and W. F. FINLASON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, and Special Pleader.

PERIODICAL SALE established in 1825, removed to the first Thursday in every month. Absolute and Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Policies of Assurance, Shares in Public Companies, Bank Stocks, Annuities, Advowsons, Trust Funds, Partnerships, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance, and other public undertakings for the year 1858.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1825), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the ensuing year, as under:—

Thursday, January 6th.	Thursday, July 7th.
Thursday, February 3rd.	Thursday, August 4th.
Thursday, March 3rd.	Thursday, September 1st.
Thursday, April 7th.	Thursday, October 6th.
Thursday, May 5th.	Thursday, November 3rd.
Thursday, June 2nd.	Thursday, December 1st.

Mr. Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sale, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Epochs of sales should be forwarded to Mr. Marsh a fortnight previous to the above dates. Mr Marsh requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained. The NEXT SALE will take place on THURSDAY, JANUARY 6th.

2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

SUFFOLK.—Near to Bury St. Edmunds.—Valuable and important fine Arbitrary Manors.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the Executors, pursuant to the trusts of the will of the deceased proprietor, to submit to SALE by PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, in the City of London on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1858, at TWELVE o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract) an extensive and exceedingly valuable FREEHOLD MANORS and Estates, of Cockfield Otterwise Cockfield Hall, and Earl's Hall, in Cockfield, with the arbitrary fines, quit and other rents thereto belonging comprise numerous houses, and a large tract of very valuable copyhold land, all subject to arbitrary fines The lord's average annual income from fines is 16l. and the quit and other rents amount to 8l. making a total income of nearly 20l. per annum. The stewardship of these manors is a valuable appointment.—Particulars, with conditions of sale, may be obtained of Messrs. HUXLEY, Esq. 3, Middle Temple-lane; of Messrs. CUDDON, Norwich; and at Mr. MARSH's Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, London, or will be forwarded on application.

NEAR COLCHESTER, and close to the Ardleigh Railway Station, within two hours' ride from London

MR. MARSH has received instructions from the Executors (and pursuant to the will of the late Proprietor) to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART in the City of London, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1858, at Twelve o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract) the valuable FREEHOLD MANOR of BOVILL'S HALL in Ardleigh. The manor comprises an inn and about thirty-five houses, and some land; fine arbitrary. Also about ten houses and seventy acres of land; fine certain The lord's average income from fines and quit-rents is about 44l. per annum There are numerous copyhold tenements, and the stewardship of this manor is more than usually valuable. The situation of the property is most desirable, and the neighbourhood being so select, insures a good investment.—Particulars and conditions of sale may be obtained of Tom HUXLEY, Esq. 3, Middle Temple lane, of Messrs. CUDDON, Norwich; and at Mr. MARSH's Auction and Estate Agency Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house London

A valuable and well-secured Mortgage Debt of 2,200l. for absolute sale.

MR. MARSH has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, at Twelve, a valuable MORTGAGE DEBT for the sum of 2,200l. 5s. 6d. (residue of a larger sum), amply and undeniably secured by two mortgages of large and most eligible and improved freeholds in Camberwell, which exhibit, on the present day, a rental of 300l. per annum, and, on the principle of realisation, to that payment of the above mortgage debt may be expected within about twelve months, rendering it an investment well worthy the attention of capitalists.—Particulars, with conditions of sale, may be obtained at the Mart, of Messrs. Cuddon, Norwich; of Thos. Huxley, Esq. 3, Middle Temple-lane; and at Mr. Marsh's Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

Small Genteel Houses and eligible Plots of Building Ground, North-eastmore of Brighton.—Twenty Freeholds.

MESSRS. RIDLEY and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at their ESTATE SALE-ROOM, 158, North-street, Brighton, by order of the Trustees in trust of Mr. William Hammond, on MONDAY, DEC. 13, at Twelve for One, TWENTY LOTS, the following FREEHOLDS, viz.:—Two genteel Houses on the London-road; Two genteel Residences and three eligible Plots of Building Ground, six of which comprise a frontage of about 17 feet and a depth of something more than 70 feet each, and the other a frontage of about 16 feet, and depth of 85 feet, delightfully situate in Rose Hill-terrace, Londonroad; Five neat, small, Freehold Houses in Montpelier-place and Four equally eligible Houses, pleasantly situate in Viaduct-terrace, running parallel with Rose Hill-terrace. All the above properties are situate within a stone's throw of each other The Auctioneers' desire and instructions are, not to burden this announcement with any solicitude further than the expression of their confidence as to the eligibility of the houses, and that the plots of building-ground are also of a superior order, that are likely cannot fail to realise all the commendation now attempted to be bestowed on them.—Particulars, conditions, and plans may be had at Garraway's, London; and in Brighton, of Mr. Durrv, Surveyor, Trafalgar-street; Thomas King, Esq. Solicitor, 32, Steyning-place; or Messrs. Ridley and Son, the Auctioneers, 158, North-street, and 58, Queen's-road.

FOR THE LEGISLATOR, THE MAGISTRATE, AND THE LAWYER.

VOL. XX.—No. 506.] SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1852. Price 1s. Double Number.

Money, Wanted and to Lend.

MONEY.—20,000*l.* and several smaller sums ready to be advanced on mortgage, at 3*l.* 10*s.* per cent.
Apply to Messrs. SCHOLEY, MARSDEN, and SHEPWORTH, Solicitors, Wakefield.

MORTGAGE.—Trustees wish to invest 30,000*l.* either in one sum or in smaller sums of not less than 3,000*l.* on mortgage of freehold property. 3½ per cent. required on landed security. No commission.
Apply by letter, post-paid, to "T. R." Messrs. WITHERBY'S, Birchin lane.

MONEY.—32,000*l.* at 3 per cent.—Wanted, for a term, the above sum on freehold property of most ample value, situate a few miles from Edinburgh.
Apply to Messrs. GUY, HERD, and HARRIS, Solicitors, 8, Cannon-row, Westminster.

Situations, Wanted and Vacant.

LAW.—Wanted, in an Office of general and varied practice, in a large manufacturing town in Lancashire, a Gentleman, possessing a practical knowledge of Common Law, Bankruptcy, and Conveyancing. Preference will be given to one well up in Conveyancing, if, in addition, he possesses a knowledge of Parochial and Municipal Law. As a liberal salary will be given, and the most undeniable testimonials for ability and character required, it is requested that only such as are able to comply will furnish "A. B. C." (No. 506) LAW TIMES Office, with age, references, and salary expected.

LAW.—TO CLERKS.—Wanted, in a Solicitor's Office in the country, a Copying and Engrossing Clerk. A good penman is required. Salary, 1*l.* per week.
Apply, stating age and previous employment, to "S. S." (No. 506) LAW TIMES Office, Essex-street Strand.

WANTED, at Christmas, by a Firm in the Country, an Articled Pupil. Board and lodging with one of the firm, if required.
Address, "O. P." (No. 504), LAW TIMES Office.

CLERK WANTED.—Wanted, a Clerk versed in Chancery practice. Unexceptionable references will be required.
Apply, by letter, with real name and address, stating age, gentleman in whose service he was last, and reason for leaving, and salary expected, to "B. D. K." Messrs. CHARLES and TIVER'S, Law Stationers, Chancery-lane.

LAW.—Wanted, in an Attorney's Office, of limited practice, in Wales, a Clerk, possessing a knowledge of Conveyancing, and thoroughly conversant with the general business of a Country Office, and who is willing to make himself generally useful. Unexceptionable testimonials as to character and ability will be required. Salary not exceeding 100*l.* per annum, and a knowledge of the Welsh language required.
Address, "O. G." (No. 505) LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—Wanted, a Gentleman of business habits, to take the Management of an Office of moderate practice in the country.
Address, with particulars of age, salary required, and previous engagements, and stating if admitted or not, to "O. P." (No. 506), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—A Gentleman, of middle age, and long experience, capable of conducting business in the absence of the principal, wants a Situation in a Country Office as Conveyancing or General Clerk, or as Assistant in the Conveyancing Department of a Town Office, at a moderate salary. Most respectable references.
Address, "J. W." 3, Saville-place, Lambeth.

LAW.—Wanted, a Situation to manage the Bankruptcy department and keep the accounts of a Solicitor or firm of large practice. The advertiser is forty-five years of age, has had upwards of twenty years' experience, and can give the highest possible testimonials. Salary 150*l.*
Apply to "X. Y. Z." care of Mr. ROBERTS, Bookseller, 197, High-street, Exeter.

LAW.—Wanted, by an efficient Conveyancing and Common Law Clerk, of good education and address, aged thirty-one, a Situation in a respectable Office. The insalubrity of the neighbourhood where his present engagement is makes it absolutely necessary that a more congenial residence should be obtained. Ref erences highly reputable.
Address, Mr. GEORGE PRICE, at KAY CLEGG'S, Esq. Solicitor, Oldham.

LAW.—An attentive and obliging young person is wishful to meet with a Situation in a Solicitor's Office in the country; he has been five years in a conveyancing office, and three years in offices where magisterial and poor-law union appointments were held; can keep the books of an office, and would wish to make himself generally useful. Testimonials from his previous employers. Salary, 40*l.* per annum.
Address, "W. H. W." LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—Wanted, a Permanent Situation, in a Solicitor's Office, as Bookkeeper, Abstracting, Copying, and Engrossing Clerk. The Advertiser is fully competent to make out bills of costs, &c. and is also willing to make himself generally useful. He has had upwards of nine years' experience in a solicitor's office; is unmarried, and twenty-four years of age. Unexceptionable references from present employer, who is retiring from the profession.
Address, "C. B." (No. 506), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—Wanted, by a Gentleman lately admitted, a Situation as Assistant Chancery or Conveyancing Clerk, either in town or country. The advertiser is more anxious to obtain employment than a lucrative situation.
Address, "A. Z." Mr. WILDY'S, Law Bookseller, Lincoln's-inn.

LAW.—Wanted, by a Gentleman admitted in 1847, a Managing Clerkship in a country office, or an Engagement in the Conveyancing Department of a London Office. Respectable and satisfactory references will be given.
Address, A. B. 18, King's road, Bedford-row, London.

TO COUNTRY SOLICITORS.—A Gentleman is enforcing claims against trustees for a large amount, affecting considerable properties: he would be glad to communicate with a respectable Solicitor, commanding capital.
Address "L. M. N." Post-office, Norfolk-street, Strand.

LAW.—Wanted, by the Advertiser, who has for several years past held a leading situation in an office of very extensive practice, an Engagement either as Conveyancing Clerk or to assist the Principals in the management of a business. References unexceptionable.
Apply, "X. Y." (No. 506), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—Wanted, a Situation by a Young Man, 19 years of age, who writes a good hand, is acquainted with Magisterial Business, and capable of conducting the accounts of a Union. The advertiser has been nearly six years in a country office of large practice, and would make himself generally useful. A moderate salary only required, and unexceptionable references given.
Apply post-paid, to "A. M." Mr. W. C. WELLS'S, Printer, &c. Swaffham, Norfolk.

LAW.—A Young Man is desirous of obtaining a Situation as General Assistant Clerk in a Solicitor's Office. Writes a good and expeditious hand; has a knowledge of parochial business; and can be well recommended from his late employer. Salary moderate.
Address, "R. S." 21, Dean-street, Fetter-lane.

LAW.—Wanted, an Engagement as Clerk, either in town or country, to assist in the Conveyancing and general business of an Office. The Advertiser has had considerable experience in the duties of the office of a Clerk of the Peace.
Address, "A. B." Mr. WARREN'S, Bookseller, Winchester, Hants.

LAW.—Situation wanted by a Young Man who has been in an office of large practice and is well acquainted in the Magisterial and Tax Business, and competent to manage the accounts of a Union. The advertiser would make himself generally useful. A moderate salary only required.
Address "J. F" Morpeth, Northumberland.

LAW.—Wanted, by a Gentleman of experience, admitted, accustomed to County Court practice, and the ordinary duties of a Solicitor's Office, a Situation as Managing Clerk in the country.
Address, "A. B. C." Post-office, Lambs Conduit-street, London

LAW.—A Young Man, twenty-three years of age, wishes for an Engagement as copying, engrossing, and general Clerk. For the last ten years he has been with an attorney in extensive practice, by whom this is inserted, with a desire to obtain a situation for him, and who can recommend him strongly for steadiness and integrity.
Apply by letter addressed "P. W." Post-office, Exeter.

Partnerships, Wanted and for Sale.

LAW CLERKSHIP or PARTNERSHIP.—The Advertiser is wishful to negotiate a Partnership in a respectable office in the country; or he would not object to accept a Managing Clerkship, with a view to a future partnership. He was admitted in 1843.
Address, stating terms, "C. H." (No. 506), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—A Gentleman, admitted upwards of three years, wishes to purchase a share in an established practice, or would enter into an engagement with a view to a partnership. An agricultural town preferred.
Address C. Q. (No. 506), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—To be disposed of, to a gentleman of gentlemanly and business-like habits, a Share in a moderate but highly-respectable general practice (principally consisting of conveyancing) in one of the midland counties.
For premium and particulars apply to "A. B." to the care of Messrs. STEVENSON and SLOAN, Law Stationers, Mitre-court, Temple.

CHEAP LAW BOOKS.—Many thousands of volumes of Reports, Books of Practice Text Books, &c. ancient and modern, may always be had at ANDREW ROBERTSON'S, Law Bookseller, 20, Chancery-lane, London at very moderate prices for ready money. Gentlemen sending a list of what they require will have the lowest prices reported.
See A. R.'s Advertisements in LAW TIMES, Feb. 7, March 6, May 15, June 5, June 26 July 31, and October 2

 Gentlemen are requested to send their orders direct, as A. R. will not be accountable for dirty, ragged, and imperfect copies that may be supplied by other booksellers.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s. calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.
Copyright Amendment Act.	Militia Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.	Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.	County Courts Improvement Act.
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.	Trustees Act Extension Act.
Stock-in-Trade Act.	Pharmacy Act.
Application of Highway Rates to Turnpike Roads Act.	Corrupt Practices at Elections.
Property-Tax Continuance Act.	Excise Summary Proceedings.
Act for Re-assembling Parliament.	Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues Act.
Wills Act Amendment Act.	Metropolitan Sewers Act.
Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages Act.	Nisi Prius Officers Act.
Apprehension of Deserters from Foreign Ships Act.	Militia Ballots Suspension Act.
Industrial and Provident Societies Act.	Common Law Procedure Act.
Protestant Dissenters Act.	Secretary of Bankrupts' Office Abolition Act.
Appointment of Overseers Act.	Commons Inclosure Acts Extension Act.
General Board of Health Act (No. 1 and No. 2).	Masters in Chancery Abolition.
Disabilities Repeal Act.	County Rates Act.
Passengers Act Amendment Act.	Patent Law Amendment Act.
	Metropolis Water Supply Act.
	Metropolitan Burials Act.
	Improvement of the Jurisdiction of Equity Act.
	Suitors in Chancery Relief Act.

London: JOHN CROCKFORD 20, Essex-street, Strand.

On Saturday next,

THE SECOND EDITION of the COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with Practical Notes illustrated by Precedents of Pleadings and Forms of Affidavits, Notices, &c. By ROBERT MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 12s. cloth; 13s. 6d. half-calf; 14s. 6d. calf.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

"The introductory and illustrative portions of the volume before us will be found exceedingly useful under the new and untried Act."—Globe.

The First Edition has now been for some time out of print. The SECOND EDITION will be published on Wednesday. It contains all the Cases decided on the Statute during Michaelmas Term, the new Tables of Fees, &c. and the Nisi Prius Officers' Act.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully destined in cash, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1790, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 3l. 13s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for winter trowsers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trowsers, from 21s. to 28s. per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best wash coats that are made for shooting, 13s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 57, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 Vict. cap. 65), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved style of coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 2½ and 3 guineas.—The improved Winter Guinea Trousers are also ready for selection, from a choice variety of patterns. In London only of B. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.
94, Regent-street.

WELLINGTON SURTOUT. F. B. SANGUINETTI begs the notice of his friends and the public in general to the above Surtout, patronised by the Royal Family and principal Nobility, which is now by its style, elegance, and comfort to the wearer, universally acknowledged to be unequalled by any other coat worn. To be had only at his establishment, 5a, Regent street, London. The Best Llama Cloth, 2l. 2s.; the patent Elastic Cloth, 3l. 13s. 6d. Home Agents supplied on the shortest notice. Foreign Agents by every mail on the 20th of the month.—5a, Regent-street (next door to the County Fire Office).

PATENT REVERSIBLE OVERCOATS, &c. which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal—W. BERRIDGE, 107, NEW BOND-STREET, and 66, CORNHILL (only).—NOVELTY, UTILITY, ECONOMY, all unite in commending this invention to general adoption. The Patent Cloth, having two perfect and totally dissimilar faces, can be worn either side outwards, thus each garment being equivalent to two at the cost of one. For Overcoats of every kind, the new Angleses, and all other CAPES, SHOOTING and MORNING COATS, this discovery is especially appropriate, also for LADIES' CLOAKS, MANTLES, &c. A variety of the materials and garments kept for selection; also one of the largest stocks in London of superior OVERCOATS of every description, CAPES, SHOOTING-JACKETS, BOYS' OVERCOATS, &c. all guaranteed to resist any amount of rain.

EUREKA.—In FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are united the best material and first-rate workmanship, together with that special excellence of fit which is their distinguishing characteristic. Their superiority to all others is still maintained; and gentlemen who desire the luxury of a perfect fitting shirt are invited to try them. The prices are, for the first quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.; coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices, and instructions for measurement, post-free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free, on receipt of six stamps.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."
THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 31, 1851.

The husk, &c. form about one-sixth of the whole nut, so that, by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of cocoa drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per pound. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drunk at the tables of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The white Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

CAUTION.
TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public, and serious injury to myself.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

90, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

Messrs. THOS. MILNER and SON.

GENTLEMEN,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,
"COUBRO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—in redundancy of phlegm—in incipient consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication they are of unerring efficacy. In asthma, and in winter cough, they have never been known to fail.

PERIODICAL SALE (established in 1843), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post-obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1853.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the ensuing year, as under:—

Thursday, January 6th.	Thursday, July 7th.
Thursday, February 3rd.	Thursday, August 4th.
Thursday, March 3rd.	Thursday, September 1st.
Thursday, April 7th.	Thursday, October 6th.
Thursday, May 5th.	Thursday, November 3rd.
Thursday, June 2nd.	Thursday, December 1st.

Mr. Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sales, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Notices of sales should be forwarded to Mr. Marsh a fortnight previous to the above dates. Mr. Marsh requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained. The NEXT SALE will take place on THURSDAY, JANUARY 6th.

2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

Valuable and important Freehold Property, in the City of London, and in the immediate vicinity of New Cannon street.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY next, DEC. 16, at Twelve, in Two Lots (unless previously disposed of by private contract), TWO substantially-erected and convenient Brick-built FREEHOLD HOUSES, comprising Nos. 22 and 23, Laurence Pountney-lane, within a few doors of New Cannon-street, and in the heart of the City of London. No. 23 is let on lease for a term of twenty-one years from Midsummer 1850, at the moderate rental of 85l. per annum; of No. 22 immediate possession will be given, but it is estimated to produce a rental of 70l. per annum. May be viewed; and particulars, with conditions of sale, obtained on the Premises; at the Mart; of Messrs. Parker and Sons, Solicitors, Lewisham; and at Mr. Marsh's Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

ESSEX, near COLCHESTER, and close to the Ardleigh Railway Station within two hours' ride of London.

MR. MARSH has received instructions from the Executors (and pursuant to the will of the late proprietor), to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY next, DECEMBER 16, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the valuable FREEHOLD MANOR of BOVILL'S HALL, in Ardleigh. The Manor comprises an Inn and about thirty-five houses, and some land, fine arbitrary; also about ten hundred and twenty acres of land, fine certain. The lord's average income from fines and quit-rents is about 44l. per annum. There are numerous copyhold tenements, and the stewardship of this manor is more than usually valuable. The situation of the property is most desirable, and the neighbourhood being so select ensures a continuance of improvement.—Particulars and conditions of sale may be obtained of Thos. Huxley, Esq. 3, Middle Temple-lane; of Messrs Crimon, Norwich; and at Mr. Marsh's Auction and Estate Agency Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

SUFFOLK.—Near to Bury St. Edmunds.—Valuable and important fine Arbitrary Manors.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions from the Executors, pursuant to the trusts of the will of the deceased proprietor, to submit to SALE by PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY next, DECEMBER 16, 1852, at TWELVE o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), the extensive and exceedingly valuable FREEHOLD MANORS or Lordships of Cockfield, otherwise Cockfield Hall, and Earl's Hall, in Cockfield, with the arbitrary fines, quit and other rents. The manors comprise numerous houses, and a large tract of very fertile copyhold land, all subject to arbitrary fines. The lord's average annual income from fines is 160l. and the quit and other rents amount to 24l. making a total income of nearly 200l. per annum. The stewardship of these manors is a valuable appointment.—Particulars, with conditions of sale, may be obtained of Thos. Huxley, Esq. 3, Middle Temple-lane; of Messrs. Cudmon, Norwich; and at Mr. Marsh's Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, London, or will be forwarded on application.

Chamber Property for Investment or Occupation.

MESSRS. HAMMOND and ELOART will SELL by AUCTION, at their GREAT ROOMS, 28, Chancery-lane, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16th, at Twelve for One, THREE SETS of excellent business or residence CHAMBERS, situate on the second and third floors of No. 5, Verulam-buildings, and on the first floor of No. 13, Gray's-inn-square, let respectively at 50l. 40l. and 42l. per annum, held of the Society in the usual way for ever by payment of a septennial fine.—May be viewed by permission, and particulars had of J. Burn, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Frederick-place, Old Jewry; at the Steward's Office; and of the Auctioneers, 28, Chancery-lane.

CITY OF LONDON.—Valuable Freehold Property.

MESSRS. ELLIS and SON are instructed by the Trustees of the Will of the late J. W. Bridger, esq. deceased, to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 22, at Twelve, in one lot (unless an acceptable offer be previously made by private contract), a valuable ESTATE, comprising two freehold houses, situate Nos 6 and 7, Aldgate, and extensive premises behind, occupying a large plot of ground, close to Fenchurch-street, and in the immediate neighbourhood of the Blackwall Railway Terminus, Custom-house, Docks, and wharfs; part let on lease, and part in hand, which may be readily let.—To be viewed by tickets only. Printed particulars may be had, fourteen days prior to the sale, of T. B. Prout, Esq. Solicitor, Lincoln's-inn-chambers, Fenchurch-street; Garraway's; and of Messrs. Ellis and Son, Auctioneers and Estate Agents, 38, Fenchurch-street.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES.—The important and beautiful Estate of Harpsden Court, in Oxfordshire, with its capital Mansion, Manors, and valuable Farms, comprising 1,400 acres, only one mile from the town, overlooking the Thames and its rich and splendid scenery, within six miles of Reading.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON are commissioned by the Devisees in Trust to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Bartholomew lane, City, on WEDNESDAY, the 15th day of DECEMBER (unless previously disposed of by private treaty), the above very choice and valuable FREEHOLD DOMAIN and RESIDENCE, delightfully situate in the most beautiful part of Oxfordshire, about one mile from Henley, upon the road to Sliplake and Reading, on the borders of Berks and Bucks, together with the manors of Harpsden and Bolney. The fine old family seat of Harpsden Court stands upon the rising ground close to the church, about midway between the river and the hills, surrounded by beautifully undulated and richly-timbered grounds, commanding a vast extent of picturesque shaded drives and walks, and magnificent views over the river and of its bold romantic wooded banks. The domain is divided into several capital farms, with superior homesteads, let to highly respectable tenants; the arcster p rt is superior sound turnip and barley land, with some excellent meadows. The estate is finely timbered, and interspersed with woodlands full of thriving beech and oak, and forming good preserves for game, and remarkably bold an i picturesque features of the estate; and being near hounds and a magnificent river, it combines the advantages of a favourite and choice neighbourhood for residence, with all kinds of sport, and a superior landed investment. The estate can only be viewed by an order, which may be had at their offices, in Waterloo-place Pall-Mall; or of Messrs. Thompson, Dessenham, and Brown, Solicitors, Salters'-hall, St. Swithin's-lane; and of Messrs. Gregam and Son, Solicitors, Abingdon.

The Whitley Park Estates, and other valuable Farms and Lands, with a Cottage Residence, and superior Farm Homesteads, within a mile of the great market and borough town of Reading, commanding very rich and extensive scenery, and comprising together upwards of 800 acres, and presenting a very important and most improvable property.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, BARTHOLOMEW-LANE, CITY, on WEDNESDAY, the 15th of DECEMBER, at Twelve (unless acceptable offers shall be previously made by private treaty), together or in lots, the above very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATES, commandingly situate upon the Farnham and Basingstoke turnpike roads, within a mile of the great town and railway stations of Reading,—a neighbourhood yearly increasing in importance. They embrace the Whitley Park Farm, Grey's, Curling's, and other Farms, with some detached meadow lands, valuable common rights, and fee farm rents, chiefly on some neighbouring estates. On the Whitley Park Farm are some fine, handsome pastures boldly undulated, overlooking a vast expanse of rich and beautiful scenery, extending into Hants and Oxfordshire, and commanding extensive frontage upon the Farnham road, offering a most inviting site for a mansion, and from their contiguity to Reading, and easy access with London, Brighton, &c. with capital roads on all sides, these and other portions of the estate must before long be in request for building purposes of various classes. To the capitalist it ensures a choice landed investment, a great part being let on lease to highly respectable tenants, and the greater part tithe free. The rental is about 1,361l. There is a gentleman's cottage residence or shooting-box, with beautifully timbered grounds, on the property. It is close to good hounds, and the Thames and Kennet are within a short walk.—Particulars may be obtained at their Office, in Waterloo-place, Pall-mall; or of Messrs. Smith and Allinson, Solicitors, Warnford-court, Throgmorton-street.

Absolute Reversion in a certain short period to important Freehold Property, of the annual value of 230l

WE and C. PUGH are honoured with instructions to SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, DECEMBER 14, at TWELVE, a valuable REVERSION to SIX FREEHOLD HOUSES, with SHOPS, situate William's-place, in the high Walworth-road, near the turnpike, now let, at a ground rent of 10l. per annum, to which the purchaser will become immediately entitled, and at the brief period of Midsummer, 1870, to the rack-rent of 230l. which, from the improvements in this locality, will be largely increased. The property will be sold without the slightest reservation, under authority of a local Act of Parliament. The title is, therefore, of the most unimpeachable character.—Descriptive particulars may be obtained (ten days prior to the sale) of Messrs. Lovell, Bannatyne, and Gawens, Solicitors, Cloak-lane, City; at the Mart; at the Red Lion Tavern, Walworth; the Elephant and Castle; and of Messrs W. and C. Pugh, Auctioneers and Surveyors, 6, Blackman-street, Southwark.

Highly valuable Absolute Reversion to important Freehold Property in seventeen years certain.

WE and C. PUGH are honoured with instructions from the Board of Governors and Guardians of St Mary, Newington, Surrey, to SELL by public AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, DEC. 14, at Twelve, under authority of a Local Act of Parliament, this truly valuable ESTATE, comprising that well-known tavern and spirit establishment, the Red Lion, adjoining Walworth Turnpike, commandingly situate in the high-road and at the junction thereto of two other streets; also Three private Residences in the rear, the whole of the estimated annual value of 75l. a year. This well-known house has been erected within the last few years at an enormous outlay, on a short lease, at its present rental of 120l. and a premium of several thousand pounds was paid, and presents great attractions for investment or family endowment.—Descriptive particulars may be obtained, ten days prior to the sale, of Messrs. Chester and Son, Solicitors, Church row, Newington-butts; at the Vestry Clerk's Office, Walworth-road; at the Red Lion; at the Elephant and Castle; and of Messrs. W. and C. Pugh, 6, Blackman street, Southwark.

Valuable Freehold Estates for Investment, at Hatfield Woodhouse and Bawtry, in the West Riding of the County of York, and at Misson, in the Counties of Lincoln and Nottingham.

TO BE SOLD by PRIVATE CONTRACT, a very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, situate at Hatfield Woodhouse, in the county of York, consisting of a capital messuage or dwelling-house, with the stables, carriage-house, outbuildings, yard, and garden, thereto adjoining, two farm-houses and farm-steads, and about 300 acres of excellent arable and grass land. The above estate is within eight miles of Doncaster, the plant of the Great Northern Railway, and four miles of Thorne, the principal station of the intended Axholme line. The messuage, one of the farm-houses, farm stead, buildings, cottages, and farm of lands, containing about 277 acres of land (293 acres of which are in a ring fence), are in the occupation of Mr. Abraham Edland, a most respectable and enterprising tenant, at the reduced annual rent of 283l.; and the other farm-house and farm-stead, and about fifteen acres of land, are in hand. Also a farm-house, farm-stead, buildings, two cottages, steam-engine and shed complete, with about 130 acres of arable and grass land (about ten acres of which are thriving larch, ash, and oak plantations), situate at Misson, in the counties of Lincoln and Nottingham; or one of them, late in the occupation of Mrs. Gillatt. Also a capital messuage or dwelling-house, with the stables, carriage house, laundry, greenhouse, bath room, yard, garden, replete with every convenience, situate at Bawtry, in the county of York. Also four newly-built cottages or tenements, with the outbuildings thereto adjoining, situate in the Low-street, of Bawtry aforesaid.—The estates may be viewed, and further particulars had on application to Mr. Simpson, Loversall, near Doncaster; Mr. Dickinson, Partridge-hill, near Bawtry; Mr. John Collinson, Solicitor, Doncaster; and Mr. F. Raines, Solicitor, Bawtry.

Policies in this Office are INDISPUTABLE except in cases of FRAUD.

"Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which remain in force although the Life assured may go to any part of the World.

Parties assuring within Six Months of their last Birthday are allowed a proportionate diminution in the Premium.

The premiums may be paid up in one sum, or in a limited number of payments, on advantageous terms.

Eighty per cent. of the profits are divided at the end of every Five Years among the Assured. At the first division, to the end of 1849, the addition to the amount assured averaged above Fifty per cent. on the Premiums paid.

The financial year closes on the 31st December; and parties effecting assurances before that date will have the advantage of an extra year's bonus.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

ADVANTAGES OFFERED.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The assured may reside in most parts of the world, without extra charge, and in all parts by payment of a small extra premium.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without intrenching on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital—thus combining in the same office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to £850,000 and the Income exceeds £136,000 per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared; at the last in January 1853, the sum of 131,195l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 24½ to 53 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in the proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division, so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June, 1856, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next, will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied at the option of the assured in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced rates, and the Premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other Safe Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable except in case of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life, from 50l. to 10,000l.

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly; but the payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing a line to

GEORGE H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

Established 1838
Principal Office, 11, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, London.

Indisputable policies.

Assurances, annuities, and endowments granted, and every other mode of provision for families arranged.

Half the annual premiums for the first five years may remain on credit for any period until death, on payment of interest at five per cent. per annum.

Parties allowed to go to or reside in most parts of the world without extra premium.

Naval and military lives, not in active service, assured at the ordinary rate.

Policies forfeited by non-payment of premium revivable at any time within six months, on satisfactory proof of health and the payment of a trifling fine.

Policies on the life of another secured, notwithstanding the part of the world in which the assured may go.

This Society is instituted for the Purchase of Reversions, Life Interests, and every other kind of property, whether vested or contingent, depending upon the duration of human life, and for the Grant of Life Annuities, Endowments, and Reversionary Payments.

The shares having been taken to a much larger amount than is necessary to enable the Society to be completely registered, the deed has been prepared, and notice will be given when it is ready for signature.

The Society will commence business on the 11th January, 1853. Applications for the remaining shares to be addressed to the Directors, at the Offices of the Society, 5, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

Dated the 2nd December, 1852.

NORWICH UNION LIFE INSURANCE SOCIETY; established 1808.

A bonus having been declared at a General Meeting of the Members of this Society upon the 30th of June last, copies of the Directors' and Actuary's Reports may be obtained at the Society's Offices, 6, Crescent, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, London; and Surrey-street, Norwich.

This Society has now been established upwards of forty-four years, upon the principles of mutual assurance, during which period it has paid to claimants on terminated policies upwards of 3,000,000l. sterling, in addition to which nearly one million and a quarter sterling has been assigned by way of bonuses; while the accumulated capital, for meeting existing engagements (and which is almost wholly invested on real and Government securities), exceeds 2,100,000l.

There is no proprietary to divide with the assured the profits of this institution, which is one of the very few purely mutual insurance offices. In addition, however, to the entire profits of the Society, persons now effecting insurances will be entitled to participate in the benefits to be derived from the upward bonus, now amounting to 218.19% the 3rd and which, affording all the protection of a proprietary capital, will at the same time increase instead of diminishing their future bonuses.

The rates of premium are below those of most insurance offices, and under the age of forty-five not less so than ten per cent.—a benefit in itself equivalent to an annual bonus.

One half of the first five annual premiums may remain as a permanent charge upon policies granted for the whole duration of life.

The attention of CLERGYMEN, BENEVOLENT PERSONS, and EMPLOYERS of every description, is invited to the Prospectus and Tables of the

OAK MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE and LOAN COMPANY,

No. 49, Moorgate-street, London. Completely registered pursuant to Act of Parliament, 7 & 8 Vict. cap. 110.

Any number of copies for distribution may be obtained by personal application at the Head Office, or by addressing a letter to 24, Park-street; 157, New Bond-street.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE LADIES' CARRIAGE STEP, which was so universally admired at the Great Exhibition for its novelty, simplicity of action, and utility, having all the advantages of the inside Step, being free from dirt. This Step can be applied to any carriage already built.

DAVID DAVIES and SON have also finished for inspection, a Double Brougham, with their Patent Wheel Plate, by which means the carriage is much shorter; also the front wheels are higher, which makes the draught easier.

To be seen at their Manufactory for Improvements on Carriages, 18, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—

When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age. Mounted in Gold with Crystals, 16s.; Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 2s. Sent post-free, and exchanged, if not approved of. THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

SPECTACLES and EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of SMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the sight. Barristers and public speakers will find great convenience in the use of Panteoscopic Spectacles, as they enable the wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

Telescopes of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

Opera Glasses, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LOSS, Opticians, Mathematical, Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

THE WET and WARM WEATHER.—

BERRIDGE'S VENTILATING, WATERPROOF, LIGHT OVERCOATS are the best, and certainly unobjectionable protection, as they effectually repel any amount of rain, without confining perspiration—the fatal objection to all other waterproofs, as too many have found to their cost, all air-tight materials being utterly unfit, and dangerous for clothing. These garments are thoroughly respectable, and adapted for general use at all times, equally as for rainy weather. Price, 42s. One of the largest shops in London for superior Overcoats, Capes, &c. of every description, all thoroughly waterproof; also, of the Patent Reversible Overcoats, &c.

W. BERRIDGE, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill (only).

BROUGHAM CARRIAGES, NEW and SECOND-HAND.—

Upwards of Twenty of the above fashionable vehicles, at unusually low prices, at P. CATTELL'S, 125, LONG-ACRE. Carriages of any description taken in exchange, and parties waited upon with drawings, &c. in any part of the kingdom, at the nominal charge of second-class fare should no business be transacted.

Just published, New Edition, price 1s.; or, by post, for 1s. 6d.

THE SCIENCE of LIFE; or, How to Live, and What to Live For; with ample Rules for Diet, Regimen, and Self-Management; together with Instructions for securing perfect health, longevity, and that sterling state of happiness only attainable through the judicious observance of a well-regulated course of life. By a Physician.

Also, by the same Author, price 2s. 6d.; by post, 2s. 8d.

A MEDICAL TREATISE on NERVOUS DEBILITY and CONSTITUTIONAL WEAKNESS, with Practical Observations, illustrated with Anatomical Plates, on Health and Disease. This work, emanating from a qualified member of the medical profession, the result of many years' practical experience, is addressed to the numerous classes of persons who suffer from the various disorders acquired in early life. In its pages will be found the causes which lead to their occurrence, the symptoms which indicate their presence, and the means to be adopted for their removal.

PILLS.

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA PILLS, for purifying the blood, poverty, and all low states of system, with disease, internal complaints, gout, rheumatic gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite, spasmodic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourists, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold: 1st. Economy; no solution of sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared can retain its medicinal fermentation, which will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless, hadly. "Two pills contain as much pure sarsaparilla as a tablespoonful of the strongest essence, and more to be depended upon." Truly. They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2s. 9d. box is equal to a 12s. bottle of sarsaparilla; sold by most respectable medicine venders in the kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor, HENRY HIDES, 10, Hungerford-street, Strand; in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s. A genuine cheque saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence, a 4s. 6d. contains three 1s. 1½d. boxes, a 4s. 6d. contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time, and really cured by a newly discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The proprietor of Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of gout and rheumatic gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon uniting a very old and well-tried gout pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills" for the cure of gout and rheumatism, and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as tic-doloureux, lumbago, sciatica, loins and joints, pains in the head, and the benefit which such a combination of these two prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of their injuring the system. They are free from opening and mercury, and greatest ability of Pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B. Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system, not by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretions of the kidneys. Sold in boxes, at the same price as Dr. King's "True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable venders in the United Kingdom, and by the sole proprietor, HENRY HIDES, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills is genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate which is fine.

Boxes sent by post by enclosing postage-stamps for the amount of box required.

BRIDGE-WHARF, CITY-ROAD.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and charges saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S, office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts two-fold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, 21 for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artificial flowers from 4d.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 2l. 2s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, near Bunhill-fields Burial-ground; and at No. 12, North-street, Quadrant, Brighton. Originated in 1842.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE, in Bottle, may be had, in the highest perfection, at NATHANIEL BASTTY'S STORES, 126, UPPER THAMES-STREET.—Quarts, 7s. per dozen; pints, 4s. per dozen. Also in casks of 18 gallons and upwards. The quality of these Ales may be fully relied on, as no other Pale or Burton Ales than Allsopp's are supplied from these stores.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The white Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite retaining power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters, and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 21, 1851.

The husk, &c. form about one-sixth of the whole nut, so that, by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of cocoa-drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per pound. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drunk at the tables of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

HANDFORD AND DAVIES, 62, HIGH HOLBORN.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in each, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1798, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Vicunas, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 3l. 10s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for winter trowsers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trowsers, from 22s. to 28s. per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 12s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 37, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

WELLINGTON SURTOUT. F. B. SANGUINETTI begs the notice of his friends and the public in general to the above Surtout, patronised by the Royal Family and principal Nobility, which is now by its style, elegance, and comfort to the wearer, universally acknowledged to be unequalled by any other coat worn. To be had only at his establishment, 25, Regent-street, London. The Best Llama Cloth, 3l. 3s.; the patent Elastic Cloth, 2l. 12s. 6d. Home Agents supplied on the shortest notice. Foreign Agents by every mail on the 20th of the month.—25, Regent-street (next door to the County Fire Office).

CAUTION.

TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled persons or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public, and serious injury to myself.

E. B. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

THE ONLY STOVE WITHOUT A FLUE, for which her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent have been granted; Plain, from 15s. to 28s.; Ornamented, from 35s. 6d. to Six Guineas.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 47 a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

24, Minories, London, July 28, 1852.

Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

GENTLEMEN,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 18th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, rosin, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"DOUBBO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47 a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

PERIODICAL SALE (established in 1849), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions to Funded and other Property, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in lieu of Tithes, Tithe Commutations, Debentures, Imperial Bonds, Shares in Railways, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1864.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1849), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the ensuing year, as under —

Thursday, January 6th.	Thursday, July 7th.
Thursday, February 3rd.	Thursday, August 4th.
Thursday, March 3rd.	Thursday, September 1st.
Thursday, April 7th	Thursday, October 6th.
Thursday, May 5th.	Thursday, November 3rd.
Thursday, June 2nd.	Thursday, December 1st.

Mr Marsh has been induced to hold these sales from the increasing demand for the transfer of property of this description, the value of which, as a means of investment, is daily becoming better appreciated, and from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which it has been exposed in the ordinary course of sale, and the experience of the last ten years has proved the above plan to be equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers, the classification of numerous lots, rendering the means of publicity more effectual and less expensive to the vendor, and simplifying the transfer to the purchaser. Notices of sales intended to be obtained by the above means, should be forwarded to Mr Marsh at least a fortnight previous to the above dates, in order that they may have the full benefit of publicity Mr Marsh respectfully requests persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his periodical sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this class of property may be obtained. The particulars and conditions of sale for the ensuing year may be obtained seven days prior to each day of sale, at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, White Lion Hotel, Bristol, Neu and Christmas Hotel, Birmingham; Palatine Hotel, Manchester, White Hart Hotel, Leeds and the New Inn Hotel, Exeter. Also at the Mart and at Mr MARSH'S Offices, 6, Charlotte row, Mansion house, or will be forwarded to any part on application

N B This work is designed to describe minutely the Practice of Advocacy, and for Attorneys as well as for the Bar

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity, but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe

"A remarkable production is here commenced which if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by these protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject matter in hand with any degree of judgment.' The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's is of great importance in the present state of the Profession. In its pleasingly written pages the young student will find season able advice, the result of long experience and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister"—The Britannia

"The treatise is just what it professes to be and what it should be It's full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the Bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense and none of it is second hand Mr Cox writes from experience." The Atlas

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains, there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated"—The John Bull

"A finely written treatise"—Weekly Dispatch.

The following are extracts from a few of the many voluntary testimonials received from the profession:—

"I find your system very satisfactory."

"Satisfactory and advantageous."

"We have found it to work satisfactorily."

"The most satisfactory ever brought under our notice."

"It ought to be widely adopted, it works most admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and has the advantage of being very simple. The more I use it the more am I pleased with it."

"A great advantage."

"Decidedly a great improvement."

"I much approve of your system."

"I certify my entire approbation of your system."

"I take great interest in the successful working of your system."

"I am convinced of the superiority of your system over all others that have come under my notice. It only requires to be known to be appreciated."

"Its best feature next to its soundness is its simplicity."

"We much approve of it, and will recommend it to our friends."

"I am most thoroughly satisfied of its accuracy and value."

"We quite appreciate the system."

"We have derived advantage from its adoption."

"The system is simple and easy."

"We can with confidence recommend it."

"We are much pleased with the system."

"Many of the profession here (Liverpool) have adopted the system."

"After a year and a half's trial, we incessantly appreciate the simplicity and accuracy of the system."

"We have kept our books by this system for five years, and have found it a great saving of time and trouble, that at the same time correct and satisfactory."

NECROLOGY

OF LEGISLATORS, MAGISTRATES, AND LAWYERS.

MR. BALLANTINE.

ON Tuesday, Mr. Ballantine, who was for twenty-seven years one of the magistrates of the Thames police-court, died at his residence, in Cadogan-place, Chelsea, after several months' severe illness. The deceased gentleman, who was in his 74th year, was called to the bar in 1813. He was a very intelligent and popular magistrate, and for many years had the chief control and management of the first police, a force which he left in a state of great efficiency, when it was placed under the Metropolitan Commissioners, in Scotland-yard, on the passing of the last Police Act. His urbanity, intelligence, and quick discernment, and his extensive legal knowledge, with which he combined the most perfect self-possession and general knowledge of the world, obtained him the respect and esteem of all classes of the people; and when he retired from the active duties of a police magistrate, four years ago, the loss of so able a magistrate was so keenly felt by the public. His memory will be long held in respectful remembrance by the inhabitants of the Tower Hamlets, and the people connected with the river and the trade and navigation of the port of London. The late Mr. Ballantine took a very active part in the financial and judicial affairs of Middlesex, as a county magistrate, since his retirement from the Thames Police-court, until he was attacked with the illness which proved fatal to him. The deceased gentleman has left a large family to mourn his loss, the eldest of whom is Mr. William Ballantine, the eminent barrister of the Home Circuit and the Central Criminal Court.

MR. PETER BORTHWICK.

WE regret to record the death of this gentleman, who expired on Saturday week, after a long and painful illness. Mr. Borthwick represented Evesham in two Parliaments, and was a fluent speaker and a ready political writer. Mr. Borthwick, for the last three years, filled the office of editor of the Morning Post.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

MARRIAGES.

COPEMAN, the Rev. Arthur Charles, M.B. curate of St. James's, Bury St. Edmunds, to Mary Stephens, eldest daughter of the town clerk, James Tibbits, esq. Myton-crescent, Warwick, on the 16th inst. at St. Nicholas's, Warwick.

ERSKINE, the Right Hon. Lord, to Anna, widow of Thomas Calderwood Durham, esq. of Largo and of Polton, on the 21st inst. at St. George's, Hanover-square.

NEWMAN, Mr. Richard, solicitor, Hadleigh, Suffolk, to Emily Powell, youngest daughter of Mr. Grewcock, surgeon, of the same place, on the 21st inst. at St. Mark's, Kennington.

DEATHS

RAWSON, John, esq. of Ash-grove, a deputy-lieutenant and magistrate for the West Riding, on the 19th inst. at Savile-place, Halifax, aged 69.

ROCHE, Maria, the wife of Mr. Roche, solicitor, Upper Wellington-street, Covent-garden, on the 21st inst. aged 74.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The New System of Common Law Procedure, according to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. By J. R. QUAIN, Barrister-at-Law, and H. HOLROYD, Special Pleader. Butterworths.

THIS is the ninth book, founded on the Common Law Procedure Act, which has been offered to the Profession. It is a reprint of the statute, with the forms in Schedule A. inserted after the appropriate sections, to many of which are appended, as might be expected from the authors, so well known to the legal public, several really useful notes. Reference is also made, where it appeared desirable, to the former procedure, and the latest cases have been referred to in illustration. It would have been much improved, however, if the cases decided on the new practice during last Michaelmas Term had been inserted.

BUSINESS OF THE COURTS IN THE CITY.—Lord Lampbell, at the sitting of the Court, said that he had taken into consideration a suggestion made to him a few days ago by the Attorney-general as to the Nisi Prius business beginning at ten o'clock instead of half-past nine. He had communicated with the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas on the subject, and they had determined that in future the Nisi Prius sittings after Term in their respective courts should begin at the same hour as that of the Court of Exchequer namely, ten o'clock. Mr. Chambers remarked that the circumstance of many of the journeymen and most of the witnesses residing out of town, would render this change a matter of general convenience.

IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.
"St. Paul's Cathedral, 30th Nov. 1849.
"SIR,—I have much pleasure in recommending your Lozenges to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have afforded me relief on several occasions when scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.
"I am, Sir, yours faithfully.
"To Mr. Keating." "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-Choral."

WAREHOUSING FURNITURE and valuable PROPERTY.—Parties leaving Town and Changing their Residences.—Furniture, Plate, Books, and other valuable Property carefully REMOVED and WAREHOUSED at the North London Depository, Gray's-inn-road, King's-cross. Established 1828. Separate look-up store-rooms. The building is secure from fire and damp, heated by steam-pipes. An inspection is requested. Advances if required.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair: improved clothes-brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet-Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges.
At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.
CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder, 2s. per box.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.
52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TO BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, and OTHERS.—FURNISH your OFFICES, Counting-houses and Chambers at PRIEST'S noted Furniture Mart, Nos. 1 and 2, Water-street, corner of Tudor-street, Blackfriars, where may be seen the largest STOCK of New and Second-hand LIBRARY and BOARD ROOM FURNITURE, Office and Counting-house Fittings, Fire-proof Safes, Desk-Boxes, Iron Doors, &c. in great variety, embracing every article from the Master in Chancery's splendid Table, to the Desk and Stool of the Copying Clerk. Also an immense stock of well-seasoned Household Furniture.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."
THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every Dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four Samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be as rich comparatively worthless, should be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 31, 1851.
The husk, &c. form about one-sixth of the whole nut, so that, by excluding them, as we do, we consequently enhance the cost of the article. We request the Sanitary Commissioners to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per pound. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drunk at the tables of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.
HANDFORD AND DAVIES, 61, HIGH HOLBORN.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNES'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depôt, 67 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.
67, Moorgate-street, London, July 28, 1852.

Messrs. Thos. Milnes and Son,
GENTLEMEN,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 12th inst. in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.
We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in readily recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.
"We are, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,
"COUSENS and POTTER."

MILNES'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was 11 days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 67 A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT.—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz. the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in cash, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 30s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, established 1798, beg leave to acquaint their various friends and gentry, that their new mixtures in FUR BEAVERS, milled Venetians, and Melton cloths for overcoats, are now ready, from 2l. 2s. to 2l. 10s.; their new patterns in West of England doeskins for winter trowsers are now most complete, among which will be found some French elastic buckskins for riding trowsers, from 22s. to 28s. per pair; and the new Australian lambskin waistcoats, the best waistcoats that are made for shooting, 12s. Patterns forwarded into the country on application.
HOBSON, BROTHERS, 4, FINSBURY-PLACE SOUTH, and 57, LOMBARD-STREET, three doors from Messrs. Barclay's, the bankers.

WELLINGTON SURTOUT.—F. D. WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.
When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.
When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.
When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example—
When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.
When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.
When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.
When black specks seem floating in the sight.
When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Presbyopic" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age: Gold and Steel with Crystals, 15s.; Silver ditto, 7s.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3s. Thomas Newman Hunt esq Chairman

John Horsley Palmer esq Deputy Chairman

A NEW SCALE OF PREMIUMS on Insurances for the whole term of life has recently been adopted, by which a material reduction has been made at all ages below 50 years

FOUR FIFTHS or 80 per cent of the Profits are assured to Policies every fifth year, and may be applied to increase the sum insured to an immediate payment in Cash, or to the reduction and ultimate extinction of future premiums

ONE THIRD of the Premium on Insurances of 500l and upwards for the whole term of life, may remain as a debt upon the policy, to be paid off at convenience, by which means 1,500l may be insured for the present outlay otherwise required for 1 000l

LOANS The Directors will lend sums of 100l and upwards on the security of Policies effected with this Company for the whole term of life, when they are entitled and quite value

SECURITY —Those who effect Insurances with this Company are protected by a large Subscribed Capital from the risk incurred by Members of Mutual Societies

INSURANCES without participation in Profits may be effected at reduced rates. SAMUEL INGALL, Actuary

Price 12s cloth, 13s 6d. half-calf; 14s. 6d calf

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act, and an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 2nd, an outline of the system of pleading. The portion of the second edition of the Act is very ably written, and will be found much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily recommend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and points it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

"The introductory and illustrative portions of this volume we will be found exceedingly useful under the new and untried Act."—Globe.

The First Edition has now been for some time out of print, the Second Edition will be published on the 1st of December, and the Cases decided on the New Procedure Act, and the New Table of Fees, for and the New Practice Rules and

BOOK-KEEPING for SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.
"Its general acceptance proves that experience confirms its utility."—Law Times.
The following are extracts from a few of the many voluntary testimonials received from the profession:—
"I find your system very satisfactory."
"Satisfactory and advantageous."
"We have found it to work satisfactorily."
"The system is simple and easy."
"It ought to be widely adopted; it works most admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and has the advantage of being very simple. The more I use it the more am I pleased with it."
"A great advantage."
"Decidedly a great improvement."
"I much approve of your system."
"I testify my entire approbation of your system."
"I take great interest in the successful working of your system."
"I am convinced of the superiority of your system over all others that have come under my notice: it only requires to be known to be appreciated."
"Its best feature next to its soundness is its simplicity."
"We much approve of it, and will recommend it to our friends."
"I am most thoroughly satisfied of its accuracy and value."
"We quite appreciate the system."
"We have derived advantage from its adoption."
"The system is simple and easy."
"We can with confidence recommend it."
"We are much pleased with the system"
"Many of the profession here (Liverpool) have adopted the system."
"After a year and a half's trial, we increasingly appreciate the simplicity and accuracy of the system."
"We have kept our books by this system for two years, and have found it a great saving of time and trouble, and at the same time correct and satisfactory."
An exemplification can be had of the Author, price 3*s.*, post-paid, of whom also are to be had the necessary Account-Books.

PILLS

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA PILLS, for purifying the blood, scurvy, and all low states of system, skin diseases, nervous complaints, Gout, Rheumatic Gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite, stomachic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourists, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold: 1stly. Because no solution of Sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared, can resist an inherent ferment-tation, which it will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless; 2ndly. "Two Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon;" 3rdly. They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2s. 9d. box is equal to a 16s. bottle of Sarsaparilla. Sold by most respectable medicine venders in the Kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor HENRY HIDER, 10, Hungerford street, Strand, in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s. A considerable saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence, a 2s. 9d. contains three 1s. 1½d. boxes, a 4s. 6d. contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time, and really cured by a newly discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The Proprietor of Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic case sof Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon mixing a very old and well tried Gout Pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills" for the cure of Gout and Rheumatism, and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as Tic-doloureux, face ache, lumbago, and pains in the loins and joints, and the benefit from such a combination of these two Prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of their injuring the system. They are free from opium and mercury, and consist chiefly of Pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B.—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of Gout to be driven off from the system not by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretion of the kidneys. Sold in boxes at the same price as Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable venders in the United Kingdom, and by the sole proprietor, HENRY HIDER, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate which is libel.

Boxes sent by post by enclosing Postage Stamps for the amount of box required.

SCARLETT'S MOCK TURTLE SOUP.—SCARLETT and SON respectfully inform the public in general that the Mock Turtle made by them, of acknowledged delicious quality and flavour, is by many pronounced equal to the real.

No. 26, KING WILLIAM STREET, near the Statue, London-bridge.

N.B. The Soup is sufficiently portable to be sent to any part of the country: 3s. 6d. per quart.

BEDDING.—ECONOMY, DURABILITY and COMFORT.—The GERMAN SPRING and FRENCH MATTRESSES make the most elastic and softest bed. A price list of every description of bedding sent free. Bedsteads—Arabian, iron-pearl French, and other styles, in birch, mahogany, &c.; patent iron and brass bedsteads—the most improved principles. Pillis, seats, &c.; bed-room furniture of every description. Elder-down quilts and duvets, in silk and cotton cases.

J. and S. STRET, Bedding, Bedstead, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 13, Oxford-street, London.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MENTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while in lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by E. BROWN, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the De Guiche Parisian Polish for Dress Boots and Shoes, and Waterproof Varnish for Hunting Boots.

MANUFACTORY, 28, BROAD-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE.

Patronised by the Court and Nobility, and to be had at all the principal shops throughout the kingdom.

HEAL and SON'S EIDER DOWN QUILTS are made in three varieties—the BORDERED QUILT, the PLAIN QUILT, and the DUVET. The Bordered Quilt is in the usual form of bed quilts, and is a most elegant and luxurious article. The Plain Quilt is smaller, and is useful as an extra covering on the bed, or as a wrapper in the carriage or on the couch. The Duvet is a loose case filled with Eider Down, as in general use on the continent.—Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free by post on application at

HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road,

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of AMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the Glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the sight. Clergymen, Barristers, and public Speakers, will find great convenience in the use of PANTOSCOPIC SPECTACLES, as they enable the wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

TELESCOPES of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

OPERA GLASSES, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retards its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Fitted Steel with Crystals, 15s.; Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3s. Sent post free, and exchanged, if not approved of. Thomas Harris and Son, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1l. 10s. sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly-invented preserving Spectacles, invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S. and H. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

Just published, New Edition, price 1s.; or, by post, for 1s. 6d.

THE SCIENCE of LIFE or, How to Live, and What to Live For; with ample Rules for Diet, Regimen, and Self-Management; together with Instructions for securing perfect Health, Longevity, and that sterling state of Happiness only attainable through the judicious observance of a well-regulated course of life. By a Physician.

Also, by the same Author, price 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s. 6d.

A MEDICAL TREATISE on NERVOUS DEBILITY and CONSTITUTIONAL WEAKNESS, with Practical Observations, illustrated with Anatomical Plates, in Health and Disease. This work, emanating from a qualified member of the medical profession, the result of many years' practical experience, is addressed to the numerous classes of persons who suffer from the various disorders acquired in early life. In its pages will be found the causes which lead to their occurrence, the symptoms which indicate their presence, and the means to be adopted for their removal.

PATENT REVERSIBLE OVERCOATS, &c. which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal.—W. BEDDOE, 98, NEW BOND-STREET and 69, CORNHILL (only). Novelty, Utility, Economy, all unite in commending this invention to general adoption. The Patent Fur Beaver, having two perfect and totally dissimilar faces, can be worn either side outwards; thus each garment being equivalent to two, at the cost of one. For Over-Coats of every kind, the new Angleseas and all other Capes, Shooting and Morning Coats, this discovery is especially appropriate; also for Ladies' Cloaks, Mantles, &c. A variety of the materials and garments kept for selection; also one of the largest stocks in London of superior Over-Coats of every description, Capes, Shooting Jackets, Boys' Over-Coats, &c., all guaranteed to resist any amount of rain.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT—Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz., the double purpose of turning two to one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. To over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in cuffs and pocket in both their opposition. In these varying proportions the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied, sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s. London, EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE LADIES' CARRIAGE STEP, which was so universally admired at the Great Exhibition for its novelty, simplicity of action, and utility, having all the advantages of the inside Step, being free from dirt. This Step can be applied to any carriage already built.

DAVID DAVIES and SON have also finished for inspection, a Double Brougham, with their Patent Wheel Plate, by which means the carriage is much shorter; also the front wheels are higher, which makes the draught easier.

To be seen at the Manufactory for Improvements on Carriages, 15, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 30, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogised for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.

At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are not sold by any hosiers or drapers, and can therefore be obtained only at 38, Poultry. Gentlemen in the country or abroad, ordering through their agents, are requested to observe on the interior of the collar-band the stamp, "FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 38, POULTRY," without which none are genuine. They are made in two qualities: first quality, 40s. the half-dozen; second quality, 30s. the half-dozen. Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made are solicited to inspect these, the most unique and only perfectly-fitting shirts. Coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices and instructions for measurement post free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free on receipt of six stamps.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Advantages offered.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured may reside in most parts of the world, without extra charge, and in all parts by payment of a small extra Premium.

Mutual system without the risk of Partnership.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without intrenching on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital—thus combining in the same office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 126,000*l.* per Annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the Whole of Life, one half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—FIVE BONUSES have been declared; at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 24½ to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division, so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the Books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June, 1856, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next, will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later Assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in Cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced Rates, and the Premiums for term Policies are lower than at most other Safe Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are Indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be Assured at Rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, but if a payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within four months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to Assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing a line to

GEORGE H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

N B This work is designed to describe minutely the Practice of Advocacy and for Attorneys as well as for the Bar

OPINION OF THE PRESS

The work evinces considerable ability but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe

A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those personal studies and laborious researches and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgement —The Sun.

The work as our author is of great importance in the present state of the profession In its pleasingly written pages the young student will find reasonable advice the result of long experience and valuable information rendered doubly attractive by apt illustration It is indeed quite useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister"—The Britannia

The practice is just what it professes to be and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the bar his profession The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand Mr Cox writes from experience The Atlas

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains, there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader especially since the national dramas of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated —The John Bull.

A fair-written treatise" Weekly Dispatch

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE COMMISSIONERS IN LUNACY.—There has just been printed, by order of the House of Lords, a paper containing the report made to the Lord Chancellor by the Commissioners in Lunacy, of visits to insane persons during the six months ending the 4th of August last. Dr. Turner made 138 visits, saw 6,287 patients, and travelled 3,873 miles. Dr. Hume made 152 visits, saw 5,511 patients, and travelled 5,694 miles. Mr. Gaskell made 137 visits, saw 7,708 patients, and travelled 4,676 miles. Mr. Procter made 100 visits, saw 5,515 patients, and travelled 3,869 miles Mr. Mytton made 148 visits, saw 7,988 patients, and travelled 3,619 miles; and Mr. Campbell made 121 visits, saw 7,670 patients, and travelled 4,329 miles.

THE CONSERVATIVE LAND SOCIETY.—In addition to the Ealing rectory estate, this society has just purchased another estate in Middlesex, close to the Hounslow station, on the South-Western Windsor line. At the meeting of the executive committee, on Tuesday, Viscount Raneleigh and Colonel Brownlow Knox, M P. were re-elected chairman and vice-chairman of the society for the present year

CONTESTED ELECTION PETITIONS.—On Saturday a corrected alphabetical list was printed by order of the House of Commons, of election petitions for the present session The number of members petitioned against is 182, of which number eight cases are invalid or withdrawn, leaving 124 It seems that seven of the members have been appointed to offices under the new administration.

The Lord Chancellor will receive the judges, Queen's counsel, &c, on Tuesday next, the first day of Hilary Term, at twelve o'clock, at his Lordship's residence in Upper Brook-street

BENEFICES.—A parliamentary paper which has just been issued contains several abstracts from the latest returns made by the archbishops and bishops in pursuance of 1 & 2 Vict c. 106, s 53 From these it appears that the total number of benefices in England and Wales was 11,728 in 1850, and upon 8,211 of these there was a glebe house. It also appears that 6,182 clergymen were resident in the respective parsonage houses, 664 in the houses appointed by the bishop in his licence, and 1,218 within the limits of the benefice, there being no parsonage house, making the total number resident 8,077. The total number exempted from residence was 1,861; but of these 529 performed the duties of their parishes The principal grounds of exemption are residence at other benefices, official chaplaincies, and offices and masterships in the universities and public schools The number exempted by license, on the ground of infirmity and other causes, was 674, of whom 176 were doing duty in their parishes. Number non-resident without licence or exemption 917, of whom 522 were doing the duties in their parishes. The number of sequestrations was 51, and from 357 benefices no return was received.

LONDON AND COUNTY REAL AND LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.—On Wednesday the first annual general meeting of the policy and share holders was held. The report of the directors stated, that four calls of 5s. each had been made, and that the consideration of 250l., to be paid to the originators of the company, was postponed to the second annual meeting In the life department 494 policies, insuring the sum of 47,867l 5s. 8d., were completed, on which the annual premiums are 1,702l 8s. 5d. In the fire department there were effected 515 assurances, covering 52,291l, on which the annual income is 550l 9s. 7d. The auditors reported that the total income of the company since its formation in October, 1851, has been 6,268l 11s 7½d., and the outlay, including all preliminary expenses, 5,754l 19s. 10½d., leaving a general balance of 449l 11s. 9d. The directors have as yet received no compensation.

LAST IN WALKING AND COMFORT TO THE FOOT.

HALL & CO. PATENTEES of the LEATHER-CLOTH, or PANNUS CORIUM BOOTS AND SHOES FOR LONDON FIRST Peculiarly soft and easy.

Wellington-street, Strand, leading to Waterloo-bridge, London.

The Leather-cloth, or Pannus Corium Boots and Shoes are the softest and easiest ever worn: they yield to the action of the foot without the least pressure, or any clumsy or painful effect, and are extensively acknowledged to be the most valuable relief for all who suffer from Corns, Bunions, Gout, Chilblains, or any tenderness of the feet. They resemble the finest leather, and are cleaned with ordinary blacking.

Superior Vulcanized India-rubber Over-shoes, or Galoshes which prevent sliding and keep the Feet thoroughly dry and warm. An account of may be obtained by sending an old boot or shoe.

Portable Waterproof Dresses for Ladies and Gentlemen, which can with convenience be carried in the pocket. Ladies Cloaks, with Hoods like Gentlemen's Cloaks, compelling Cape, Overalls, and Hood, like the suit, Over coats, &c.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—in endless nights of pain—in indigent consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication)—they take no unceasing effect. In asthma, and in relative cough, they have never been known to fail.

Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the Kingdom.

IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

"St. Paul's Cathedral, 20th Nov., 1849.

"Sir,—I have much pleasure in communicating your success to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have relieved me relief on several occasions when scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.

"I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

"To Mr Keating" "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-Choral."

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, Established 1824.

Empowered by Letters of Incorporation.—The Assured may reside in any part of the world, without extra charge, and in all cases by payment of a small Premium.

Policies effected without the risk of Forfeiture.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without interfering on the interest made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits attributable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital—thus combining in the same Office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to £80,000l., and the Income exceeds £26,000l. per Annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the Whole of Life, one half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Sums are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—FIVE BONUSES have been declared; at the last, in January, 1848, the sum of 181,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 24½ to 56 per cent on the Premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the Books being closed for any division the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June 1853, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later Assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in Cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced Rates, and the Premiums for term Policies are very lower than at most other Safe Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be Assured at Rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum, in one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, but if a payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within four days months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to Assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing a line to

GEORGE H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

92, Great Russell-street Bloomsbury, London.

 The usual Commission allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

WANTED to PURCHASE—HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, BOOKS, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS &c. in large or small quantities for which the full value will be given (in Town or Country). Valuations for administration made free of charge where the effects are purchased.

Address, post paid, to Mr. THOMAS, 26 Leicester-square.

BROUGHAM CARRIAGES, New and Second-hand.—Upwards of Twenty of the above fashionable Vehicles at unusually low prices. At CATTELL'S 149, Long-acre. Carriages of any description taken in exchange, and parties waited upon with drawings, &c. to any part of the kingdom at the moderate charge of one coach-fare, as sold no business be transacted.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters &c.—Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others various articles, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article and do not employ any traveller, or authorize any person to represent themselves as coming from my establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the Public and secure an injury to myself.

E. M. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 58 Long-lane West Smithfield London.

CURTIS IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING.

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every Dealer in London of any importance which is manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They have expressed regret that in the five samples they found to be genuine the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be mixed comparatively with this, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—The Lancet of May 11, 1851. The husk or shell of the nut is that which must on that by excluding them as we do we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of Cocoa drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA in packets at 1s per lb. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drank at the table of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

HANDCOCK and DAVIES 61 HIGH HOLBORN.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist to the Queen, has invented an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH fixed without springs, wires or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any yet before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52 Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of the AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLLEN CLOTHS (Cap 65), for WALKING or RIDING. This is an improved Style of Coat, of a light convenient Form which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary Coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, in a first-rate garment, has so great a claim to public favour. It is produced in all colours with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas and, in winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 2½ and 3 guineas. The improved WINTER GUINEA TROUSERS are also ready for selection, from a choice variety of Patterns. In addition only of the POULSON and COMPANY Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the United Australian Wool Cloth the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT. Within the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMINTON and SON, 66, Strand, opposite the Adelphi London. The importation of this patented invention consists in the material and its application, viz., the double purpose of using two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly frock-coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour required. Its over-garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling skilfully designed in cloth, and perfect in both its capacities. In these various properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and certainty not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 70s. to 70s. London, EDMINTON and SON, Tailors, 66, Strand.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the sole agent for guards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot 47a, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"96 Minories, London, July 8th 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

"Gentlemen—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, coatings, canvas, &c. was destroyed the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The heat was only dispersed at the time evening, and from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

We are gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"(Signed) "COLNAGHI and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safes alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of SMITH'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the Glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the Sight. Clergymen, Barristers, and public Speakers, will find great convenience in the use of PANTOSCOPIC SPECTACLES, as they enable the wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

TELESCOPTS of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

OPERA GLASSES, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical and Philosophical and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153 Fleet-street London.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged often to frequently closed or rubbed by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When a new light is required than was formerly. For example—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all dilatation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted and a pair of Pantoscopic Spectacles purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES if taken on the first approach of decay will certainly restore for progress and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Ruled Steel with Crystals, 10s.; Silver ditto, 15s.; Gold ditto 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 5s. Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of. Thomas Harris and Son, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street London.—Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

LEADING CASES in the COMMERCIAL LAW of ENGLAND and SCOTLAND; selected and arranged for the Use of Students, with Notes, by SIMEON KERR, Esq., Advocate, Barrister-at-Law, and Chief Clerk in the Law Department of the Privy Council. Part I. Preliminary Notes.—In Monthly Parts, royal 8vo, price 2s. each.

BOOK-KEEPING for SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.

"[illegible] annual accumulation of [illegible] confirms its utility."—Law Times.

The following are extracts from a few of the many voluntary testimonials received from the profession:—

"I find your system [illegible] satisfactory."

"Satisfactory in every respect."

"We have found it to work satisfactorily."

"The most important work ever brought under our notice."

"It ought to be [illegible] adopted; it works most admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and has the advantage of being very simple. The more I use it the more am I pleased with it."

"A great advantage."

"Decidedly a great improvement."

"I much approve of your system."

"I readily my entire approbation of your system."

"I take great interest in the successful working of your system."

"I am convinced of the superiority of your system over all others that have come under my notice: it only requires to be known to be appreciated."

"The best feature next to its completeness is its simplicity."

"We cannot hesitate to, and will recommend it to our friends."

"I am most decidedly satisfied of its accuracy and value."

"We quite appreciate the system."

"We have derived advantage from its adoption."

"The system is simple and easy."

"We can with confidence recommend it."

"We are much pleased with the system."

"Many of the profession here (Liverpool) have adopted the system."

"After a year and a half's trial, we increasingly appreciate the simplicity and accuracy of its principles."

"We have been much pleased by this system for two years, and have found it a great saving of time and trouble, and at the same time correct and satisfactory."

An explanation may be had of the Author, price 2s., post-paid, of whom also are to be had the necessary Account-Books.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING"
THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, cure being the best, being free from husk and all potass. They likewise expressed regret that in the five samples then found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food, comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet of May 31 1851 The husk, &c form about one sixth of the whole nut, so that by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article We request the favour of Cocoa drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s per lb Their confidence will not be misplaced It is now drank at the table of the first families in all parts of the Kingdom

PILLS
DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA PILLS, for purifying the blood, scurvy, and all low states of system skin diseases, nervous complaints, great rheumatic gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite stomach and liver complaints nervous head and face aches, sore legs and general debility It is also invaluable to the military naval and commercial man, and tourists not only on account of their virtues, but their portability Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold Into it enters the solution of Sarsaparilla however carefully prepared can resist an inherent fermentation will it will and does undergo rendering it entirely unfit a Pills "Two Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon Sadly they have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years and their virtues well tested They are less nauseous for both sexes, and will keep in any climate A 2s 9d box is equal to a 10s 6d bottle of Sarsaparilla and is the most respectable mode we can recommend to the King dom and by the sole Proprietor HENRY HIDES 10 Hungerford-street Strand in boxes at 1s 1½d 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s and 22s A small saving is effected by taking the larger sizes hence, a 2s 9d contains three 1s 1½d boxes, a 4s 6d contains seven and so on increasing

DR KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time and really cured by a newly-discovered principle in SARSAPARILLA The Proprietor of Dr King's True Sarsaparilla Pills upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr King's Sarsaparilla Pills determined upon mixing a very old and well-tried Gout Pill which Dr King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr King's Sarsaparilla Pills for the cure of gout and rheumatism and all cases of a rheumatic character such as the dull or sharp aches pains lumbago and pains in the limbs and joints, and the benefit from such a combination of these two properties has been really wonderful Dr King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of injuring the system They are free from opium and mercury, and consist entirely of pure Sarsaparilla
NB—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system not by violent purging but by a gentle increase of the secretion of the kidneys.
Sold by most of the same principal Dr King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by all respectable vendors throughout the United kingdom and by the Sole Proprietor, HENRY HIDES Hungerford-street, Strand Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp (initials which is false)
Best manner to post by inclosing postage stamps for the amount of the value required

THE LAW OF DIVORCE.—A very important measure will be introduced into the House of Lords immediately on the re-assembling of Parliament, by Lord Brougham, by which the present tedious system of divorce will be abolished, and a new statute framed, doing away entirely with the enormous fees which are now paid, thereby bringing the law within the reach of the poor By the new law, the proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court, and also the action at law, which are now necessary, will be abolished.—Sun.

THE QUEEN v. DR. NEWMAN.—The new trial in this celebrated case will take place in the ensuing term. It stands the last but one in the list of new trials—No. 20 in the cause paper It is understood that the expenses attending the proceedings of this affair will amount to about 10,000l. The present Attorney-General is for Dr. Newman.

ILLNESS OF LORD DENMAN.—We regret to announce that, by a communication just received from Nice, where the above noble lord has been staying for some time past, it appears that he is in a very dangerous condition of health, and not expected to recover. He had been attacked with a second paralytic fit, and, when the despatch left, was considered almost in extremis. His Lordship's eldest son has left London to be in attendance upon his venerable parent.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorize any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

R. H. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant Sight by means of SILER'S OPTUMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the sight. Clergymen, Barristers, and Public Speakers will find great convenience in the use of PANTOSCOPIC SPECTACLES, as they enable the Wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

TELESCOPES of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

TELESCOPES. A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly-invented preserving Spectacles, invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S and H SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example.—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a respectable and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Presbyopic" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Rimed do. with Crystals, 15s., Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3s. DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S ROLDFAST SAFES—the strongest Safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"96, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUDRO and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Advantages Offered.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE. The Assured may reside in most parts of the world, without extra charge, and in all parts by payment of a small extra Premium.

Mutual System without the risk of Partnership.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, without intrenching on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital thus combining in the same Office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l. and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per Annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the Whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the Policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared; at the last, in January 1852, the sum of 131,127l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages from 2½ to 5 per cent. on the premiums paid during the five years.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division, so that if only one year's Premium is received prior to the Books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on 30th June, 1856, therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next, will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later Assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The past and future Bonuses may be either received in Cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON PARTICIPATING.—Assurances may be effected for a Fixed Sum at considerably reduced Rates; and the Premiums for term Policies are lower than at most other Sale Offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS. Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

INVALID LIVES may be Assured at Rates proportioned to the increased risk.

POLICIES are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one Life, from 50l. to 10,000l.

PREMIUMS may be paid yearly, half yearly, or quarterly, but if a payment be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance Sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

A copy of the last Report, with a Prospectus and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained at any of the Society's Agents, or will be forwarded free by addressing a line to

GEORGE H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary

APPEAL to the BENEVOLENT and HUMANE, more especially to the JUDGES, BARRISTERS, and other MEMBERS of the LEGAL PROFESSION. This appeal is made on behalf of a Lady, the Wife of a Member of the Irish Bar, who, by a series of continued and overwhelming misfortunes, with her helpless family, all females, reduced to a state of great distress. She has been from time to time compelled to part with her furniture, bed-clothing, even her own and children's wearing apparel, to provide food necessary for their support. The last remaining relative died about two months since. Some kind persons have been exerting themselves to raise a fund to place the lady in a position to support her young and helpless children. By birth a gentlewoman, and having received a superior education, she is capable of conducting a school. An opportunity now offers; but as her friends have not been able to raise funds sufficient to provide the indispensable requisites, they are obliged to have recourse to the present appeal. It is earnestly hoped that it may come under the notice of some benevolent persons, whom it has pleased Providence to bless with the means as well as the desire of doing good. Doubtless amongst the numerous and respectable body the English Bar consists of, some charitably-disposed members will be found, who, feeling for the unhappy situation of the family whose distressing case is now laid before them, will, by their timely aid, contribute to alleviate their sufferings, and prevent the others so fearful alternative of their being obliged to become inmates of the workhouse.
Reference has been kindly permitted to, and contributions received and acknowledged with gratitude, in Dublin, by Dr. R. L. NIXON, 3, Grenville-street, and the Rev. Dr. STUART, 25, Upper Temple-street.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. The caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

BOOK-KEEPING for SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.
"Its general acceptance proves that experience confirms its utility."—Law Times.
The following are extracts from a few of the many voluntary testimonials received from the profession:—
"I find your system very satisfactory."
"Satisfactory and advantageous."
"We have found it to work satisfactorily."
"The most satisfactory ever brought under our notice."
"It ought to be wholly adopted; it works most admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and has the advantage of being very simple. The more I use it the more am I pleased with it."
"A great advantage."
"Decidedly a great improvement."
"I much approve of your system."
"I testify my entire approbation of your system."
"I take great interest in the successful working of your system."
"I am convinced of the superiority of your system over all others that have come under my notice: it only requires to be known to be appreciated."
"Its best feature next to its soundness is its simplicity."
"We much approve of it, and will recommend it to our friends."
"I am most thoroughly satisfied of its accuracy and value."
"We quite appreciate the system."
"We have derived advantage from its adoption."
"The system is simple and easy."
"We can with confidence recommend it."
"We are much pleased with the system."
"Many of the profession here (Liverpool) have adopted the system."
"After a year and a half's trial, we increasingly appreciate the simplicity and accuracy of the system."
"We have kept our books by this system for two years, and have found it a great saving of time and trouble, and at the same time correct and satisfactory."
An exemplification can be had of the Author, price 3*s.*, post-paid, of whom also are to be had the necessary Account-Books.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

The Queen has been pleased to grant the office of her Majesty's Solicitor-General for Scotland to Robert Handyside, Esq., advocate.

Mr. Corballis, Q.C., has been appointed as law adviser at Dublin Castle. This appointment will give very general satisfaction. Mr. Corballis is a Roman Catholic gentleman of moderate politics, who had been a steady colleague of the late venerated Archbishop Murray at the Board of National Education.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

BIRMINGHAM LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY—Established 1848.

At the annual general meeting, held on the 5th Jan. inst., at the Philosophical Institution, Cannon-street, C. T. Saunders, Esq. in the chair, the report having been read by the secretary, from which it appeared that the members of the society had been engaged in the study of "Chitty on Contracts," "Williams on Personal Property," and the current examination questions, and in the discussion of moot points of a jurisprudential and legal character; that the ordinary fortnightly meetings had been held without one omission, and that the average attendance of members had much increased; that the society at present consists of 111 honorary members and twenty-seven ordinary members; that the library had been augmented during the past year by the purchase of Petersdorf's Abridgment of the Common Law Reports, fifteen vols. and seven text books upon various branches of the Law, and that several other works decided upon would be placed in the library as soon as published:

It was moved by Thomas Martineau, Esq. seconded by Mr. C. E. Matthews, and resolved: "That the report of the proceedings of the past year now presented by the committee be received and adopted." It was moved by Mr. M. A. Fitter, seconded by Mr. Francis Sanders, and resolved unanimously: "That the best thanks of this meeting be presented to Arthur Ryland, Esq. for his kind exertions to procure the use of the Law Library for the society's meetings." In pursuance of a resolution adopted at a special meeting of the society, held on the 8th December last, the chairman then presented to Mr. M. A. Fitter "Townsend's State Trials," as an acknowledgment of the important services he had rendered to the society during his long connection with it.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Committee—C. T. Saunders, Esq. honorary member; Mr. M. A. Fitter, Mr. G. J. Johnson, Mr. Francis Sanders, Mr. John Neve, ordinary members. Hofforary secretary, Mr. J. G. Johnson, 64, Little Charles-street; hon. corresponding secretary, Mr. Francis Sanders, 80, Waterloo-street; hon. librarian, Mr. J. Neve, 5, Old-square.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

Forms of Declarations, Pleadings, and other Proceedings in the Superior Courts of Common Law; with the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and the New Rules of Practice of Hilary Term, 1853, with Notes. By Henry Greening, Esq. Special Pleader. 12mo. Second edition. London: Butterworths.

This work, comprising, as it does, almost all the common forms of pleadings, is calculated to be of very considerable utility to the practitioner. It has one great merit in our eyes, in not being overloaded with precedents rarely if ever used, and therefore forming anything but one of the formidable bulky volumes, with corresponding prices, which the practising lawyer bemoans his fate in being compelled to purchase.

Mr. Greening's selection appears to have been carefully and judiciously made, and the notes he has occasionally appended are at once concise and practical.

The book is quite worthy of the learned author's reputation as a pleader; and we can with pleasure recommend it to such of our readers as are engaged in the preparation of every-day pleadings in ordinary actions.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

Speedy Execution.—In the course of business in the Bail Court, on Wednesday, Erle, J. stated, that in all cases of verdicts against acceptors of bills of exchange, makers of promissory notes, and drawers of checks, execution would issue in four days without special application to the judge; but in all other cases, and where the parties were only secondarily liable, the execution would not issue until fourteen days.

Settling Cases out of Court.—In the Ex. on Monday, on the first case in the special paper being called on, Huggins reminded the court that this was a case which had stood over by their leave on his application, in order that the parties might have an opportunity of settling it. As he had not received any further instructions, he was led to believe that the case had been arranged. The Chief Baron.—That may be so, but I cannot help remarking upon the impropriety of the parties abstaining from giving information of the fact to the court. Where cases stand over for the convenience of suitors with a view to a settlement, and they are arranged, it would be but decent if one of the parties would condescend to give notice to one of the judges' clerks, in order that the cause may be removed from the paper, and the loss of valuable time in preparing for the argument be avoided. I trust that, for the future, intimation will be given to the officer of the court in all such cases.

An Ex-Judge in the Docks.—John William Molloy, an old man, who declares that he was formerly Solicitor-general at Bermuda, and subsequently Judge of the Supreme Court at Newfoundland, has been sent to prison from the Middlesex sessions for twelve months, for fraudulently obtaining five shillings from the waiter at an eating-house on the strength of a worthless cheque. He has been in prison before for similar offences.

Parliamentary Papers.—From a return, lately published, it appears that the receipts from the sale of Parliamentary papers in eight years—from 1844 to 1851—amounted to 40,682*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.* The rent of three offices, payment of clerks, &c., in the period came to 3,728*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*, leaving the net produce 36,959*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*

CORRESPONDENCE.

ABOLITION OF THE NAME OF "CHANCERY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Notwithstanding that the proceedings in the courts of equity have been so greatly simplified, and the expense thereof diminished, the prejudice consequent on the evils hitherto connected with the system of chancery suits is such as to operate most injuriously to that branch of business. In my own experience, whenever I find it needful to advise recourse to the Court of "Chancery," so odious is the word to the ears of clients, that I try by every ingenuity to avoid the expression; and no longer since than yesterday, whilst reading to a client an opinion as to the enforcement of a claim under a will, in the course of which counsel advised that a sale might be enforced "by a suit in Chancery," I came to an abrupt conclusion at the word "enforced," and ardently wished the name of "Chancery" were changed to something more inviting. Any allusion to Chancery is calculated to convey the idea that the remedy will be both protracted and expensive.

If the change in the harmless title of "Master Extraordinary in Chancery" is considered so important as to call for a special enactment to abrogate it, surely the subject I have adverted to has a much higher claim to consideration.

I am persuaded that a change in the name of the Court of Chancery (the applicability of which does not seem very apparent) would effect much in rescuing the second tribunal in the kingdom from the obloquy that attaches to it. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Rusticus.

The Law of Divorce.—A very important measure will be introduced into the House of Lords immediately on the re-assembling of Parliament, by Lord Brougham, by which the present tedious system of divorce will be abolished, and a new statute framed, doing away entirely with the enormous fees which are now paid, thereby bringing the law within the reach of the poor. By the new law, the proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court, and also the action at law, which are now necessary, will be abolished.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES OF THE SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 13s. calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d.; and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press; and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the new Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.
Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term.)
Copyright Amendment Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's, is of great importance in the present state of the profession. In its pleasingly written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest Safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"26, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

"Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUSINS and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant sight by means of SMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the Glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the Sight. Clergymen, Barristers, and Public Speakers will find great convenience in the use of PANTOSCOPIC SPECTACLES, as they enable the Wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

TELESCOPES of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

OPERA GLASSES, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical, Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example.—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Blued Steel with Crystals, 15s.; Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3s. Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Optician to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—in redundancy of phlegm—in incipient consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication) they are of unerring efficacy. In asthma, and in winter cough, they have never been known to fail.

Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the Kingdom.

IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

"St. Paul's Cathedral, 25th Nov., 1849.

"Sir,—I have much pleasure in recommending your Lozenges to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have afforded me relief on several occasions when scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.

"I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

"To Mr. Keating." "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-Choral."

Now ready,

The SECOND EDITION of the COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with Practical Notes illustrated by Precedents of Pleadings and Forms of Affidavits, Notices, &c. By ROBERT MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 12s. cloth; 13s. 6d. half-calf; 14s. 6d. calf.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

"The introductory and illustrative portions of the volume before us will be found exceedingly useful under the new and untried Act."—Globe.

CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

Cribs, cots, &c.; bed-room furniture of every description. Eider-down quilts and duvets, in silk and cotton cases.

J. and S. STEER, Bedding, Bedstead, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 13, Oxford-street, London.

ECONOMICAL FASHIONABLE TAILORS.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, request attention, in addition to their Superior Stock, to a choice lot of MILLED SCOTCH DOESKINS, among which will be found some new MIXTURES, well adapted for RIDING TROWSERS, at One Guinea per pair.

Also their LIGHT LLAMA mixed OVERCOATS, with Silk Sleeve-linings, for the approaching Season, price Two Guineas.

HOBSON, BROTHERS, Tailors, 4, Pinsbury-place (South); and 57, Lombard-street, three doors from Messrs. Barclay, the Bankers. Established 1786.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are not sold by any hosiers or drapers, and can therefore be obtained only at 38, Poultry. Gentlemen in the country or abroad, ordering through their agents, are requested to observe on the interior of the collar-band the stamp, "FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 38, Poultry," without which none are genuine. They are made in two qualities: first quality, 40s. the half-dozen; second quality, 30s. the half-dozen. Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made are solicited to inspect these, the most unique and only perfectly-fitting shirts. Coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 27s. the half-dozen. List of prices and instructions for measurement post free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free on receipt of six stamps.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry, London (late 185, Strand.)

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 VICT. Cap. 65), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved Style of Coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary Coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 2½ and 3 guineas.—The Improved WINTER GUINEA TROUSERS are also ready for selection, from a choice Variety of Patterns. In London only of B. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.

94, Regent-street.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT —Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz., the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In every garment or paletot this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in each, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s.

London: EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoas of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food, comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet, of May 31, 1851. The husk, &c. form about one sixth of the whole nut, so that by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance t e cost of the article. We request the favour of Cocoa drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per lb. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drank at the table of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

HANDFORD and DAVIES, 61, HIGH HOLBORN.

METCALFE and CO.'s NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner: hair never comes loose. 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristle, which will not soften like common hair; improved clothes-brush, that cleans hare-lessly in one-third the usual time; the new velvet brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna sponge.

At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and Co.'s only Establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.

CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth-Powder, 2s. per box.

ANOTHER CURE OF COUGH AND HOARSENESS, by

DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

"Epsom, Feb. 6, 1852.

"Gentlemen,—For some time past I was afflicted with a most distressing Cough and Hoarseness, and which I thought, from various symptoms I observed, would continue to Consumption.—After having tried several remedies, and finding little or no relief, I determined to try a small box of your Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers, and to my surprise in less than two days I found myself perfectly restored; and it is with deep-felt gratitude I return my sincere thanks to you and Providence that I can by means of your invaluable medicine thus perfectly restored. I am, Gentlemen, yours thankfully,

"To Messrs. Prout." "G. WYATT."

To singers and public speakers they are invaluable for strengthening the voice. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box. Sold by all medicine vendors.

Also, Dr. LOCOCK'S ANTIBILIOUS WAFERS, a mild and gentle Aperient Medicine, having a most agreeable taste, and of great efficacy for regulating the secretions and correcting the action of the Stomach and Liver. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box.

ITALIAN SILK UMBRELLAS are superseding every other description for elegance and durability, are made on the premises under Mr. Cheek's immediate inspection, and the silk warranted superior to every other material. 19s. and 21s.—Golden Perch, 232, Oxford-street

N.B. Ladies' silk, 6s.; alpaca, 4s.; gingham, 2s.; and carriage umbrellas, 6s.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MELTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while its lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by E. BROWN, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the Te Quisha Parisian Polish for Dress Boots and Shoes, and Waterproof Varnish for Hunting Boots.

MANUFACTORY, 25, BROAD-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE.

Patronised by the Court and Nobility, and to be had at all the principa shops throughout the kingdom.

THE VERSATIO, or REVERSIBLE COAT —Worthy the attention of the Legal and Clerical Professions.—EDMISTON and SON, 69, Strand, opposite the Adelphi, London.—The importance of this patented invention consists in the novelty of the material and its application, viz., the double purpose of forming two in one without trouble, one side presenting a gentlemanly morning coat, the other a riding or shooting coat in any texture or colour desired. In over garments or paletots this happy discovery offers still more useful advantages to the wearer, one surface exhibiting a graceful and elegant walking-coat, while its counterpart is conveniently adapted for the rougher purposes of travelling, skilfully designed in cloth, and perfect in both their capacities. In these varying properties the public must recognise a union of novelty and usefulness not hitherto accomplished. Gentlemen supplied sending their height and size round the chest over the waistcoat. Price from 50s. to 70s.

London: EDMISTON and SON, Tailors, 69, Strand.

PATENT REVERSIBLE OVER-COATS, &c. which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal.—W. BERDOE, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill (only).—Novelty, utility, economy, all unite in commending this invention to general adoption: the Patent having two perfect and totally dissimilar faces, can be worn either side outwards. Thus each Garment, at the cost of ONE, being equivalent to TWO. For Over-coats of every kind, the New Angleses and all other Capes, Shooting and Morning Coats, this discovery is especially appropriate; also for LADIES' CLOAKS, MANTLES, &c. A variety of the Materials and Garments kept for selection; also one of the largest stocks in London of superior Over-coats of every description; Capes, Shooting-jackets, Youths' Over-coats, &c. all guaranteed to resist any amount of Rain.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE LADIES' CARRIAGE STEP, which was so universally admired at the Great Exhibition for its novelty, simplicity of action, and utility, having all the advantages of the inside Step, being free from dirt. This Step can be applied to any carriage already built.

DAVID DAVIES and SON have also finished for inspection, a Double Brougham, with their Patent Wheel Plate, by which means the carriage is much shorter; also the front wheels are higher, which makes the draught easier.

To be seen at the Manufactory for Improvements on Carriages, 15, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square.

GREAT EXHIBITION PRIZE MEDAL, AWARDED TO CAISTOR FOR SADDLES AND HARNESS.

CAISTOR'S much-admired SADDLES combine elegance and lightness with strength and durability. They are roomy in the Seat, and bring the Rider as close as possible to his Horse. They are well adapted for the Field, Park, or Road.

"TRIED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING."

THE Analytical Sanitary Commissioners having analysed the Cocoa of every dealer in London of any importance, whether manufactured in London or not, have declared that only four samples were genuine, ours being the best, being free from husk and all refuse. They likewise expressed regret that, in the few samples they found to be genuine, the husk or shell of the nut, which they state to be, as food, comparatively worthless, should so generally be worked up with the nut.—Vide The Lancet May 31, 1851. The husk, &c. form about one sixth of the whole nut, so that by excluding them, as we do, we necessarily enhance the cost of the article. We request the favour of Cocoa drinkers to make trial of our PURE GRANULATED COCOA, in packets at 1s. per lb. Their confidence will not be misplaced. It is now drank at the table of the first families in all parts of the kingdom.

HANDFORD and DAVIES, 61, HIGH HOLBORN.

AMERICAN CLOCK WAREHOUSE, 545 and 546, NEW OXFORD-STREET, where will be found the largest assortment of those superior Time-pieces, American Clocks, ever imported into this country, made by the oldest and most celebrated Manufacturers in the United States. BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW-ROAD, LONDON.—THE HYGEIAN SYSTEM OF MEDICINE.—Morison's Pills, the Vegetable Universal Medicine, is a certain cure for any curable disease, which fact is proved by the experience of all the Members of the British College of Health.

CAUTION.—No chemist or druggist is authorised to sell the medicine.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

PILLS.

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA PILLS, for purifying the blood, scurvy, and all low states of system, skin diseases, nervous complaints, gout, rheumatic gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite, stomachic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourists, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold: 1stly. Because no solution of Sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared, can resist an inherent fermentation, which it will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless; 2ndly. "Two Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon;" 3rdly. They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2s. 9d. box is equal to a 16s. bottle of Sarsaparilla. Sold by most respectable medicine vendors in the Kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor HENRY HIDES, 10, Hungerford-street, Strand, in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s. A considerable saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence, a 2s. 9d. contains three 1s. 1½d. boxes, a 4s. 6d. contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time and really cured by a newly-discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The Proprietor of Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon relating a very old and well-tried Gout Pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," for the cure of gout and rheumatism and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as tic-douloureux, face-ache, lumbago, and pains in the loins and joints; and the benefit from such a combination of these two prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of injuring the system. They are free from opium and mercury, and consist chiefly of pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B.—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system, not by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretion of the kidneys.

Sold in boxes at the same price as Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable vendors in the United Kingdom, and by the Sole Proprietor, HENRY HIDES, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate which is libel.

Boxes sent by post by inclosing postage stamps for the amount of box required.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

LUMLEY v. GYE.—This case came on on Wednesday before Mr. Justice Erle, in judges' chambers. It will be remembered that an action was brought by Mr. Lumley, of Her Majesty's Theatre, against Mr. Gye, of the Opera-house, Covent-garden, to recover damages in regard to Mdlle. Wagner having been prevented fulfilling her engagement at Her Majesty's Theatre. Subsequently applications were made to the Court of Exchequer (in which court the action was brought), on the part of the defendant, to plead and demur under the new Act at the same time. Since the matter was last before the public, it has been deemed advisable to discontinue the action in the Exchequer, and a new trial has been commenced, of a similar character, in the Court of Queen's Bench; and on Tuesday afternoon an application was made to Mr. Justice Erle in reference to the new action. The summons called upon the plaintiff to show cause why he should not elect between the last count and the first two counts of the declaration, or one of them, and why one of them should not be struck out, on the ground of a violation of the rule of Hilary Term, 4 Will. 4, against the use of several counts for the same subject-matter of complaint. Mr. Willes appeared in support of the application, instructed by Mr. Tamplin, attorney for the defendant; and Mr. Templer, instructed by Messrs. Lewis, for the plaintiff. Mr. Justice Erle, after hearing the learned counsel, declined to make an order as prayed, and directed the costs of the application should be costs of the cause.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

E. B. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES adapted to suit every condition of near and distant Sight by means of SMEE'S OPTOMETER, which determines accurately the exact focal distance of the Glasses required, thereby effectually preventing any injury to the Sight. Clergymen, Barristers, and Public Speakers will find great convenience in the use of PANTOSCOPIC SPECTACLES, as they enable the Wearer to look through them at near objects, and over them at those at a distance.

TELESCOPES of all kinds and of the best construction, combining portability with a large and clear field of view.

OPERA GLASSES, with improved Compensating Adjustments.

BLAND and LONG, Opticians, Mathematical, Philosophical, and Chemical Instrument Makers, 153, Fleet-street, London.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distances of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1*l.* 10*s.* sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly-invented preserving Spectacles, invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—

When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example.—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Blued Steel with Crystals, 15*s.*; Silver ditto, 1*l.*; Gold ditto, 2*l.* 2*s.*; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 2*s.* Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

Periodical Sales (established in 1842), appointed to take place the first Thursday in every month, of Absolute and Contingent Reversions to Funded and other Property, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent Charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings, for the year 1858.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1842), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned PROPERTY, take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the ensuing year, as under:—

Thursday next, February 3	Thursday, August 4
Thursday, March 3	Thursday, September 1
Thursday, April 7	Thursday, October 6
Thursday, May 5	Thursday, Nov. 3
Thursday, June 3	Thursday, Dec. 1.
Thursday, July 7

Mr. MARSH has been induced to hold these sales from the increasing demand for the transfer of property of this description, the value of which, as a means of investment, is daily becoming better appreciated, and from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which it has been exposed in the ordinary course of sale; and the experience of the last ten years has proved the above plan to be equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers, the classification of numerous lots rendering the means of publicity more effectual and less expensive to the vendor, and simplifying the transfer to the purchaser. Notices of sale intended to be affected by the above means should be forwarded to Mr. MARSH at least a fortnight antecedent to the above dates, in order that they may have the full benefit of publicity. Mr. MARSH requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of his periodical sales to forward their address to his offices, where every information respecting the disposal and purchase of this class of property may be obtained. The particulars and conditions of sale for the ensuing year may be obtained, seven days prior to each day of sale, at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool; White Lion Hotel, Bristol; Hen and Chickens Hotel, Birmingham; Palatine Hotel, Manchester; White Hart Hotel, Leeds; and the New London Hotel, Exeter; also at the Mart, and at Mr. MARSH'S offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house; or will be forwarded to any part on application. The next Periodical Sale will take place on Thursday next, February 3.

Practices, Effects and Property for Sale.

LAW.—For SALE, a GENERAL COUNTRY PRACTICE, in a flourishing Market Town, of genuine importance. An Attorney of active experienced business habits, and having a gentleman's capital, will find this well worthy his attention.
Apply by letter, addressed "LEX," care of (or personally) to Charles Stronghill, Esq. 7, Coleman-street, London.

Situations, Wanted and Vacant.

LAW.—A Gentleman who has been three years in his father's office is desirous of having his ARTICLES TRANSFERRED for the unexpired term to some gentleman having a good practice. As his object is to gain the best knowledge of his profession, he would of course be willing to make himself useful.
Apply by letter to "C. F. P." care of Mr. Bromage, Bookseller, 4, Southampton-court, Russell-square.

LAW.—WANTED a SITUATION as CLERK to an Attorney. The Advertiser, who has been with a Solicitor of the highest respectability Twelve Months, writes a neat and expeditious hand, and is willing to make himself generally useful. Wages not so much an object as a Permanent Situation.
Address, "C. S." Post-office, Saxmundham, Suffolk.

LAW.—A Gentleman, aged 26, of considerable experience in Conveyancing and the general Business of a Country Office, is desirous of a re-ENGAGEMENT; has served his Articles, but would guarantee from Misdemeanor, and make himself generally useful under the direction of a Principal. Unexceptionable References can be given, and a small Salary only required.
Address "H." (No. 514), LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—A Gentleman, aged 24, admitted in Michaelmas Term last, and who served his Clerkship in Offices of good General Practice in Mercantile Towns, is desirous of an ENGAGEMENT as a MANAGING CLERK, under the superintendence of the Principal, and with or without the prospect of a future Partnership. The Advertiser is also qualified to be admitted a Notary.
Address to "LEX," Messrs Warterlow's, Birchin-lane, City.

LAW.—A Gentleman, who for some years has had the General Management of an extensive Country Practice (including heavy Railway Conveyancing) will shortly be at liberty for a similar ENGAGEMENT. His Testimonials for ability, strict integrity, business-like habits, and private character, are of a high order. To a gentleman of standing, or a firm in want of really efficient aid, the Advertiser would be found a valuable acquisition. A liberal salary will be expected.
Apply to "L. R." (No. 514) LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand

LAW.—WANTED, in a Country Office of the first eminence, a CLERK thoroughly conversant with Copyhold and Leasehold Practice, to undertake that Department and make himself generally useful. No one need apply whose Abilities for the situation, and General Character, will not bear the strictest investigation. Salary 100l. a year
Address, with all Particulars, to "T. S." Mr. F G Randall, 16, Staple-inn, Holborn, London.

LAW.—GREAT SAVING.—Briefs and Abstracts copied at 6d. per sheet; draft copies, 1d per folio. Deeds and full-length copies, 1½d per folio. Deeds abstracted at 1s 6d per sheet; Indentures, 2s; Followers, 1s 6d; which includes making up seals, &c.

JUSTICES' CLERKS SOCIETY.—The next GENERAL MEETING of the Members of the above Society is appointed to be held at the LAW INSTITUTION, Chancery-lane, London, on WEDNESDAY, the 9th FEBRUARY inst., at Two o'clock in the Afternoon precisely, to audit the Accounts for the year 1852, and choose the Officers for the current year
By order,
CHARLES AUGUSTIN SMITH, Secretary.
Lecomas-hill, Greenwich, Feb. 4, 1853

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY. This Society meets at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, every Tuesday evening, at Seven o'clock, for the discussion of Legal and Jurisprudential Questions.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

For Tuesday, February 8th, 1853

President—Mr. CURTIS.

92. The time tables of a railway company contain a notice that the company will not be responsible for the trains not arriving at the times fixed in the tables, nor for any loss or damage occasioned thereby. A train having, through a defect in the engine, arrived at its destination late after the time named in the time tables, is the company liable in damages to a passenger who has been injured by the delay? See 15 Jurist, pt. 2, 260; 16 do. pt. 2, 457.

Affirmative—Mr. GALLAND and Mr. WENTWORTH Negative—Mr ESDON and Mr. HYDE.

For Tuesday, February 15th, 1853.

President—Mr GALLAND

LXII. Will it be right in Parliament to authorise the opening of the New Crystal Palace at Sydenham on Sundays?

Mr. ROWLETT is appointed to open the debate, and Messrs. E. J KENT, HUGHES, and J. WALKER to speak upon the question.

For Tuesday, February 22nd, 1853.

President—Mr. HAYMAN.

93. A yearly tenant gives a written acceptance of a three months' notice to quit given him in writing. Is the tenancy legally determined at the end of the three months? Bessel v. Landseer, 7 Q. B. 638; 15 Jurist, pt. 1, 1096; 2 Wms. & W. 193.

Affirmative—Mr. PRESTWARD and Mr. ARMSTRONG Negative—Mr. DAVIDSON and Mr. RAWLINSON.

J. W. ROWLETT, Secretary, 68, Lincoln's-Inn-fields.

MARRIAGE with a DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER.—The Committee of the Marriage Law Reform Association, continuing to receive numerous applications from persons intending to contract marriage with a deceased wife's sister, think it desirable to make it known that, though at present prohibited in England, these MARRIAGES are LAWFUL in France, Germany,

Russia, Sweden and Norway,

and all other Protestant countries of Europe, except England; they are also lawful in the United States of America; and, by dispensation, in all Roman Catholic countries.

The Committee also desire to call attention to the following judicial opinion:—"English decisions have established this rule, that a foreign marriage, valid according to the law of the place where celebrated, is good everywhere else."—Lord Stowell.

Further information may be obtained on application to the Honorary Secretary, at the House of the Association, 26, Parliament-street, where the various publications of the Association may be had.

Communications for effecting the objects of the Association may be forwarded to the Honorary Secretary, or paid to the account of the Treasurer, at Messrs. Hoare, Gibbs, and Co.'s, Bankers, Cornhill-lane, Lombard-street.

JOSEPH STANSBURY, M.A., Honorary Secretary.
26, Parliament-street.

CHEAP LAW BOOKS.—Many thousands of volumes of Reports, Books of Practice, Text Books, &c. ancient and modern, may always be had on ARTHUR ROBINSON'S, Law Bookseller, 26, Chancery-lane, London, at very moderate prices for ready money. Gentlemen sending a list of what they require will have the lowest prices reported.
See A. R.'s Advertisements in LAW TIMES, Feb. 5, March 6, May 15, June 5, June 26, July 31, and October 2.

 Gentlemen are requested to send their orders direct, as A R will not be accountable for dirty, ragged, and imperfect copies that may be supplied by other booksellers.

THE late Rev. NAT FLETCHER, deceased.—NOTICE.—All persons having CLAIMS on the ESTATE of the Rev. NAT FLETCHER, late of Sandling, Saltus, and of Lee House, near Romney, Hants, Clerk, deceased (who died on the 26th day of December last), are requested to send in the particulars of such claims forthwith to me, the undersigned: and all persons indebted to the said Estate are requested to pay the amount of their respective debts to me without delay.

NOTICE OF THE FIRST EDITION
"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act, 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.
"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, large correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine (November, 1852).
"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, presents the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner
To this edition has been added a SUPPLEMENT, containing—
1. The NEW RULES of PRACTICE, of Hilary Term, 1853, with Notes and References
2. The NEW RULES (also of Hilary Term) relative to the EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, and RE-ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS.

THE PATENT REVERSIBLE OVER-COATS, &c., of FUR BEAVER, which obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal. For warmth, comfort, and economy these Garments are unequalled, and a luxury to the wearer. This is the uniform testimony of those who have tried them. The cloth has two totally dissimilar faces, and can be worn on either side, thus combining two garments at the usual cost of one. A variety to select from; also one of the largest Stocks in London of Superior OVER-COATS, CAPES, &c., of every description, all thoroughly Waterproof, and reduced to the lowest terms consistent with the principle that quality is the test of cheapness.
W. BERDOE, 96, New Bond-street, and 65, Cornhill, only.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are not sold by any hosiers or drapers, and can therefore be obtained only at 38, Poultry. Gentlemen in the country or abroad, ordering through their agents, are requested to observe on the interior of the collar-band these words, "FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 38, Poultry," without which none are genuine. They are made in two qualities: first quality, 40s. the half-dozen; second quality, 36s. the half-dozen. Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made are solicited to inspect these, the most unique and only perfectly-fitting shirts. Coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, still ordinary wear, 42s. the half-dozen. List of prices and instructions for measurement post free, and patterns of the new self-acting shirtings free on receipt of six stamps.
RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry, London (late 165, Strand.)

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 VICT. Cap. 65), for WALKING or RIDING.—This is an improved Style of Coat, of a light convenient form, which retains of its long warm either over or without the ordinary Coat. It is easily and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 3 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 3½ and 3 guineas.—The Improved WINTER GUINEA TROUSERS are also ready for selection, from a choice Variety of Patterns. The London only of H. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the most material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.
94, Regent-street.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.
When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.
When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.
When more light is required than was formerly. For example.—
When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.
When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.
When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.
When black specks seem floating in the sight.
When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a respectable and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Pantoscopes" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Pebble fitted with Crystals, 15s.; Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 2s. Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.
THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

HATS for INDIA.—ELWOOD'S PATENT AIR-CHAMBER HATS are the best adapted for all tropical climates, being manufactured on a new and scientific principle, by which the head of the wearer is thoroughly protected from the heat of the sun, and perfect ventilation and coolness obtained. This principle is applicable to all kinds of hats, helmets, chakos, hunting caps, &c. May be obtained of the following old-established hatters:—Ashmead and Tyler, 7, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; Bowler, 19, Royal Exchange; Bailey, 45, Fleet-street; Beardmore, 60, New Bond-street; Briggs, 98, Gracechurch-street; Chatting, 5, Newgate-street; Cole, 24, Bridge-street, Westminster; Donaldson, 33, Warwick-street, Regent-street; Jupp, 228, Regent-street; Lee, 1, Ball-court; Locke, 6, St. James's-street; Skelton, 144, Regent-street; Preedy, 2, Fleet-street; Threadkell, 74, Fleet-street; Reynolds, 125, Strand; Manser and Allenders, Liverpool; or wholesale of the Manufacturers, J. PURCHASERS of the FIRST or SECOND EDITIONS of Mr. REES'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, are informed that the SUPPLEMENT is now ready, containing all the New Rules and Orders of Hilary Term, 1853; the New Table of Fees, and the New Orders relating to the Admission of Attorneys, and the Examination of Articled Clerks, with Explanatory and Practical Notes, Forms, and copious Index, and Marginal References to the pages of the 1st and 2nd Editions of Mr. Rees's Procedure Act, to which the various rules, &c. relate. Price 4s.
CROCKFORDS, Law Stereo Office.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE, in Bottle, may be had, in the highest perfection, at NATHANIEL BARTTY'S STORES, 152, Upper Thames-street.—Quarts, 7s. per dozen; Pints, 4s. per dozen. Also in Casks of 18 gallons and upwards. The quality of these Ales may be fully relied on, as no other Pale or Burton Ales than ALLSOPP'S are supplied from these stores.

TROUT and GRAYLING FLIES, the very choicest Quality, and can be selected from the largest Stock in the World, 2d. each, or 1s. 6d. per dozen. Fly rod, 7s.; best plain Otto, 10s.; with Two Tops, Winch Fittings, &c. 20s.; no better made; 20 yards Patent Line, 2s. 6d. Catalogues and Guides gratis.
JOHN CHEEK, Golden Perch, 102, Oxford-street.

PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES will find it greatly to their advantage to visit Messrs. COCKS and Co.'s PIANOFORTE SALOON, 6, New Burlington-street, where they will find a variety of superior instruments of all prices, equally remarkable for their purity of tone and facility of touch, manufactured under the personal superintendence of Messrs. C. and Co. from the most durable materials, and warranted not to be affected by any climate. Also many excellent grands, semi-grands, &c. by Broadwood, Collard, and others, a little used. A list of prices and drawings, also testimonials, to be had, gratis and postage free, of ROBERT COCKS and Co., Pianoforte Manufacturers and Music Publishers to the Queen, 6, New Burlington-street, London.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW-ROAD, LONDON.—THE HYGEIAN SYSTEM OF MEDICINE.—Morison's Pills, the Vegetable Universal Medicine, is a certain cure for any curable disease, which fact is proved by the experience of all the Members of the British College of Health.
CAUTION.—No chemist or druggist is authorised to sell the medicine.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.
52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—in redundancy of phlegm—in indolent consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication) they are of unerring efficacy. In asthma, and in winter cough, they have never been known to fail.
Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the Kingdom.
IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.
"St. Paul's Cathedral, 20th Nov., 1849.
"Sir,—I have much pleasure in recommending your Lozenges to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have afforded me relief on several occasions when I scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.
"I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
"To Mr. Keating." "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-Choral."

ANOTHER TESTIMONIAL IN FAVOUR OF
DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS
for ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS and COLDS.
From Mr. A. Scott, 48, Trongate, Glasgow.
"Dec. 23, 1852.
"I am glad to say that the demand for Dr. Locock's Pulmonic Wafers has commenced this season very briskly. I believe I have in stock every Cough Medicine which has been advertised, either in times past or present; but there is not one of them which has gained the same popularity as your Wafers. In severe Coughs, Asthma, and where there is a tendency to Consumption, the working classes, and others who cannot well afford it, prefer to pay 2s. 9d. for a box of Pulmonic Wafers, to boxes of similar size which cannot be got for a much smaller sum. I think this is an unmistakeable proof of their efficacy.
A. Scott, 48, Trongate, Glasgow."
To SINGERS and PUBLIC SPEAKERS they are invaluable for strengthening and clearing the voice. They have a most pleasant taste.—Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box. Sold by all medicine venders.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.
Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Carotic Supporters and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The New Rules and Orders of Hilary Term 1853; The New Table of Fees in the Common Law Courts; and the New Rules for the Admission of Attorneys and Examination of Articled Clerks; with Notes, References, Forms, and copious Index. By R. MALCOLM KERR, Esq. Editor of "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," &c. London: Crockford.

This comprehensive little book is a necessary addendum to the Procedure Act, which without it is useless and unintelligible. Mr. KERR has not only introduced many explanatory notes, and some new forms, and he has given marginal references to the sections of the Procedure Act, and the pages both of the first and second of his editions of it, to which each of the new orders applies, so that the practitioner is enabled to refer readily, and to read the Act with the rules that carries it out. Thus it serves to make both the editions of this book complete for the use of the practitioner.

The Lawyer's Pocket Book for 1853. London: Crockford.

In courts it continually happens that reference is required to be made to the Almanac for the past, as well as to that of the present year, to ascertain the moon's rising, the dates and days, &c. This is here given, in addition to all that sort of information wanted by Lawyers in courts or in business, such as a complete Table of Stamps, Tables for Calculating Interest, Time Tables at Common Law, Equity, and Bankruptcy; Interest Tables, Regal Table, and such like facts and figures. This is printed in a small pocket volume, bound in cloth, and sold for sixpence.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

E. R. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 39, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, Covent Garden.—S. A. BACON begs respectfully to inform his Friends, Professional Gentlemen, their Families, and the Public, that he has taken the above HOTEL, which from its central situation and proximity to places of Business and Amusement, with spacious Sitting-rooms, quiet and airy Bed-rooms on the ground and first-floor, combined with strict attention, he trusts will command their kind support and recommendation.

N.B.—A fixed charge for Servants.

SALTER'S HOTEL, Victoria-street, Holborn-bridge, London.—J. W. SALTER begs to acquaint the Profession and Families visiting Town, that he has been making considerable alterations and improvements in his Hotel; and he has also added several front Sitting-rooms, with quiet Bed-rooms attached (for the use of Families), the whole of which he has newly furnished, and will be found to possess every comfort. All charges are most moderate, and the strictest attention paid to cleanliness. A fixed moderate charge for Servants. A Night Porter in constant attendance.

RADLEY'S FAMILY HOTEL, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS.

HENRY HOLT, successor to the late W. Radley, begs to inform Gentlemen of the Legal and Clerical Professions, that this Establishment affords every desirable accommodation to Families and Gentlemen. It is centrally situated, and in the immediate vicinity of the Law Courts, &c.

French and German spoken. A fixed Charge for Servants.

THE CASTLE TAVERN and CHOP HOUSE (opposite Southampton Buildings), Holborn: Proprietor, T. W. WINTER.—T. W. W. begs to inform Legal and other Gentlemen having business in the vicinity of the above central and well-known House, that he has opened a new Chop and Steak Room, very light and commodious, and trusts by civility, quality of articles, and moderate charges to ensure a continuance of the patronage so kindly bestowed on him. Hot Joints every day from two till three o'clock. Chops, Steaks, Vegetables, &c. at all hours. A spacious and well-ventilated Smoking Room. The House is conveniently situated in the very centre of London (upwards of 1200 omnibuses passing the door daily), and although in one of the largest thoroughfares, is from its peculiar position entirely protected from that noise and turmoil so annoying to persons wishing to discuss any little matter over a quiet cigar. Also a first-rate Billiard Room, with an Ante-room adjoining, fitted up with every convenience. Wines and Spirits of the very best quality, at moderate prices; lists of which are placed in each room for the convenience of those gentlemen who may favour T. W. W. with their patronage. Private Sitting Rooms. Bed and Breakfast, 2s. 6d.

GREAT EXHIBITION PRIZE MEDAL, awarded to CARTER for SADDLES and HARNESS.

CARTER'S HUNTING SADDLES combine elegance and lightness with strength and durability. They are roomy in the Seat, and bring the Rider as close as possible to his Horse. They are constructed to accord with the Anatomy of both Horse and Man. Price, complete, 6l. 14s. 6d.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest Safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"95, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Sons,

"Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, coordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe heat it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUZENS and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

LEEDS BOROUGH SESSIONS.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the NEXT GENERAL QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE FOR THE BOROUGH OF LEEDS, in the County of York, will be holden before THOMAS FLOWER ELLIS, Esq., Recorder of the said Borough, at the COURT HOUSE, in Leeds aforesaid, on FRIDAY, the 4th day of MARCH next, at Nine of the clock in the Forenoon; at which time and place all Persons summoned as GRAND JURORS; and also all Prosecutors, Witnesses, Persons bound by Recognizances, Police Officers, and Constables, are required to attend.
And Notice is hereby also given, that all Persons summoned to the said Court of Quarter Sessions as PETTY JURORS, are required to give their attendance at the place aforesaid, at Half-past Nine of the clock in the forenoon of the said 4th day of March next.
And Notice is hereby also given, that all Appeals will be tried and all Proceedings under the Highway Acts will be heard at the opening of the Court, on the Second Day of the said Sessions, and that the List of such Appeals will be called over by the Clerk of the Peace, at Half-past Nine of the clock in the Forenoon of the said Second Day; and that all Appeals in which the Parties shall not then appear, by themselves or Counsel, will be struck out. And that all such Appeals and Proceedings as aforesaid as shall not be disposed of on the Second Day of the said Sessions will be taken as soon as the Criminal Business of the said Sessions shall be concluded.
And Notice is hereby also given, that all Appeals to be entered for Trial at the said Sessions must be entered with the Clerk of the Peace before the opening of the Court on the Second Day of the said Sessions, unless the contrary shall be allowed by the Court on motion by Counsel, or in case of absence of Counsel by Attorney, on special grounds stated and duly verified.
And Notice is hereby also given, that all Appellants against Orders of Removal to which the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31, is applicable, are required at the time of entering the Appeal with the Clerk of the Peace to file with him a Copy of the Order of Removal, of the Notice of Chargeability, of the Statement of the Grounds of Removal, and of the Grounds of Appeal. By Order,
JAMES RICHARDSON, Clerk of the Peace for the said Borough of Leeds.

SUPERIOR PIANOFORTES.—"We lately experienced much pleasure in trying some of the Pianofortes manufactured by the House of COCKS and CO. New Burlington-street, London. They are chiefly Cottages and Piccolos. These Pianos are remarkable for the beauty and equality of their tone, the facility of their touch, and their extremely elegant exterior. They have, moreover, an appearance of durability which is wholly out of the question in the cheap markets, where the Public are persuaded into purchasing a pretty-looking Instrument at a low rate, which, at the expiration of six months, is found to be worthless. Not that the Instruments of Messrs. E. Cocks are dear—on the contrary, they are as cheap as the valueless Instruments just mentioned; but they have the advantage of being firmly and compactly made of the best (and of the best seasoned) Materials, and of keeping well in Tune for an unusual length of time."—Vide Musical World.
A List of Prices, with Drawings, gratis and postage free; ditto. Mode of keeping Pianofortes in Tune.—N.B. Pianos for Sale or Hire on very moderate Terms.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The People and the Parish; The Common Law and its Breakers. By J. TOULMIN SMITH, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Stevens and Norton.

THIS tract has been prepared for publication by Mr. TOULMIN SMITH, for the purpose of calling public attention to the nature and consequences of the "Churchwardens Election Bill," which he ably contends is an attack by ecclesiastics upon the common-law rights and liberties of the people, in parishes and other municipal institutions, as recognised and guaranteed by the common law of England.

With regard to the statements of the learned author, very different opinions will be formed; but he has done good service to the public in submitting to its consideration an important measure, in which all persons are deeply interested, and which ought not to be passed through Parliament sub silentio, and without its being freely and fully discussed by the laity.

Criminal Process; or, a View of the Proceedings taken in Criminal Prosecutions, &c. By HENRY DEARSLEY, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. London: Benning.

THIS little book is designed to teach the law student the elements of the practice of the criminal law—not what is crime, but how crime is prosecuted and punished; tracing the whole proceeding from the arrest of the criminal to his trial, including the Examination before Magistrates, Habeas Corpus, the Criminal Courts, Principals and Accessories, Indictments, Arraignment, Pleadings, Jury, the Trial, the Evidence, the Verdict and the Judgment, and afterwards of the Writ of Error and the Criminal Appeal. It is a very compact, clear, and correct description of the criminal law in action, and should be read by the student as the best introduction to that necessary branch of legal knowledge.

The Law Magazine, No. 98. London: Butterworths.

THIS is the Legal Quarterly, and as such represents what may be termed the literature of the law. It does not consist of heavy and dry treatises on practice, but it handles all those topics connected with the progress of the law, upon which every Lawyer would desire to be well informed. Thus we have in this number very able papers on Finance, on Marine Insurance, on Law Reform and its Prospects, on Commissions, Commissioners and the Bar, on the Peculiarities of Maritime Liens, and on the Ecclesiastical Courts now awaiting their dissolution. We see that in this The Law Magazine fully adopts the views we have here asserted, namely, that all civil jurisdiction should be taken from these Courts, which, with a reform in their organization to adapt them to the lessened business, should be strictly limited to their proper function of Ecclesiastical Courts; i. e. their jurisdiction over the Church of England and its Clergy. The Report of the Committee on Juvenile Criminals is reviewed with much care; and "The Common Law Procedure Act," and the decisions upon it, are again examined. We observe that the Quarterly Reviewer says of Mr. Kerr's second edition of the Procedure Act, "We have now carefully examined all the editions of this important statute, and we are bound to give the palm to Mr. Kerr"

PILLS.

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA PILLS, for purifying the blood, scurvy, and all low states of system, skin diseases, nervous complaints, gout, rheumatic gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite, stomachic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourists, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold: 1*st* by. Because no solution of Sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared, can resist an inherent fermentation, which it will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless; 2*ndly* "Two Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon;" 3*rdly*. They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2*s.* 9*d.* box is equal to a 1*l.* bottle of Sarsaparilla. Sold by most respectable medicine vendors in the Kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor HENRY RIDES, 10, Hungerford-street, Strand, in boxes at 1*s.* 1½*d.*, 2*s.* 9*d.*, 4*s.* 6*d.*, 11*s.* and 22*s.* A considerable saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence, a 2*s.* 9*d.* contains three 1*s.* 1½*d.* boxes, a 4*s.* 6*d.* contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time and really cured by a newly-discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The Proprietor of Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon mixing a very old and well-tried Gout Pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," for the cure of gout and rheumatism and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as the dolourcux, face-ache, lumbago, and pains in the loins and joints; and the benefit from such a combination of these two prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of injuring the system. They are free from opium and mercury, and consist chiefly of pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B.—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system, not by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretions of the kidneys.

Sold in boxes at the same price as Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable vendors in the United Kingdom, and by the Sole Proprietor, HENRY RIDES, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate which is libel.

Boxes sent by post by inclosing postage stamps for the amount of box required.

"We have now carefully examined all the editions of this important statute, and we are bound to give the palm to Mr. Kerr. This second edition is a proof of his success and the truth of our judgment."—Law Magazine, February, 1853.

NOTICES OF THE FIRST EDITION.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr. Kerr's is the last edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine (November, 1852)

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

To this edition has been added a SUPPLEMENT, containing—

1. The NEW RULES of PRACTICE, of Hilary Term, 1853, with Notes and References.
2. The NEW RULES (also of Hilary Term) relative to the EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, and RE-ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE in HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest Safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"96, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

"Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expect it everything within it to be uninjured.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COPPARD and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL. The most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47A, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT

THE LADIES' CARRIAGE STEP, which was so universally admired at the Great Exhibition for its novelty, simplicity of action, and utility, having all the advantages of the inside Step, being free from dirt. This Step can be applied to any carriage already built.

DAVID DAVIES and SON have also finished for Inspection, a Double Brougham, with their Patent Wheel Plate, by which means the carriage is much shorter; also the front wheels are higher, which makes the draught easier.

To be seen at the Manufactory for Improvements on Carriages, 15, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS of FINE AUSTRALIAN and LLAMA WOOLS (6 & 7 VICT. Cap 65), for WALKING or RIDING. This is an improved Style of Coat, of a light convenient form, which admits of its being worn either over or without the ordinary Coat. It is neatly and handsomely made, care being bestowed in its construction, to impart to it that graceful and appropriate character which, since its first introduction, has so greatly recommended it to public favour. It is produced in all colours, with silk sleeve linings, at the very moderate price of 2 guineas, and, for winter wear, richly lined and quilted, 2½ and 3 guineas.—The improved WINTER GUINEA TROUSERS are also ready for selection, from a choice Variety of Patterns. In London only of H. POULSON and COMPANY, Merchant Tailors, and Sole Patentees of the Undyed Australian Wool Cloth, the best material ever invented for all Sporting, Riding, and Travelling purposes.

DINSDALE, 314, OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

Immediately opposite Hollis-street, Cavendish-square. Established 1760

KAY DINSDALE, 314, Oxford-street, Saddler and Harness Manufacturer to Her Most Excellent Majesty the Queen, His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and the Royal Family, respectfully invites the Nobility and Gentry to honour him by an inspection of a very superior Stock of

SADDLERY, HARNESS, WHIPS, HORSE CLOTHING,

And every requisite for the Stable, warranted of the best materials and workmanship. The Silver and Brass Mountings for the Harness cannot be surpassed for elegance and durability. The Ladies' Saddles have every improvement to combine to the comfort of the Lady, and the Gentlemen's Saddles are such as are used by the first huntsmen in the kingdom. The prices are very moderate

314, Oxford-street, corner of Hanover-square

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example:—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all attention should be paid, aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Blued Steel with Crystals, 15s.; silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l. 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3s. Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

Address "J. C. E." care of Mr. Edward Cox, Law Stationer, &c. 103, Chancery-lane, London.

NEW REPORTS.—The very serious cost entailed upon those Members of the Legal Profession whose practice compels them to purchase authentic reports of Legal Decisions, and the heavy loss to which they are exposed at the caprice of a few individuals, has induced several Gentlemen, who have long entertained the opinion that a series of Reports comprising the decisions of all the Courts, and printed in royal octavo, would be acceptable to the Profession generally. It is therefore intended to continuously issue a series of Reports on the first day of the ensuing Easter Term; that the price shall not exceed 3*l.* 3*s.* per annum; and that the Reports shall be placed so as to form volumes under the following heads; and be titled as "Chancery Reports," "Common Law Reports," "Bankruptcy and Insolvency Reports," "Ecclesiastical Reports." The Promoters are confident that much will be required at their hands in order to render the proposed Reports acceptable to their Professional brethren. They invite those Gentlemen who are desirous of rendering their services as Reporters to make their wishes known, by addressing a note to "The Promoters of the New Reports," to the care of Messrs. Benning and Co. Fleet-street. Such communications will be deemed strictly confidential; at the same time the Promoters reserve the right to elect such Gentlemen as either from previous experience or known talent may, in their opinion, be best qualified to discharge their several duties.
17th February, 1853.

LAW.—GREAT SAVING.—Briefs and Attendances copied at 2*d.* per sheet; draft copies, 1*d.* per folio; Deeds and Wills length copies, 1*d.* per folio. Deeds abstracted at 1*d.* 6*d.* per sheet; Abstracts, 2*d.*; Pedigrees, 1*s.* 6*d.*; which includes making up briefs, &c.

HANDEL'S MESSIAH.—The PEOPLE'S EDITION, arranged by JOHN BISHOP, price 8*s.* 6*d.*—Her Majesty's Publishers, Messrs. ROBERT COCKS and CO. have just issued the most copious Edition that has yet appeared of this immortal Work. It is superbly printed on extra fine stout Paper, in Imperial 8vo. and contains Two Hundred and Fifty-seven Pages. A Price has been named incredibly low, with a view of putting within the reach of the Members of the Popular Choral Societies an edition of the greatest of Handel's Compositions, which, while it is worthy of the Library or Music Rooms of the wealthiest persons, also courts the attention of the humbler admirers of the great author, offering to the world a copy of the Musical Text-Carver adapted for all spheres, and fitted for all time.—Vide The Globe, Feb. 14.

HAMILTON'S PRACTICAL MINIATURE COURSE of HARMONY and COMPOSITION.—Catechism of Harmony and Thorough Base, 16th Edition, 2*s.*—Key to ditto, 1*s.* 6*d.*—Catechism of Counterpoint, Melody and Composition, 3rd Edition, 2*s.*—Catechism of Double Counterpoint and Fugue, 2nd Edition, 2*s.*—Catechism on Musical Ideas, 2*s.*—Catechism on the Art of Writing for an Orchestra, 2nd Edition, enlarged, 3*s.*
"It is impossible to over-rate the value of these remarkable works, whether considered as guides to the student, or as aids to the teacher in his arduous duties. They contain more practically useful information than can be purchased in any other shape for ten times the sum charged for them."

THREE NEW VOCAL DUETS: words by the Author of "What are the wild waves saying?" music by Sir HENRY R. BISHOP:—"The Last Night," (sung by the Misses Jolly with ritornato applause,) price 3*s.* 6*d.*: "Where are the plains of Zion," (sung by Miss Jolly and the Author,) price 2*s.* 6*d.*: "The Star of Freedom," sung by Mrs. Alexander Newton and Miss Fanny Huddart, also by the Misses Jolly,) price 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE DAILY CONTINENTAL PARCELS EXPRESS AGENCY—the Proprietors of which are the sole Correspondents of the ROYAL PRUSSIAN POST OFFICE, the BELGIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAY, and Agents for the ADMIRALTY MAIL PACKETS to OSTEND—conveys to and from all parts of the Continent (in addition to samples of all kinds), DEEDS, LAW PAPERS, PATENTS, &c., safely, rapidly, and as regularly as the Mails which they travel with by special arrangement.
Rates fixed and moderate, a table of which, with every other information, may be had at the Offices, 36, Gracechurch-street, and 34, Regent's-circus.

MR. MURRAY, late of the Taxing Masters' Office, Temple-lane, begs to OFFER HIS SERVICES to Solicitors in making out and taxing Bills of Costs. Great losses are, Mr. Murray is convinced, sustained by the Profession from the imperfect attention which those matters receive; and he believes that his long and extensive experience would render his assistance valuable where books have been irregularly kept, errors allowed to accumulate, or where, from the pressure of other matters, or other causes, this important branch of business has been neglected.
No. 4, Temple-lane.

BOOK-KEEPING.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.—A FOURTH EDITION of this Work, as applicable to Solicitors, is now ready, and may be had of the Author, at his offices, 6, Brownlow-street, Holborn, price 3*s.* The system is equally applicable to merchants, tradesmen, landowners, and others, and will be found most efficacious and simple.

On the 1st March will be published, price 6*s.* 6*d.* neatly bound,
THE LAW LIST for 1853, containing the authorised Lists of Certificated Attorneys, &c. &c. &c. for 1853. By WILLIAM POWELL, of the Inland Revenue Office, Registrar of Certificates.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW-ROAD, LONDON.—THE HYGEIAN SYSTEM OF MEDICINE.—Morison's Pills, the Vegetable Universal Medicine, is a certain cure for any curable disease, which fact is proved by the experience of all the Members of the British College of Health.

CAUTION.—No chemist or druggist is authorised to sell the medicine.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

HEAL and SON'S EIDER DOWN QUILTS are made in three varieties—the BORDERED QUILT, the PLAIN QUILT, and the DUVET. The Bordered Quilt is in the usual form of bed quilts, and is a most elegant and luxurious article. The Plain Quilt is smaller, and is useful as an extra covering on the bed, or as a wrapper in the carriage or on the couch. The Duvet is a loose case filled with Eider Down, as is general use on the continent.—Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free by post on application at HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road.

HATS for INDIA.—ELWOOD'S PATENT AIR-CHAMBER HATS are the best adapted for all tropical climates, being manufactured on a new and scientific principle, by which the head of the wearer is thoroughly protected from the heat of the sun, and perfect ventilation and coolness obtained. This principle is applicable to all kinds of hats, helmets, chakos, hunting-caps, &c. To be obtained of the following old-established hatters:—Ashmead and Tyler, 7, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; Barber, 13, Royal Exchange; Bailey, 48, Fleet-street; Beardmore, 60, New Bond-street; Briggs, 98, Gracechurch-street; Chatting, 5, Newgate-street; Cole, 23, Bridge-street, Westminster; Donaldson, 23, Warwick-street, Regent-street; Jupp, 229, Regent-street; Lee, 1, Fall-mall; Lock, 6, St. James's-street; Melton, 194, Regent-street; Prosdy, 2, Fleet-street; Theridder, 74, Fleet-street; Reynolds, 136, Strand; Reader and Allanders, Liverpool; or wholesale of the Manufacturers, J. ELLWOOD and SONS, Great Charlotte-street, Blackfriars, London.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example.—When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Pantoscopes" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Blued Steel with Crystals, 18s.; Silver ditto, 1l.; Gold ditto, 2l 2s.; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 2s. Best post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Optician to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London. Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

SCARLETT'S PORTABLE MOCK TURTLE SOUP.—SCARLETT and SON respectfully inform the Public in general that the MOCK TURTLE made by them, of acknowledged "delicious" quality and flavour, is by many pronounced equal to the real.

Forwarded to all parts of the country, free of package, on the receipt of a post-office order or stamps. 3s. 6d. per quart.

36, King William-street, London-bridge

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are not sold by any haiers or drapers, and can therefore be obtained only at 38, Poultry. Gentlemen in the country or abroad, ordering through their agents, are requested to observe on the interior of the collar-band the stamp, "FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 38, Poultry," without which none are genuine. They are made in two qualities: first quality, 40s. the half-dozen; second quality, 30s. the half-dozen. Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made are solicited to inspect these, the most unique and only perfectly-fitting shirts. Coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 37s. the half-dozen. List of prices and directions for measurement post free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free on receipt of six stamps.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry, London (late 185, Strand.)

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets Supporters and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—in reluctancy of phlegm—in incipient consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication) they are of unerring efficacy. In asthma, and in winter cough, they have never been known to fail.

Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the Kingdom.

IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

"St. Paul's Cathedral, 30th Nov., 1849.

"Sir,—I have much pleasure in recommending your Lozenges to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have afforded me relief on several occasions when scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.

"I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

"To Mr. Keating." "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-Choral."

Now ready,

THE SECOND EDITION of the COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with Practical Notes, illustrated by Precedents of Pleadings and Forms of Affidavits, Notices, &c. By JAMES MACCOLL KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

"We have now carefully examined all the additions of this important statute, and we are bound to give the palm to Mr. Kerr. This recent edition is a proof of his success and the truth of our judgment."—Law Magazine, February, 1853.

NOTICES OF THE FIRST EDITION.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine (November, 1852).

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

To this edition has been added a SUPPLEMENT, containing—

1. The NEW RULES of PRACTICE, of Hilary Term, 1853, with Notes and References.
2. The NEW RULES (also of Hilary Term) relative to the EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, and RE-ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS.
3. The NEW DIRECTIONS to the TAXING-MASTERS, and the NEW SCALE of COSTS, also of Hilary Term, 1853.

Just published,

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849 (in continuation of the Series of "Practical Statutes.") The design of this work is to give all the statutes and parts of statutes of any practical utility, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction, thus presenting the very law, as it is—the words of the statute with the construction put upon them by the Judges. It omits all Scotch, Irish, Colonial, Revenue, and Repealed Statutes, so that the whole law is contained in a small compact volume, that may be conveniently carried in the bag or pocket. Edited by C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. The following are the statutes contained in this volume, with Notes of all the Cases decided on them:

Board of Inland Revenue Act.	Protection of Women Act.
Commons Inclosure Act.	House of Lords Costs Taxation Act.
Overseers (Cities and Boroughs) Act.	Stamp, &c. Allowances Act.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable vivacity; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume as honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by these protracted studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's, is of great importance in the present state of the profession. In its pleasantly written pages the young student will find reasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is equally useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Britannia.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marshal by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to those who actually stand in need of the advice which it contains; there is much that cannot fail to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the natural dryness of the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely-written treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

RADLEY'S FAMILY HOTEL, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS.

HENRY HOLT, successor to the late W. Radley, begs to inform Gentlemen of the Legal and Clerical Professions, that this Establishment affords every desirable accommodation to Families and Gentlemen. It is centrally situated, and in the immediate vicinity of the Law Courts, &c.

French and German spoken. A fixed Charge for Servants.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, Covent Garden.—S. A. BACON begs respectfully to inform his Friends, Professional Gentlemen, their Families, and the Public, that he has taken the above HOTEL, which from its central situation and proximity to places of Business and Amusement, with spacious Sitting-rooms, quiet and airy Bed-rooms on the ground and first-floor, combined with strict attention, he trusts will command their kind support and recommendation.

N.B.—A fixed charge for Servants.

SALTER'S HOTEL, Victoria-street, Holborn-bridge, London.—J. W. SALTER begs to acquaint the Profession and Families visiting Town, that he has been making considerable alterations and improvements in his Hotel; and he has also added several front sitting-rooms, with quiet Bed-rooms attached (for the use of Families), the whole of which he has newly furnished, and will be found to possess every comfort. All charges are most moderate, and the strictest attention paid to cleanliness. A fixed moderate charge for Servants. A Night Porter in constant attendance.

THE CASTLE TAVERN and CHOP HOUSE (opposite Southampton Buildings), Holborn: Proprietor, T. W. WINTER.—T. W. W. begs to inform Legal and other Gentlemen having business in the vicinity of the above central and well-known House, that he has opened a new Chop and Steak Room, very light and commodious, and trusts by civility, quality of articles, and moderate charges to ensure a continuance of the patronage so kindly bestowed on him. Hot Joints every day from two till three o'clock. Chops, Steaks, Vegetables, &c. at all hours. A spacious and well-ventilated Smoking Room. The House is conveniently situated in the very centre of London (upwards of 1200 omnibuses passing the door daily), and although in one of the largest thoroughfares, is from its peculiar position entirely protected from that noise and turmoil so annoying to persons wishing to discuss any little matter over a quiet cigar. Also a first-rate Billiard Room, with an Ante-room adjoining, fitted up with every convenience. Wines and Spirits of the very best quality, at moderate prices; lists of which are placed in each room for the convenience of those gentlemen who may favour T. W. W with their patronage. Private Sitting Rooms. Bed and Breakfast, 2*s.* 6*d.*

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN HAYDON-SQUARE.—MILNER'S HOLDFAST SAFES—the strongest Safeguards extant against Fire, Robbery, or Violence—of all sizes, at the Depot, 47*a*, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY.

"95, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

"Gentlemen,—At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 18th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved untingured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUPER and POTTER."

MILNER'S PHŒNIX SAFE WORKS, LIVERPOOL, the most extensive and complete in the world. The Safe alluded to above was eleven days and nights in the ruins, and may now be seen at the LONDON DEPOT, 47*a*, MOORGATE-STREET, CITY, near the Bank of England.

THE "EXTRAORDINARY" REDUCTION

IN THE

PRICES OF LAW REPORTS, TREATISES, &c.

BEFORE this Advertisement is seen by the readers of the LAW TIMES, the Profession will have received a Circular issued by three of the Law Publishers, in which many of the Reports and a large number of Text Books are reduced to prices unprecedented "in the annals of the Law publishing business." Of the policy of thus reducing the value of every Gentleman's Library to mere waste paper, or the honesty of the transaction on the part of those who have already received the exorbitant price of One Shilling per Sheet for most of the Reports in each Illustrious, the Profession are fully capable of judging; but in order to prevent any misapprehension on the subject, the undermentioned Booksellers respectfully announce that they are fully prepared to supply any of the books WHICH ARE TO BE OBTAINED at the same, or, in some instances, at considerably lower, prices:—

NEW AND SECOND-HAND LAW BOOKSELLERS.

LAW REPORTS: PROPOSED NEW SERIES.

The High Prices at which the Reports of our Legal Proceedings have been published has long been a crying evil among the Profession, but they were to some extent reconciled to it on the ground that Law Reports at all times produced a higher price in the market than any other description of second-hand books, and for many years this was strictly true, as it was only the second-hand copies which came into the market by the death or retirement of their previous owners that could be obtained at reduced prices, and they were usually purchased and sold, not by the Law Publishers, but by Booksellers who resold them to the Profession at reasonable prices, the Publishers being satisfied with the amounts generally received at the time of the Publication of each part of the Reports, and the occasional sale at full price of any of the remaining copies. They have now, however, by offering the remainder of each of these works (although it is well known that some of them they have not got) at little more than waste paper prices, at one fell swoop reduced every Law Library in the kingdom to at least one fourth of its previous value. Under these circumstances, and also in consequence of the very high prices (one shilling per sheet and upwards) at which the Reports are now published, the undermentioned booksellers, at the request of numerous Gentlemen in the Profession, are making arrangements for publishing all the decided cases under the title of the "EQUITY and COMMON LAW REPORTS," which it is intended to have reported by Gentlemen of standing at the Bar, printed the same size and equally well as, but with fuller pages than, the present Reports, at one-half the cost, and within a reasonable period after the decisions are pronounced, and as it is intended only to print as nearly as possible the number subscribed for, and by that means insure the purchasers against the possibility of a large loss on resale, Gentlemen desirous of participating in the advantages thus to be obtained are requested to communicate their intention forthwith to one of the undermentioned Booksellers, who have every reason to expect the sanction of all the Judges to the undertaking, which will be commenced at the beginning of next Easter Term.

Should the above scheme meet with the support which is confidently expected, the Publishers will endeavour, as opportunities offer, to bring out Treatises on the most useful legal subjects, not only at reduced prices, but specially giving the Law as it stands at the time of publication. At present they offer the following Works, viz:—

PHILLIPPS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE, by the Right Hon. S. M. PHILLIPPS and T. J. ARNOLD, Esq., 2 vols. royal 8vo. 1852, published at 2*l.* 16*s.*—for half-price.

"While this Work has been going through the press very important alterations and, as most will acknowledge, great improvements in the Law of Evidence have been effected by statutes passed in the session of 1851."—Vide Introductory chap.

Also,

CRABB'S DIGEST AND INDEX OF THE STATUTES, 4 vols. royal 8vo 1844–7, published at 6*l.* 6*s.*—for 35*s.*

Communications addressed to W. H. BOND, 8, Bell-yard, DAVIS and AMER, 57, Carey-street, A. ROBERTSON, 30, Chancery-lane; or WILDY and SONS, Lincoln's-inn-gateway, Law Booksellers, will receive prompt attention.

N.B.—Either of whom will supply any Books that may be ordered at the Lowest Prices for which they can be obtained.

THE UNDERMENTIONED BOOKSELLERS beg to submit the following List to the Profession, as a specimen of the Reductions they are disposed to make in the prices of their stock, and have carefully avoided inserting books which they cannot supply.—

OPINION OF THE PRESS.

"The work evinces considerable ability; but the simplicity with which the author conveys his advice, and the earnest and dignified tone which pervades it throughout, constitute its main attractions."—The Globe.

"A remarkable production is here commenced, which, if completed with any ability compatible to that evinced by the initial volume, will at once assume an honourable position as a standard authority in literature. The author has admirably qualified himself for the composition of the work by those profound studies and laborious researches, and various and extended practice, which could alone enable him to pronounce upon the subject-matter in hand with any degree of judgment."—The Sun.

"Such a work as our author's, is of great importance in the present state of the profession. In its pleasingly written pages the young student will find seasonable advice, the result of long experience, and valuable instruction, rendered doubly effective by apt illustration. It is highly useful to the youth, the student, and the barrister."—The Era.

"The treatise is just what it professes to be, and what it should be. It is full of sound advice for the guidance of a man who intends to make the bar his profession. The information presented to the student is marked by strong common sense, and none of it is second-hand. Mr. Cox writes from experience."—The Atlas.

"It must not be supposed that the value of the volume is confined to young [illegible] in need of the advice which it contains; there is much [illegible] it to interest the ordinary reader, especially since the [illegible] the subject is abundantly relieved by the lively and often humorous style in which it is treated."—The John Bull.

"A finely conceived treatise."—Weekly Dispatch.

WAREHOUSING DEPARTMENT, BAZAAR, BAKER-STREET, and KING-STREET.—Furniture, Pictures, and other Property received for Safe Keeping in this department, which has been built fire-proof, is thoroughly ventilated, and free from damp.

For terms, apply at the Office.

WANTED to PURCHASE.—HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, BOOKS, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, &c. in large or small quantities, for which the full value will be given (in Town or Country.) Valuations for administration made free of charge where the effects are purchased.

Address, post paid, to Mr. E. THOMAS, 30, Leicester-square.

BEDDING.—ECONOMY, DURABILITY and COMFORT.—The GERMAN SPRING and FRENCH MATTRESSES make the most elastic and softest bed. A price list of every description of bedding sent free. Bedsteads—Arabian, four-post, French, and other styles, in birch, mahogany, &c.; patent iron and brass bedsteads on the most improved principles. Cribs, cots, &c.; bed-room furniture of every description. Elder-down quilts and duvets, in silk and cotton cases.

J. and S. STARK, Bedding, Bedstead, and Bedroom Furniture Manufacturers, 13, Oxford-street, London.

THE ROYAL TURKISH TOWELS.—Under the Patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and which received the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition. The Brown Linen combines the advantages of a flesh-brush with the qualities most desirable in a towel. The White Cotton is the softest Towel ever made, and absorbs moisture without the necessity of using friction. To be had of all respectable Linendrapers.

HEAL and SON'S EIDER DOWN QUILTS are made in three varieties—the BORDERED QUILT, the PLAIN QUILT, and the DUVET. The Bordered Quilt is in the usual form of bed quilts, and is a most elegant and luxurious article. The Plain Quilt is smaller, and is useful as an extra covering on the bed, or as a wrapper in the carriage or on the couch. The Duvet is a loose case filled with Eider Down, as in general use on the continent. Lists of Prices and Sizes sent free by post on application at HEAL and SON'S Bedding Factory, 196, Tottenham-court-road.

SCARLETT'S PORTABLE MOCK TURTLE SOUP.—SCARLETT and SON respectfully inform the Public in general that the MOCK TURTLE made by them, of acknowledged "delicious" quality and flavour, is by many pronounced equal to the real.

Forwarded to all parts of the country, free of package, on the receipt of a post-office order or stamps. 3s. 6d. per quart.

28, King William-street, London-bridge.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite pressing power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Riding Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corset Supporters and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

Perfect Freedom from Coughs in Ten Minutes after use is insured by

DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

From Mr. Sargent, bookseller, Linton.—"Mr. Daniel Cornell, fishmonger, of this town, had for many years been suffering from asthma, and he had tried everything within his reach, but without benefit. Last winter, however, he purchased some of Dr. Locock's Wafers of me; and found more benefit before he had taken two boxes, than he had from all the other medicines he had ever taken.—J. SARGENT."

Dr. LOCOCK'S WAFERS give instant relief and a rapid cure of asthma, coughs, and all disorders of the breath and lungs. They have a most pleasant taste. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box.

Also, Dr. LOCOCK'S ANTIBILIOUS WAFERS.—A mild and gentle Aperient and Stomachic Medicine, having a most agreeable taste, and of great efficacy in regulating the functions and correcting the action of the Stomach and Liver.

Sold by all medicine venders.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable

newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 10*s.* 10*d.* sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 34 inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Invaluable newly invented preserving Spectacles, invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.

Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?—

When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is requisite than was formerly. For example.—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book.

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight.

When any of the above indications arise, all alleviation should be laid aside, a responsible and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Blued Steel with Crystals, 15*s.*; Silver ditto, 1*l.*; Gold ditto, 2*l.* 2*s.*; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3*s.* Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

THOMAS HARRIS and SON, Opticians to the Royal Family, 52, Great Russell-street, London, Caution.—Opposite the British Museum Gates. Established Seventy Years.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are not sold by any hosiers or drapers, and can therefore be obtained only at 38, Poultry. Gentlemen in the country or abroad, ordering through their agents, are requested to observe on the interior of the collar-band the stamp, "FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, 38, Poultry," without which none are genuine. They are made in two qualities: first quality, 40*s.* the half-dozen; second quality, 35*s.* the half-dozen. Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing Shirts in the very best manner in which they can be made are solicited to inspect these, the most unique and only perfectly-fitting shirts. Coloured shirts, for boating, shooting, and ordinary wear, 37*s.* the half-dozen. List of prices and instructions for measurement post free, and patterns of the new coloured shirtings free on receipt of six stamps.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW-

ROAD, LONDON.—THE HYGEIAN SYSTEM OF MEDICINE.—Morison's Pills, the Vegetable Universal Medicine, is a certain cure for any curable disease, which fact is proved by the experience of all the Members of the British College of Health.

CAUTION.—No chemist or druggist is authorised to sell the medicine.

PILLS.

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA

PILLS, for purifying the blood, purify, and all low states of system, skin diseases, nervous complaints, gout, rheumatic pains, weak nerves, loss of appetite, stomachic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourists, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold: 1stly. Because no solution of Sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared, can resist an inherent fermentation, which it will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless; 2ndly. The Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon; 3rdly. They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2*s.* 9*d.* box is equal to a 10*s.* bottle of Sarsaparilla. Sold by most respectable medicine vendors in the Kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor HENRY HIDES, 10, Hungerford-street, Strand, in boxes at 1*s.* 1½*d.*, 2*s.* 9*d.*, 4*s.* 6*d.*, 11*s.* and 22*s.* A considerable saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence a 2*s.* 9*d.* contains three 1*s.* 1½*d.* boxes, and a 4*s.* 6*d.* contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time and really cured by a newly-discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The Proprietor of Dr King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon mixing a very old and well-tried Gout Pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years with the said "Dr King's Sarsaparilla Pills," for the cure of gout and rheumatism and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as sic-dolorosa, face-ache, lumbago, and pains in the loins and joints; and the benefit from such a combination of these two prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of injuring the system. They are free from opium and mercury, and consist chiefly of pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B.—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system, not by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretion of the kidneys.

Sold in boxes at the same price as Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable vendors in the United Kingdom, and by the Sole Proprietor, HENRY HIDES, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate, which is libel.

Boxes sent by post by inclosing postage stamps for the amount of box required.

IN THE PRICES OF LAW REPORTS & TREATISES.

THE Profession have received a Circular, issued by Three of the Law Publishers, in which many of the Reports, and a large number of Text Books are reduced to prices unprecedented "in the annals of the Law publishing business." Of the policy of this, the value of every Gentleman's Library to mere waste paper, or the honesty of the transaction on the part of those who have already received the price of One Shilling per Sheet for most of the Reports in such libraries, the Profession are fully capable of judging; but in order to prevent any misrepresentation on the subject, the undermentioned Booksellers respectfully announce that they are fully prepared to supply any of the books WHICH ARE TO BE OBTAINED of the same, or, in some instances, at considerably lower, prices:—

London, February 1853

LAW REPORTS: PROPOSED NEW SERIES.

The High Prices at which the Reports of our Legal Proceedings have been published has long been a crying evil among the Profession, but they were to some extent reconciled to it on the ground that Law Reports at all times produced a higher price in the market than any other description of second-hand books; and for many years this was strictly true, as it was only the second-hand copies which came into the market by the death or retirement of their previous owners that could be obtained at reduced prices, and they were usually purchased and sold, not by the Law Publishers, but by Booksellers who resold them to the Profession at reasonable prices, the Publishers being satisfied with the amounts generally received at the time of the Publication of each part of the Reports and the occasional sale at full price of any of the remaining copies. They have now, however, by offering the remainder of each of these works (although it is well known that some of them they have not got at little more than waste paper prices, at one fell swoop reduced every Law Library in the kingdom to at least one fourth of its previous value. Under these circumstances, and also in consequence of the very high prices (one shilling per sheet and upwards) at which the Reports are now published, the undermentioned booksellers, at the request of numerous Gentlemen in the Profession, are making arrangements for publishing all the decided cases under the title of the "EQUITY and COMMON LAW REPORTS," which it is intended to have reported by Gentlemen of standing at the Bar, printed the same size and equally well as, but with fuller pages than, the present Reports, at one-half the cost, and within a reasonable period after the decisions are pronounced; and as it is intended only to print as nearly as possible the number subscribed for, and by that means insure the purchasers against the possibility of a large loss on resale, Gentlemen desirous of participating in the advantages to be obtained are requested to communicate their intention forthwith to one of the undermentioned Booksellers, who have every reason to expect the sanction of all the Judges to the undertaking, which will be commenced at the beginning of next Easter Term.

Should the above scheme meet with the support which is confidently expected, the Publishers will endeavour as opportunities offer to bring out Treatises on the most useful legal subjects not only at reduced prices, but actually giving the Law as it stands at the time of publication. At present they offer the following Works, viz.—

PHILLIPPS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE, by the Right Hon S M PHILLIPPS and T J ARNOLD, Esqs, 2 vols royal 8vo 1852, published at 2l 16s—for half price.

"This work is considered an able Treatise on the old Law of Evidence—but only notices the VERY IMPORTANT ALTERATIONS effected by the Statutes passed in 1851, in a chapter of Sixteen pages, written after the work had gone through the press."

Also,

CRABB'S DIGEST AND INDEX OF THE STATUTES, 4 vols royal 8vo 1844-7, published at 6l 6s—for 35s.

Communications addressed to W H BOND, 8 Bell-yard, DAVIS and AMER 57, Carey-street, or WILDY and SONS Lincoln's-inn gateway Law Booksellers, will receive prompt attention. N.B.—Either of whom will supply any Books that may be ordered at the Lowest Prices for which they can be obtained.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

E. R. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

THE LEGISLATOR.

CHANCERY SUITORS' FURTHER RELIEF BILL.

ABSTRACT OF LORD ST. LEONARDS' BILL.

1. THE Lord Chancellor may, where the object can be effected by transfers or entries in the books and accounts, direct that instead of an actual sale or purchase of stock the same may be considered as effected according to the Stock List of the day at the Bank of England.

2. A "Stock-Exchange Account" to be kept by the Accountant-General, for the purpose of recording all such transactions.

3. No brokerage to be charged, except where sales or purchases are actually effected. Power to Lord Chancellor to order payment of 1-16th per cent. in respect of every transaction heretofore chargeable with brokerage, to the Suitors' Fee Fund.

4. An annual account to be kept of all moneys remaining uninvested for two years; same to be then considered as invested in Three per Cents., unless notice not to invest same from some competent party.

5. Funds, the dividends of which have not been received, for fifteen years may be transfered to the Suitors' Fee Fund Account.

6. Rights of suitors to stock or dividends transferred not to be affected, but to be satisfied out of the Suitors' Fee Fund; and, when necessary for such purposes, the Lord Chancellor may impose fees in relation to proceedings, and direct their collection by means of stamps, and alter, diminish, or abolish such new fees.

7. At expiration of every five years, investigations and transfers to be made of accounts the dividends of which have not been received for fifteen years.

8. Dividends, &c. arisen and to arise from the moneys placed out to provide for Chancery officers, to be transferred to Suitors' Fee Fund.

9. If at any time it shall appear to the Lord Chancellor that the fees on proceedings shall be sufficient to answer the charges for the time being on the Suitors' Fee Fund, and that the fees payable by suitors shall already have been reduced as far as may be deemed expedient in the due administration of justice, it shall be lawful for him by order to direct that any part, not required for the purposes aforesaid, of the dividends shall be applied in payment of the salaries of the judges of the said court, or any of them, in relief of the Consolidated Fund, charged therewith by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, s. 16, and such salaries shall thereupon cease to be payable out of the Consolidated Fund.

10. In lieu of brokerage on any transfer of stock for identifying transferor, a sum not exceeding one guinea, whatever may be the amount transferred.

11. Stamp duties now payable on powers of attorney for sums not exceeding 20*l.*, or dividends above 3*l.* and not exceeding 5*l.*, repealed, and in lieu thereof a stamp of 5*s.* on the vellum, &c.

12. Such duties to be under the management of Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

13. Lord Chancellor may direct the Accountant-General to act on powers of attorney in receipt of further moneys becoming payable.

14. Compensation allowances to officers may be applied in making good moneys improperly withheld or abstracted by parties entitled to such allowances, with interest and costs.—such order to overreach any assignment made after 10th Feb. 1853, of the same, whether voluntary or not.

15. Payments may be made out of the funds in the bank for work done and for expenses of carrying this Act into effect.

16. Orders made under this Act may be annulled, altered, or renewed.

17. "Lord Chancellor" to include "Lord Keeper" or "Lords Commissioners of Great Seal" for time being.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

FRIDAY, Feb. 25.—Lord BROUGHAM, after presenting a petition for the extension of the County Courts jurisdiction, took occasion to advert to the effect of the change in the law making the parties themselves competent witnesses, as it bore upon the conduct of inquiries before election committees. He had hoped originally a year or two ago, that this important alteration would operate to prevent bribery and corruption at elections; but he must confess that the event had disappointed that expectation, for he believed there had hardly ever been a general election in this country at which more bribery and corruption had prevailed than at the last—he might go further and say, so much had prevailed upon no former occasion. But he would fain hope still, that when the operation of the Act compelling the parties themselves to be examined before election committees came home to them by actual examination, and by the results of that examination, it would have its salutary effect in deterring from the commission of the grievous offence to which he referred. But he was bound to add that, though he had no doubt this would be its operation ultimately, if not immediately, upon the parties themselves and their immediate agents, another change in the law of evidence would be required to give complete and full effect to it—viz., the adoption of the provision contained in the new Evidence Bill which he had brought in before the late recess, and which was now on the table, compelling persons to answer questions, although the answers might tend to criminate themselves; not, of course, enabling any person to take advantage of that immediately in that proceeding, but protecting the party from the effects of his self-crimination in all proceedings afterwards, except indictment for perjury.

REGISTRATION OF ASSURANCES.

THURSDAY, March 3.— The LORD CHANCELLOR moved the second reading of the Registration of Assurances Bill, and proceeded, at much length, to explain the details of the measure, which he declared would add materially to the transferable value of land, to the amount of rent, and to the security of purchases.—Lord ST. LEONARDS followed with a still longer speech, in which he expressed the regret he felt in opposing the Bill. He was convinced, however, that the plan now proposed would add materially to the expense of transferring land, expose deeds of great value to imminent risk of being lost, and prove, in practice, a complete failure.—Lords CAMPBELL and BEAUMONT supported the Bill strongly, and it was ultimately read a second time without a division.

LAW OF EVIDENCE (SCOTLAND) BILL.

This Bill was read a third time, and passed. Lord BROUGHAM said that it gave him great satisfaction that this bill had passed their Lordships' House, and he hoped that it would soon become law. It made the Scotch Law of Evidence identical with the English law, except in one particular, wherein it was an improvement upon the law of England.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

THURSDAY, March 3.—Mr. COLLIER moved for a select committee to inquire whether the ecclesiastical courts might not be advantageously abolished, their jurisdiction over all matters not purely ecclesiastical transferred to other existing tribunals, and new courts established for the purpose of dealing speedily and effectually with matters purely ecclesiastical; and whether the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty might not be advantageously transferred to local tribunals. The hon. and learned gentleman made an able, and necessarily long, statement of the abuses of the courts under the present system, and urged the necessity of speedy legislation upon the subject, irrespective of the report of the commission, which did not seem likely to make its appearance.—Mr. HUME seconded the motion.—Mr. BETHELL was sorry to say that he was not able to dispute any portion of Mr. Collier's statement. There could be no doubt as to the necessity for reform; the question was as to the mode. And, without wishing to cause any unnecessary delay, he urged Mr. Collier to withdraw his motion until they were in possession of the report of the commission referred to, and to trust to the Government for the rest.—Sir B. HALL was satisfied with the assurance thus given, and urged the withdrawal of the motion. —Mr. M'GUIRE described the state of the ecclesiastical courts in Ireland, where they were doubly odious, and he hoped that they would be included in any measure for reform.—Dr. PHILLIMORE, on the part of himself and the profession to which he belonged, without agreeing to the abolition of the courts, expressed himself eager for their reform.—Sir A. COCKBURN hoped before long to see all the courts under one common procedure; but he was for cautious measures; and on the part of the Government asked for a short time for deliberation.—Mr. J. D. FITZGERALD, addressing himself to the Irish part of the question, wished to be informed as to the intention of the Government.—Lord PALMERSTON assured the hon. member that Ireland would not be omitted from any legislation upon the subject.—Mr. WHITESIDE and Mr. BOUVERIE contributed some observations.—Mr. COLLIER was contented to withdraw his motion, and leave the question in the hands of the Government.

THE NEW BILL ON "JEWISH DISABILITIES."—The bill of Lord John Russell, "For the relief of Her Majesty's subjects professing the Jewish religion," was issued on Thursday by order of the House of Commons. In this bill, bearing the names of Mr. Wilson Patten, Lord John Russell, and Viscount Palmerston, there are six clauses, to the effect that in the abjuration oath, when administered to Jews, the words "upon the true faith of a Christian" are to be omitted. Persons professing the Jewish religion are to make a declaration. Such persons are not to hold certain offices in the State, or in the Church, nor are they to present to benefices in right of office. Further, it is proposed to enact that Jews are not to advise in the appointment to offices in the Established Church.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES OF THE SESSION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth; 11s. half-calf; 12s. calf.

NOTE. This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d; and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press; and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1850 will contain the new Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act.	School Sites Acts Extension Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term.)	Militia Act.
Copyright Amendment Act.	Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.	County Courts Improvement Act.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.	Trustees Act Extension Act.
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.	Pharmacy Act
Stock-in-Trade Act.	Corrupt Practices at Elections.
Application of Highway Rates to Turnpike Roads Act.	Excise Summary Proceedings.
Property-Tax Continuance Act.	Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues Act.
Act for Re-assembling Parliament.	Metropolitan Sewers Act.
Wills Act Amendment Act.	Nisi Prius Officers Act.
Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages Act.	Militia Ballots Suspension Act.
Apprehension of Deserters from Foreign Ships Act.	Common Law Procedure Act.
Industrial and Provident Societies Act.	Secretary of Bankrupt's Office Abolition Act
Protestant Dissenters Act.	Commons Inclosure Acts Extension Act
Appointment of Overseers Act.	Masters in Chancery Abolition.
General Board of Health Act (No. 1 and No. 2.)	County Rates Act.
Disabilities Repeal Act.	Patent Law Amendment Act.
Passengers Act Amendment Act.	Metropolis Water Supply Act.
Differential Dues Act.	Metropolitan Burials Act.
	Improvement of the Jurisdiction of Equity Act.
	Suitors in Chancery Relief Act.

London: JOHN CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

WHEN are SPECTACLES REQUIRED?— When the eyes water, or become so much fatigued by short exercise as to be obliged to be frequently closed or relieved by viewing different objects.

When objects cannot be seen without removing them to an increased distance.

When the letters of a book appear to blend with one another.

When more light is required than was formerly. For example.—

When the candle is placed between the eye and the book

When much difficulty is found in threading a needle.

When the eyes appear as if they had a mist before them.

When black specks seem floating in the sight

When any of the above indications arise, all affectation should be laid aside, a respectable and skilful optician consulted, and a pair of "Preservers" purchased. THOMAS HARRIS and SON'S CRYSTAL SPECTACLES, if taken on the first approach of decay, will certainly retard its progress, and preserve the sight to the extreme of age.—Best Ringed Steel with Crystals, 15*s.*; Silver ditto, 1*l.*; Gold ditto, 2*l.* 2*s.*; Steel Spectacles with glasses, from 3*s.* Sent post free, and exchanged if not approved of.

"96, Minories, London, July 26, 1852.

"Messrs. Thos. Milner and Son,

"Gentlemen,—As the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 15th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, cordage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Miner's Safe were preserved uninjured. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe trial it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COUNSO and POTTER."

KENT.—Important and very extensive FREEHOLD ESTATES, comprising about 4300 acres of Land, with noble Mansion and Park, and a Rent-roll of upwards of 3500l. per annum, subject to the Life Interest of Thomas Law Hodges, Esq. now in the 77th year of his age.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK & GALSWORTHY have been favoured with instructions from the Trustees to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, London, on WEDNESDAY, the 30th day of APRIL, at TWELVE for ONE o'clock precisely, the truly valuable FREEHOLD ESTATES, situate in the Weald of Kent, and forming portions of the parishes of Benenden, Cranbrook, Sissinghurst, Hawkhurst, Rolvenden, and Marsh Lands in Newenden and Maidstone, consisting of the distinguished Mansion known as HEMPSTEAD-PARK, seated on an eminence, in a beautiful undulating park of 150 acres, studded with fine old oak and other forest timber, including a rookery, which, from its peculiar position, is one of the leading features of the district. The Mansion is situate about seven miles from the Staplehurst Station, on the South-Eastern Railway, and three from the excellent market town of Cranbrook, in the midst of some of the most beautiful scenery of Kent, and surrounded by the seats of many of the principal Families and Gentry of the County, presenting a stately appearance, in the Elizabethan style of Architecture, approached by an Avenue and two Lodge Entrances from main roads, and contains a splendid suite of Reception Rooms of noble proportions, numerous secondary and principal Bed Chambers, Servants' Apartments and Offices, Stabling and excellent Out-buildings. The Gardens are tastefully laid out in Lawns, Parterres and Shrubberies, affording a variety of beautifully shaded Walks, extending through a richly-wooded dell to a Lake. The Kitchen Gardens are well planned, and surrounded by high brick walls, in the form of a square, which are clothed with choice Fruit Trees, and have every requisite Building of Green and Hothouses, Graperies, &c. The Lands are divided into compact Farms, with all suitable Farm Buildings and Dwellings, which are of a substantial character, and in good tenantable repair, and contain in the whole upwards of 4300 Acres of excellent Arable, Hop, Grass, and Wood Land, of a light, sandy loam soil, particularly favourable for the cultivation of Wheat, Hops, and Turnips, in the occupation of a highly respectable tenantry, of long standing, at very low rents, amounting to (including the value of the mansion and manorial rights) upwards of 3500l. per annum. The Manor affords excellent Sporting, and has all the requisites for the preservation of Game to an unlimited extent. Also numerous Cottages, forming the principal part of the village of Benenden; several detached Farms, and Marsh Lands of the most valuable character, in Newenden and Maidstone. This valuable Property will be lotted in convenient lots, of which the First will include the Mansion, Park, and about 3000 Acres of Land, lying in a Ring Fence, presenting an unusual opportunity for the acquirement of a fine residential Estate, possessing great political influence in this favourite county. The remainder of the Property, comprising several very valuable Farms, and highly-productive Marsh Lands, will be lotted as detached.

Particulars, with Plans, may be obtained, on and after March 16th, of Messrs. WALKER and HARRISON, Solicitors, 3, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury; at the Auction Mart, London; at the George Inn, Cranbrook; the King's Head, Staplehurst; Bell Inn, Maidstone; and of Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY, Auctioneers and Land Surveyors, 20, Regent-street, London.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849, (in continuation of the Series of "Practical Statutes.") The design of this work is to give all the statutes and parts of statutes of practical utility, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction, thus presenting the very law, as it is—the words of the statute with the construction put upon them by the Judges. It omits all obsolete, Irish, Colonial, Revenue, and Repealed Statutes, so that the whole law is contained in a small octavo volume, that may be conveniently carried in the bag or pocket. Edited by C. J. S. MERTHEIM, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. The following are the statutes contained in this volume, with Notes of all the Cases decided on them.

Board of Inland Revenue Act.	Protection of Women Act.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Outfitters, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that a new marking Inked preparation has for some time past been improperly upon the public by a Firm of the trade, and other apparatus made in imitation of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller or stationer any part of it to prevent the manufacture of the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and I also sue any to myself.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

A Practical Treatise on the Law of Evidence. By THOMAS STARKIE, Esq., Q. C. Fourth Edition, by GEORGE MORLEY DOWDESWELL, and JOHN GEORGE MALCOLM, Esqrs. Barristers-at-Law. London: Stevens and Norton.

WHEN we first made acquaintance with Starkie on Evidence, it consisted of four large volumes, and cost us several pounds. It has now attained to the honour of a fourth edition, and it is reduced to a single volume of no inordinate bulk, thus reversing the process by which successive editions of law books are usually swollen from dwarfs to giants.

The cause, however, of this decline in bulk is not altogether to be attributed to editorial conscience or publishing calculations; it has been the necessary consequence of the changes in the law of evidence, which have swept away whole chapters from the treatises, and weeks of labour from the student. Indeed, to such simplicity has that law been reduced that the only marvel is how near a thousand large pages could be filled with it. We think that the able editors of this new edition might have carried their excisions considerably further, and reduced the bulk of the volume by 250 pages at least. Every practitioner knows the value of portability in all books of practice, but more especially is it desired in a treatise on evidence which is to be used in courts, and therefore to be carried about in boxes and bags.

This, however, is merely a matter of convenience, and does not affect the question with which alone we are concerned—the merits of the work as a law book. These are already established by the judgment of the Profession, which has declared its approval in the most emphatic manner, by a call for four editions. Every reader knows Starkie by name, and many, probably, have proved its value by repeated reference to it. We need not say that a new edition is necessary even to those who possess the former one, for such have been the changes in the law that it will not be safe to use a book that does not contain them. Messrs. Dowdeswell and Malcolm have discharged well their task of adapting the treatise of the author to the changed state of the law. They have brought to their work learning, diligence, and care, and produced a book which must continue to be, as it has been so long esteemed, the authority with the Lawyer, and the text-book of the Student.

The Law Digest; a General Index to all the Law decided and enacted during the Half-year ending December, 1853. By EDWARD WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs. Barristers-at-Law. Part XVI. London: Crockford.

THIS digest has some peculiar features. It was designed to supply to the Practitioner a sort of index to all the law of the half-year, so arranged that he might find in a moment, amid the greatest hurry of an office or a court, what is the latest law decided by the courts, or enacted by Parliament, on any subject on which he may be seeking information, and with certainty that no case could escape his notice and thus give an advantage to a better-informed opponent. It differs from other digests in this; that it contains references to all the reports, every other digest being only partial in its selections, and therefore not to be relied upon as giving all the law; it adds the statutes and new rules and orders, and it appears half yearly, which is a convenient interval to save the practitioner the perplexity and trouble of too frequent references, which would be no better than referring to so many indexes to the reports, and at the same time places in his hands a sort of general index to the whole law sufficiently often for any purpose of practice. Its extensive use by the Profession is the best proof that it has supplied the information they want in the manner most convenient to them, for it has now been published regularly for eight years.

Tudor's Chancery Statutes and Orders. Crockford. Mr. Tudor has rendered this work much more useful by the addition of all the Orders of the Court issued since its publication, of some Forms, and also of an Appendix, containing notes of all the decisions on the Statutes and Orders up to the present time, arranged under the different sections, so as to render them very convenient of reference for the practitioner.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

SPRING ASSIZES.

HOME CIRCUIT.—Maidstone, March 6.—The gaol calendar is heavy, there being more than a hundred prisoners for trial. On the civil side nineteen causes are entered, six of which are special jury cases.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.—Derby, March 9.—The cause list contains an entry of four causes only, but the calendar is a heavy one. The number of persons charged is fifty-two, including Thomas Morgan, who was committed in July last upon a charge of bribery at the late election for this borough. Among the other offences charged there is one case of murder, one of manslaughter, one of rape, one of assault with intent, one of administering noxious things with intent to procure abortion, three cases of an abominable nature, two of violent assault, one of arson, four of burglary, one of forgery, one of uttering counterfeit coin, one of stealing post letters, and one of perjury. The remainder are chiefly cases of larceny.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.—Worcester, March 9.—The cause list contains an entry of six causes, of which three are marked as special juries. The calendar contains the names of thirty-six prisoners, of whom two stand charged with murder, two with manslaughter, one with cutting and wounding, five with robbery, one with shooting with intent to murder, one with burglary, one with bigamy, one with housebreaking, one with horse-stealing, one with assault with intent, &c., one with throwing a stone at a railway engine, one with embezzling, one with cheating at cards, and the rest with petty larcenies.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—Durham, March 2.—The learned judges on this circuit opened the courts at ten o'clock, Mr. Justice Cresswell trying the criminal calendar, and Mr. Baron Martin sitting in the civil court. There are thirty-four prisoners for trial, of whom one is charged with murder, one with manslaughter, ten with burglary, three with cutting and wounding, eight with assault and robbery, one with perjury, one with bigamy, one with concealment of birth, two with false pretences, and the rest with larceny. The cause list contains ten entries.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—York, March 9.—The business of the assize appears to be extremely light in both the criminal and civil courts. The calendar contains the names of sixty-eight prisoners, one of whom is charged with murder, four with manslaughter, six with rape, four with shooting at with intent to do some grievous bodily harm, nine with burglary, six with perjury, two with night poaching, two with sheep-stealing, twenty-two with assault and robbery, and the rest with different offences. The cause-list contains an entry for the West Riding of twenty-seven causes, seven of which are marked for special juries. The East and North Ridings list is not yet published.

NORFOLK CIRCUIT.—Huntingdon, March 8.—This morning, at eleven o'clock, Lord Campbell and the Chief Baron proceeded to deliver the gaol, there being no civil business. The calendar, too, was light, containing only nineteen prisoners, the principal charges being three cases of arson, one of felony, one of malicious injury to the person by throwing vitriol on a female, and one of abduction, all the rest being ordinary larcenies.

THE COURT OF CHANCERY.—The annual accounts respecting the Court of Chancery were printed on Tuesday, by order of Parliament. The payments on the Suitors' Fund, for the year ending Oct. 2, 1852, were 138,339*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.*: the stock was 3,83,556*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.* On the Suitors' Fee Fund account, in the year ending Nov. 24, the payments in salaries, compensations, &c. amounted to 132,951*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*; the fees, &c. were, in the year, 135,347*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; the excess of fees above the charges for the year ending Nov. 25, 1852, 3,255*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* The fees received in the several offices were considerable. In the Masters' offices the fees in the year were 35,816*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*; in the Registrar's offices 13,584*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*; in the Report office, 3,054*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.*; in the Affidavit office, 10,556*l.*; in the Examiner's offices, 700*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*; in the Subpœna office, 39*l.* 16*s.* The fees received by the taxing-masters were 29,654*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, and by the record and writ clerks, 13,869*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.* The fees paid into court during the period from Nov. 25, 1851, to Nov. 24, 1852, were 136,838*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*

ASSURANCE CHRONICLE.

EQUITY AND LAW LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting of this society was held at the offices, 26, Lincoln's-inn fields, on Friday the 11th inst., George Lake Russell, Esq. in the chair. It appeared by the report of the directors that 4817*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* had been received for new premiums on assurances in 1852; that the expenses of management had been diminished, while the losses by death were 2000*l.* below those of the preceding year, and less by upwards of 1600*l.* than the amount received for new premiums. The receipts for the year exceeded the charge by upwards of 17,000*l.*, and the investments had increased in the same period nearly 22,000*l.* The retiring directors and auditors were re-elected.

WILL FRIGHTEN, BUT NOT KILL.—CHINESE GONGS.—One Hundred powerful full-toned Chinese Gongs, just landed by Hewett and Co., the celebrated Chinese Merchants. One, for 4*s.* will effectually frighten a Thief; one, for 6*s.* will appal a Burglar; one, for 8*s.* will alarm the Country for Miles round.
To be had only at HEWETT and Co.'s, 16, Fenchurch-street, City; and at Baker-street Bazaar.

BERDOE'S VENTILATING WATERPROOF LIGHT OVER-COATS are the best, and perfectly unobjectionable protection, as they effectually resist any amount of rain WITHOUT CONFINING PERSPIRATION, the fatal objection to all other waterproofs—as too many have found to their cost, all air-tight materials being utterly unfit, and dangerous for clothing. They are thoroughly respectable, and adapted for general use at ALL times, equally as for RAINY weather. Price 42*s.*
W. BERDOE, 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill (only.)

ITALIAN SILK UMBRELLAS are superseding every other description for elegance and durability, are made on the premises under Mr. Chuck's immediate inspection, and the silk warranted superior to every other material. 18*s.* and 21*s.*—Golden Fords, 132, Oxford-street
N.B. Ladies' gilts, 6*s.*; alpaca, 8*s.*; gingham, 2*s.*; and carriage umbrellas, &c.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MELTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while its lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by R. BROWN, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the Ne Quidem Perfidus Polish for Dress Boots and Shoes, and Waterproof Varnish for Hunting Boots.
MANUFACTORY, 24, BROAD-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE
Patronised by the Court and Nobility, and to be had at all the principal shops throughout the kingdom.

MOAT'S PILLS, by Mr. Moat, Surgeon and Apothecary, No. 344, Strand, formerly with the late Mr. Morison, the Hygeist, the Recipe for whose Pills he held for sixteen years.—MOAT'S PILLS, the best family medicine, being the only preparation adapted for general use by a qualified practitioner; there is no adoption of any theory, real or pretended, neither is there any discrepancy in the profession implied by their use. Mr. Moat's position is a guarantee that he has avoided the errors which unqualified persons have fallen into when, looking only after profit, they have retired out of their callings. Mr. Moat can refer to hundreds of respectable London tradespeople who use and recommend Moat's Pills as their family medicine. A box of pills sent by post for sixteen postage stamps. Foreign houses deal with an easy liberal terms. Directions for use with each box in English, French, German, Welsh, Spanish, or Dutch.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE
COMPANY. Empowered by special Act of Parliament.
Offices, 3, Old Broad-street, London.

Insurances against railway accidents can now be effected with this Company not only for single and double journeys, and by the year, as heretofore, but also for terms of years and for life, as follows:—

To insure 1,000l. for a term of five years, premium £3 10 0
" " ten " 6 0 0

To insure 1,000l. for the whole of life, by annual premiums on the following decreasing scale:—

For the first five years, annual premium			£1 0 0
" next five	"	"	0 15 0
" next five	"	"	0 10 0
" remainder of life	"	"	0 5 0

To insure 100l. for the whole term of life, by single payment, according to age, viz.:—

Above 20,	under 25,	£1	1	0	Above 45, under 50,	£0	16	6
" 25,	" 30,	1	0	6	" 50, " 55,	0	15	0
" 30,	" 35,	1	0	0	" 55, " 60,	0	13	6
" 35,	" 40,	0	19	0	" 60,	0	12	0
" 40,	" 45,	0	16	0

The above premiums include the stamp duty, which is payable to Government by the Company.

The total amount insured by any of the above modes will be paid in case of death by railway accident while travelling in any class carriage on a railway in the kingdom, and proportionate compensation in the event of personal injury.

WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

PILLS.

DR. KING'S TRUE SARSAPARILLA
PILLS, for purifying the blood, scurvy, and all low states of system, skin diseases, nervous complaints, gout, rheumatic gout, weak nerves, loss of appetite, stomachic and liver complaints, nervous head and face ache, sore legs, and general debility. They are invaluable to the military, naval, and commercial man, and tourist, not only on account of their virtues, but their portability. Their advantages over any liquid preparation are manifold; lstly, Because no solution of Sarsaparilla, however carefully prepared, can resist an inherent fermentation, which it will, and does undergo, rendering it entirely useless; 2ndly, "Two Pills contain as much Pure Sarsaparilla as a Tablespoonful of the Strongest Essence, and more to be depended upon;" 3rdly, They have been prescribed in an extensive practice for nearly sixty-seven years, and their virtues well tested. They are beneficial for both sexes, and will keep in any climate. A 2s. 9d. box is equal to a 10s. bottle of sarsaparilla. Sold by most respectable medicine vendors in the Kingdom, and by the sole Proprietor HENRY RIDES, 10, Hungerford-street, Strand, in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s 6d., 11s. and 22s. A considerable saving is effected by taking the larger boxes; hence, a 2s. 9d. contains three 1s. 1½d. boxes, a 4s. 6d. contains seven, and so on increasing.

DR. KING'S GOUT PILLS.—Gout relieved in a very short time and really cured by a newly-discovered principle in "SARSAPARILLA." The Proprietor of Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, upon finding so many severe and chronic cases of Gout and Rheumatic Gout truly cured by "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," determined upon mixing a very old and well-tried Gout Pill, which Dr. King prescribed for nearly sixty-seven years, with the said "Dr. King's Sarsaparilla Pills," for the cure of gout and rheumatism and all cases of a rheumatic character, such as tic-doloureux, face-ache, lumbago, and pains in the limbs and joints; and the benefit from such a combination of these two prescriptions has been really wonderful. Dr. King's Gout Pills may be taken without the slightest fear of injuring the system. They are free from opium and mercury, and consist chiefly of pure Sarsaparilla.

N.B.—Their mode of action is by really purifying the fluids of the body, and causing the poison of gout to be driven off from the system, and by violent purging, but by a gentle increase of the secretion of the kidneys.

Sold in boxes at the same price as Dr. King's True Sarsaparilla Pills, by most respectable vendors in the United Kingdom, and by the Sole Proprietor, HENRY RIDES, Hungerford-street, Strand. Neither of the Pills are genuine without the proprietor's name (in full) upon the stamp, to imitate which is libel.

Boxes sent by post by inclosing postage stamps for the amount of box required.

POLICIES IN THIS OFFICE ARE INDISPUTABLE, EXCEPT IN CASES OF FRAUD.

"Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which remain in force although the Life assured may go to any part of the World.

Policies do not become void by the Life assured going beyond the prescribed limits,—so far as regards the interest of Third Parties,—provided they pay the additional Premium, so soon as the fact comes to their knowledge.

Parties Assuring within Six Months of their last Birthday are allowed a proportionate diminution in the Premium.

The Tables are especially favourable to young and middle-aged Lives, and the Limits allowed to the Assured, without extra charge, are unusually extensive.

Eighty per cent. of the Profits are divided at the end of every Five years among the Assured. At the first Division, to the end of 1849, the addition to the amount assured averaged above 50 per cent. on the Premiums paid.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849,

(in continuation of the Series of "Practical Statutes.") The design of this work is to give all the statutes and parts of statutes of any practical utility, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction, thus presenting the very law, as it is—the words of the statute with the construction put upon them by the Judges. It omits all Scotch, Irish, Colonial, Expired, and Repealed Statutes, so that the whole law is contained in a small compact volume, that may be conveniently carried in the bag or pocket. Edited by C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. The following are the statutes contained in this volume, with Notes of all the Cases decided on them.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

PRIVATE BILLS.

TUESDAY, March 15.— On the motion of Lord REDESDALE, it was ordered "that this House will receive petitions for private Bills on the first sitting day after the recess at Easter, provided such petitions be lodged at the Private Bill-office on or before Monday, the 21st March, to which time the reception of such petitions was limited for the present session by the order of the 7th Dec. last.

OFFENCES AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Lord ST. LEONARDS observed, that he had on a former occasion, when moving the second reading of one of the Bills he had laid before their lordships for the amendment of the law, expressed his anxiety to prevent and punish the commission of offences and assaults by husbands against wives, and against children of tender years by adults; but he was very happy to see that a Bill had been introduced in another place to confer greater powers on magistrates and courts of justice for the punishment of such offences; and he hoped some steps would be made by the exercise of those powers of summary convi tion and of indictment, to put an end to a class outrages which certainly were a disgrace to country.

ATTORNEYS AS EXAMINERS.

On the order of the day being read for going committee on this Bill, the LORD CHANCELL served, that he had received a petition fr Metropolitan and Provincial Law Associati reference to one of the clauses of this Bill required that the examiners should be appoi the class of barristers. The petitioners all this was a grievance to them, as solicitors eligible to the office; but he wished to subject had been very carefully considered place, and that it would have been i make any other regulation, unless Par adopted a principle different from th been acted upon in all analogous cases. the examiners were now so extensive be impossible to obtain fit persons to from any other class than that of b solicitors were mistaken if they su slur was intended to be cast upon. The Bill then went through committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

AMENDMENT OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

FRIDAY, March 11.—In reply to a complaint from Sir GEORGE PECHELL, that the wishes of the inhabitants of towns were not sufficiently attended to by the Board of Health in bringing the Health of Towns Act into operation, Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH stated that the subject is under the serious consideration of the Government; and that it is their intention to amend the constitution of the board, and to make certain alterations in the Act itself. He hoped before long to bring in a measure on the subject that would give satisfaction to the public.

THE ATTORNEYS' CERTIFICATE BILL.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16.—Lord R. GROSVENOR said he had discovered an error in the bill which he introduced the other day for the repeal of the duty on attorneys' certificates. It was, therefore, necessary for him to ask permission—which the House never refused under similar circumstances—to introduce a new bill. He moved that the order of the day for the second reading of the bill be discharged.—The motion was agreed to.——Lord R. GROSVENOR then rose to move for leave to bring in the new bill; when The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER rose suddenly, amid considerable laughter, to object.——Lord R. GROSVENOR.—Surely, the right hon. gentleman will not take advantage of me.——The SPEAKER said the motion could not be made without notice, if any member of the House objected to it.——The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER had no intention to take advantage of the noble lord, but he thought that a bill relating to taxation ought not to be introduced without notice.——The SPEAKER.—It was a bill for taking off a tax, and might be introduced with the consent of the House. At the same time it could not be done without notice if one member objected.——Lord R. GROSVENOR.—No one could object.——The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER. — There is one member of the House, at least, whose duty it is to see that all proceedings relative to the taking off of taxes should be conducted with as much regularity as those which refer to laying them on. I must request the noble lord to give notice of his motion, but I will offer no opposition to it. [The bill has since been brought in.]

LAW OF PARTNERSHIP.

THURSDAY, March 17.—Mr. EWART begged to ask the President of the Board of Trade, whether it is intended that the inquiries of the commission on the law of partnership shall extend to the practicability of assimilating the laws of the whole United Kingdom on that important subject.—Mr. CARDWELL said it was intended that the inquiry should extend to the different laws on the subject of partnership which existed in other parts of the United Kingdom.

THE CODIFICATION OF THE STATUTE LAW.

Mr. V. SCULLY asked the Attorney-General whether the codification of the statute laws, proposed to be made by the present Government, under the superintendence of the Lord Chancellor of England, will embrace the statute laws of Ireland and Scotland as well as of England: and whether it is intended that the Lord Chancellor of Ireland and the Lord Advocate of Scotland, and members of the Irish and Scottish Bars, as well as of the English Bar, shall assist in conducting such codification.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL replied that the scheme of the Lord Chancellor did comprehend the consolidating of the Acts relating to Ireland and Scotland. The present arrangements were of a preparatory and provisional character, and no member of the Irish or Scotch Bars had yet been called in to assist; but eventually it was part of the scheme of the Lord Chancellor to call in such aid.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE CIRCUITS.

HOME.—Lewes, March 15.—The commission for the county of Sussex was opened here on Monday, and to-day both courts proceeded to business. Mr. Baron Alderson presided in the Crown Court, and Mr. Justice Coleridge on the civil side. The cause list is very meagre, only five common jury cases being set down for trial. The gaol calendar is heavier numerically, and also with regard to the quality of the offences, than is usual at the Spring Assizes.

NORFOLK.—Cambridge, March 10.—On the civil side there is an entry of seven causes, one of which only is marked for trial by a special jury. The calendar contains the names of nineteen prisoners, and embraces—one case of felony, three of arson, three of wounding, one of robbery, one of burglary, one of embezzlement, two of bigamy, one of forgery, one of concealment of birth, one of false pretences, and one charge of larceny.

NORFOLK.—Norwich, March 15. — The learned judges of assize arrived in the city of Norwich yesterday afternoon by train from Cambridge, and, having opened the commission for the county and city, attended divine service at the cathedral. The entry of causes is an average one, the two lists comprising ten common jury and two special jury causes. The calendar for the city contains fourteen prisoners, and that for the county fifty-one prisoners.

NORTHERN.—York, March 10.—To-day the North and East Riding cause list was published, and it contains an entry of eighteen causes, six of which are marked for special juries. This is an unusually large list for these ridings, and slightly compensates the bar for the West Riding list, which is miserable both in the number and character of the causes.

MIDLAND.—Leicester, March 12.—The commissions for the county and borough of Leicester were opened this afternoon before the Lord Chief Justice Jervis. The county calendar contains the names of twenty-three prisoners. The charges include one case of manslaughter, two cases of cutting and wounding, two of administering drugs with intent to procure abortion, one of an unnatural offence, one of bigamy, one of libel, one of perjury, one of forgery, one of arson, two of burglary, and one of night-poaching.

OXFORD.—Stafford, March 12.—The commission of assize for this county was opened on Saturday. The calendar contains the names of 102 prisoners, five of whom are charged with murder. One case is that of child murder, and another is the tragical event which took place in October last, at the Ash Flates, near Stafford, where an aged couple, of the name of Blackburn, were cruelly murdered, and their bodies subsequently burned. The other cases in the calendar are principally of a very serious nature.

WESTERN.—Dorchester, March 12.—The commission for holding the assizes for the county of Dorset was opened here on Thursday afternoon by Mr. Justice Crompton. Although the magistrates held an adjourned sessions last week, there were seventeen prisoners for trial, but there was no case of a serious nature. The cause list contained three cases.

WESTERN. — Winchester, Feb. 28. — This circuit commenced on Saturday, when the commission was opened in this city by Mr. Justice Erle and Mr. Justice Crompton. The criminal business is very heavy, there being about 120 prisoners for trial; three prisoners are charged with murder, thirteen with cutting and wounding, ten with robbery, five with burglary, and four with rape. One man is charged with stealing gold on board the Lady Flora on her voyage from Melbourne. The cause list is very light, there being only seven causes, but one of them is an action against a clergyman for a libel.

WESTERN, Exeter, March 14.—The commission for holding the assizes for the county of Devon was opened in this city on Saturday evening by Mr. Justice Crompton. Yesterday both the judges attended divine service at the cathedral, and this morning the business of the assizes commenced, Mr. Justice Erle sitting at Nisi Prius, and Mr. Justice Crompton presiding in the Crown Court. The cause list contained only eight cases, three of which are to be tried by special juries. The calendar is extremely heavy, there being fifty-four prisoners for trial, most of whom are charged with very serious offences. There are four charges of murder, several cases of arson, attempts to murder, and other serious outrages.

"Messrs. Thos Milner and Son.

"Gentlemen, At the destructive fire in Haydon-square, on the 16th instant, in which our entire stock of oils, turpentine, smalage, canvas, &c. was destroyed, the Books and Papers in our Milner's Safe were preserved unsinged. The Safe was only dug out of the ruins this evening, and, from the severe heat it had undergone, we expected everything within it to be consumed.

"We have great pleasure in testifying to the utility of your Safes, and in strongly recommending them to the public, and will thank you to send us another of the same size.

"We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"COBBO and POTTER."

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any tee th ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

57, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

CAUTION.—To Tradesmen, Merchants, Shippers, Omnibus &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article, under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK. This is to give notice, that I am the original and sole Proprietor and Manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorize any person to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. This caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public, and secure them from imposition.

E. H. BOND, Sole Executrix and Widow of the late JOHN BOND
28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of hernia. The use of a steel spring (so often hurtful in its effects) is entirely avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the Moc-Main Pad and Patent Lever, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be displaced, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

An Umbilical Truss on the same principle.

Every description of Bathing Belts, Elastic Stockings, Spinal Corsets, Supporters and Suspenders, on new and approved principles, with every kind of Surgical Bandages.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—A CERTAIN REMEDY for disorders of the pulmonary organs—in difficulty of breathing—a redundancy of phlegm—in incipient consumption (of which cough is the most positive indication) they are of unerring efficacy. In asthma, and in winter cough, they have never been known to fail.

Prepared and sold in boxes, 1s. 1½d., and tins, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., No. 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the Kingdom.

IMPORTANT TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

"St. Paul's Cathedral, 30th Nov., 1849.

"Sir,—I have much pleasure in recommending your Lozenges to those who may be distressed with hoarseness. They have afforded me relief on several occasions when scarcely able to sing from the effects of catarrh. I think they would be very useful to clergymen, barristers, and public orators.

"I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

"To Mr. Keating." "THOMAS FRANCIS, Vicar-General."

Now ready,

THE SECOND EDITION of the COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with Practical Notes, illustrated by Precedents of Pleadings and Forms of Affidavits, Notices, &c. By ROBERT MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 14s. 6d. cloth.

"We have now carefully examined all the editions of this important statute, and we are bound to give the palm to Mr. Kerr. This second edition is a proof of his success and the truth of our judgment."—Law Magazine, February, 1853.

NOTICES OF THE FIRST EDITION.

"In the introductory chapters to this work, Mr. Kerr gives, 1st, a summary of the changes effected by the Act; 2nd, an elementary view of an action at law under the New Procedure; and 3rd, an outline of the action of ejectment. This review of the scope and effect of the Act is very ably written, and will be found of much assistance to the practitioner in carrying the various provisions of the Act into effect."—Legal Observer.

"Mr. Kerr's is the best edition we have yet seen of the Act, for a correct view of its practical effect and intent."—Law Magazine (November, 1852).

"Mr. Kerr, in a volume which we can heartily commend, prefaces the Act with a clear and able introduction, and prints it with practical notes between its clauses."—Examiner.

To this edition has been added a SUPPLEMENT, containing—

1. The NEW RULES of PRACTICE, of Hilary Term, 1853, with Notes and References.

2. The NEW RULES (also of Hilary Term) relative to the EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, and RE-ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS.

3. The NEW DIRECTIONS to the TAXING-MASTERS, and the NEW SCALE of COSTS, also of Hilary Term, 1853.
